From Mrs. Gus Adkerson, Connersville, Ind.: I remember a little one-room store at Frankfort, Indiana. Half of the counter was enclosed with screen wire to keep hands out of the candy. A kerosene barrel with a hand pump took up part of the little space in front of the counter. If we made the mistake of asking for the oil before we asked for bread we got a good scolding from the storekeeper because she had to wash her hands before wrapping bread.

From Mrs. M. E. Herring, Canton, Mississippi: I remember one of the old-fashioned remedies used to cure chills and fever. It was called a bitter cup. The cup was in the shape of an hourglass and was yellow, either made of yellow wood or yellow from medication. The cup was filled with water and after it had set for three or four hours was ready to drink. The dose was repeated every three or four hours. There never was such a bitter dose.

Mrs. C. D. Hale, Mart, Texas: I remember when we put table salt in our oil lamps to make a brighter light.

Question On Amount Of Fertilizer To Use Discussed

Auburn, Ala.—What is your fertilizer program for 1953?

This question is one that comes up every year about this time or later. And it's a mighty important one because Alabama farmers invest more money in fertilizer than in any other single item in crop production.

We know we must feed our plants the right nutrients if we are to get good yields. But often it is a temptation to cut down on fertilizers in the hope of saving some money. But usually you will lose money at harvest time if you don't do a good job of fertilizing.

What kind and amount of fertilizer to use? The API Experiment Station has run thousands of tests over more than half a century. Based on this research, fertilizer recommendations have been made for most crops. Your county agent has these recommendations.

But along with use of right kinds and amounts of fertilizers, it is necessary to use certain good practices to get the most out of the fertilizer.

Some of the good practices that go along with good fertilization are good soil preparation, use of superior varities tested by the Experiment Station, planting on time, use of treated seed, getting and holding a good stand, cultivating often enough to control weeds, and coptrolling insects.

If two glass tumblers stick together, set the bottom one in warm water and pour cold water in the top one, thus expanding one and contracting the other.

A scrapbag made of wide-mesh material makes it possible to find scraps of fabric without emptying the contents of the bag.

Farmers Count On Bees For Higher Seed Yields

A report issued here this week told of how bees are increasing yields of many clover seed crops by as much as 50 per cent per acre. One or two strong colonies in an acre of good crimson clover can insure proper pollination of flowers and thus push yields from 400 lbs. of seed to as high as 800 pounds.

Last year Alabama farmers rented or otherwise secured the use of 31,621 colonies of bees to pollinate their clovers.

To free metal articles of rust, dip them in pure cider vinegar and then let them dry for a few days.

JAN'S WAY OUT

By R. G. Crocker

JAN was depressed. There seemed no way out. Uncle Andrew had arrived again! As she expressed it to George, "He's a good enough traveling salesman; the only trouble is he doesn't travel enough!"

Uncle Andrew was somewhat of a drifter. He made a fair living selling, but was always dropping in on one relative or the other. He was a problem to "get on the road" again. He was fortyish and a bachelor. When Uncle Andrew descended on a household; there was little anyone could do but listen to his loud jokes and comments.

Jan set the clothesbasket down with a bang, and eyed the bulldog across the fence. It eyed her. "Ugly brute," Jan said. Bozo gave a low growl. Jan growled back. As Jan often told George, they had a "growling acquaintance," which Jan wouldn't admit was half affectionate. They understood each other. Thank goodness, Jan thought, Bozo wasn't one of those dogs that's forever underfoot to be petted, though he liked it well enough at times.

Looking at the dog, Jan had an inspiration. With Jan, to think was to act. She was through the fence in a minute, stopped to pat Bozo while saying disdainfully: "At least, I can growl at YOU without worrying about hurt feelings!"

Mrs. Browning would never be a close friend; but Jan did have a lot of respect for her. "Just like her dog," Jan thought unkindly. "They're both a lot better than they look!" The widow was short and stocky. Her coarse brown hair was frizzed in a permanent, lipstick usually smeared, rouge dabbed on each cheek.

Jan asked the widow over for lunch. Playing the role to the hilt, she told her about Uncle Andrew who was visiting, describing him as eccentric but a rather wealthy salesman, who was always jolly and full of fun. While she talked, she couldn't help thinking how much better the widow would look if she'd do something about the faint line of mustache that had developed on her face.

Lunch was all that Jan had anticipated. The widow was dabbed more colorfully with rouge than usual, and hung on Andrew's every word, roaring with laughter.

"Isn't he a scream?" she asked every few minutes. Lunch over, the widow bluntly stated it was a nice afternoon for a drive, and Jan almost felt sorry for Uncle Andrew as she dragged him away.

"What's the idea?" George asked, when they were out the door.

Jan laughed. "I don't think Uncle Andrew will stay around too long, with the widow chasing him!"

The next few days Jan and George watched from the sidelines. The widow camped on their doorstep. Uncle Andrew would hardly have time to sit down before the widow came in and swarmed over him. They didn't make a bad couple, George commented. But Jan couldn't see Andrew standing for much of the widow, after all the younger girls he dated. The hectic week passed. Saturday morning George drove Jan to the store for groceries, and when they returned, Uncle Andrew was gone. Not only Uncle Andrew, but his clothes. Jan heaved a sigh for relief.

"I guess Uncle Andrew's visit is over for this time," she said. "I'd have hated having him around for the next three months or so."

"You can say that again," George said. "I guess even Uncle Andrew can't take our widow. She is overwhelming!"

"I haven't seen her today," Jan said idly, "But I guess she's shopping, or visiting some relatives."

"And how," Jan said, dazed. Limply, she handed George the telegram. George read:

"ON HONEYMOON WITH WIDOW. TIME I SETTLED DOWN AND SOLD REAL ESTATE. BACK IN THREE WEEKS. WILL BE YOUR NEW NEIGHBOR. PLEASE FEED DOG—Uncle Andrew."

a peek at THE STARS

By LYN CONNELLY

PSYCHIATRISTS are having a look at "Tarzan" . . . It's not that they believe the bronzed jungle lord to be just an ape with delusions of grandeur . . . What interests them is the tremendous impact of Edgar Rice Burroughs' creation on adults and children alike in his CBS Radio series as well as in books, motion pictures and comic strips . . . One doctor analyzes Tarzan's appeal as an avenue of escape for average city dwellers, providing them with thrills and adventures beyond their reach . . . "In imagination," says the doctor, "they swing with Tarzan from tree to tree, unburdened by union suits, tax returns or troubles with the boss."

"Tarzan typifies the spirit that makes men go camping," says another doctor . . . "He is above and beyond telephones, plumbing and paychecks" . . . The Tarzan stories do have appeal, whatever the source . . . The success of the CBS radio show is just one indication . . There have been 55 Tarzan novels since the first was published in 1914, 27 motion pictures, comic strips in 150 American newspapers, and comic books by the million . . . Candy, chewing gum, bread and even two post offices (Tarzan, Tex. and Tarzana, Cal.) have been named for the jungle hero.

PLATTER CHATTER

Tennessee Ernie gives his own inimitable interpretation to a new song that is heading for the top, "I Don't Know" . . . Back has "Sweet Temptation" . . . "Don't Believe a Word They Say" sounds good as done by Bob Eberly and he does an excellent job on the flip side with the novelty, "Rosie!" Lizzie Miles revives that oldie, "A Good Man is Hard to Find" in fine fashion . . Back has "Salty Dog" and both sides were recorded in the New Orleans' Vieux Carre.

Jane Froman scores with a beautiful new ballad, "Ghost of a Rose" . . . Backside has an inspirational type song that Jane does so well, "I Believe" . . Maggie Whiting continues to turn out fine discs with two new and different songs —"Singing Bells" and "Take Care, My Love."

Self Feeders for Pigs

Numerous experiments have proven that fattening pigs gain more on less feed when self feeders are used than when the pigs are hand fed. Fattening pigs have the amazing ability to balance their own rations when the right feeds are put before them.

Sod Waterways

Sod waterways are good places to produce grazing, hay, and seed, in addition to carrying run-off water safely off the land. Farmers over the State report that their sod waterways produce more beef and milk per acre than any other area of similar size on the farm.

One difference between Natural Chilean Nitrate and other nitrogen fertilizers is quality — natural quality. It is the world's only natural source of nitrate nitrogen.

The nitrogen content of Chilean Nitrate is 100% nitrate nitrogen — 100% available — 100% fast-acting — 100% dependable.

No antidote is necessary. Chilean Nitrate is non-acid-forming.

Rich in sodium and minor elements. Chilean Nitrate is rich in beneficial sodium that makes a stronger, deeper root system — improves crop health, vigor and nutritive value. It also contains small quantities of essential minor elements.

Noted for all-round efficiency. Quick-acting 100% nitrate nitrogen makes rapid, sturdy growth. Its 26% sodium content acts like potash when necessary and helps to increase the supply of available phosphate in the soil.

Chilean Nitrate's free flowing pellets guarantee rapid, accurate distribution under all conditions. No special precautions needed.

Helps maintain productivity of your land. When used consistently in a sound farming program, Chilean Nitrate builds up fertility, increases efficiency.

Year after year. Natural Chilean Nitrate increases yields — improves quality — defends against disease — fortifies against insect injury — counteracts soil acidity. Use Chilean Nitrate for solid satisfaction!

THOUGHTFUL BURGLARS

Wilton, Cal. — Returning from church services, David Mann, Jr., found his house in a mess, particularly the kitchen, which held the residue of lunches and some coffee grounds. The intruders, whoever they were, brought their own food and borrowed only some coffee from Mann.

GIRL, 12, HAS TWINS

Russellville, Ky. — Mrs. Myrtle Brummett, who is only years of age, recently gave birth to twin sons, each of which tipped the scales at a little more than four pounds. Mrs. Brummett's husband, William, 22, stationed at an army post in Maryland, managed to get home just shortly before the birth of his sons.

Buffalo, N. Y. — Dick Cook, 52, of Gainesville, Fla., hiked 11,700 miles, through 44 states, at about 20 to 25 miles a day, to visit Niagara Falls. Pulling a 450-pound red wagon, he left his home on April 1st, 1951, and arrived in Buffalo on April 7, 1953. However, he says he didn't travel all the time—when he came across friendly people, he just sat around and talked for a spell.

SUNDAY'S SERMON

Rev. Robert H. Harper

Building the Church at Ephesus.
Lesson for May 3: Acts 19: 8-10; 20: 17-27.
Golden Text: 1 Corinthians 3: 11.

In Ephesus, where Paul labored for more than two years, he spoke at first in the synagogue. But, after three months, "hardened and disobedient" ones opposing him, he moved to the school of Tyrannus, where he spoke daily for two years.

As Paul was later on his way to Jerusalem, between ships at Miletus, he sent for the elders of the church in Ephesus that he might have fellowship with them and strengthen their faith. From his conversation with them we learn much concerning his manner of life as a minister of the gospel and of his utter consecration to the work. He had testified both to Jews and Greeks alike and called them to repentance toward God and to faith in Christ.

The Holy Spirit testified unto him and supported him in every city to which he went. He had suffered much for Christ. But he did not hold his life dear unto himself in his labors to accomplish his course and the ministry to which Christ had called him.

Paul lingered with his friends as long as he could because he felt that they would see his face no more. Bound for Jerusalem, he did not know what would befall him along the way or in the city. Great was his consecration to a great task and we would do well to emulate his allegiance to his Lord.

Folks and Things ABOUT TOWN

—By Ben

Habit is a funny thing and often gets us in an embarrassing position. The other day a local attorney called Horsley White, our new Circuit Clerk, on the telephone. Horsley answered: "Bus Station."

There was really a nice crowd at the Methodist Men's Fellowship Club Tuesday night. Some seventy plates were served. John Sellers had planned the program with a group of 4-H Club members and it was very entertaining. He does a wonderful work with those kids.

See in the Teamster where they want to know who runs down the most people—careless drivers or gossips.

And another about a lady who went to her druggist. She had seen some medicine advertised where it said it was good for man or beast. She told the druggist it was about the right combination for her husband, give her a bottle.

Joe Campbell, the other morning, had tried over and over to get a telephone number with no results. Each time he called the line was busy. In the meantime his good wife called him to the breakfast table, where Joe bowed his head to return thanks and promptly asked for the telephone number he had been calling.

A visitor from the North had gone to Florida to get a load of sunshine and was standing on the beach getting ready for a swim when he saw a small colored boy sitting on the beach. Are there any alligators around here he asked the boy. "No sir, there ain't no alligators in there," the boy answered. So the visitor dived in the water. When he came up he noticed the boy still sitting there so to make conversation he said: "They told me up North that these waters were infested with alligators." "Not around here they ain't," the native replied, "sharks scare 'em all away."

4-H Boys And Girls Receive Certificates At Rally Today

One of the highlights of the County 4-H Rally Friday (today), May 1st, will be the presentation of certificates and awards to boys and girls who have completed projects and done outstanding Club work during the past year. FOLMAR ADVISES ON SOCIAL SECURITY PAYMENTS

A year and a half of work that counts toward social security provides monthly benefits only in case the worker reaches 65 or dies before July, 1954, M. C. Folmar, manager of the Birmingham social security office, pointed out today.

Mr. Folmar says that some people have been led to believe that a year and a half of covered work are all that anyone needs to get benefit payments under social security. He emphasized that the length of time one must work to become insured is determined by the worker's date of birth.

"To become insured and stay insured," Mr. Folmar declared, "the person must continue in work covered by the law at least one out of every two years after 1950 (or after reaching age 21) and up to the time of retirement or death." Or, as he explained, the person must have social security credit for enough covered employment before 1951 to make up the difference. Social security credit for work before 1951 may be added to credits gained in covered employment or self-employment after 1950 to give the worker the required amount.

Mr. Folmar says another widespread misunderstanding is the meaning of the average monthly earnings on which social security benefit payments are based. "Some people," he says, "believe that their average earnings are determined by using only the years in which they were engaged in work covered by the law." He says that all years after 1950, from age 21 to age 65, are counted in arriving at the monthly average. Periods of non-employment, or early retirement from self-employment will cut down the amount of the average monthly earnings and may cause old-age and survivors benefit payments to be less than the insured worker or his dependent family expected, if they have not informed themselves.

NEW MEDICAL DISCOVERIES

Small steps forward in the fight against cancer and leukemia have been announced this month. The discovery of the first drug which stopped the speedy and usually fatal black cancer, Melanoma, was announced the day after the first news of a new pill which stops leukemia temporarily, but not permanently.

The drug which stops Melanoma, also works only for a time but it has banished this dreaded form of cancer for as long as a year in one patient. Up to the present, no other drug or treatment (other than surgery) has had much effect on Melanoma. The new drug is nicknamed TEPA.

The pill which checks leukemia, temporarily, is nicknamed M.P. M.P. is not the first drug which checks leukemia, but it is one which prolongs the lives of victims when the other drugs have been used to the limit of their powers. M.P. has been used on a number of children with acute, or fast-acting leukemia, and temporarily knocked out the disease in some, substantially improved others. The good effects lasted only one to six months, when the disease reoccurred as the patients became resistant to the drug.

The fight against cancer, and several other grim reapers, is continuing daily, although an answer to these dreaded diseases is yet to be found by medical science. The discovery of each new drug, even though it helps only temporarily, gives new hope that soon the answer to many of our most deadly diseases will be found.

It is sometimes discouraging to realize that even with our super-modern civilization of mechanical robots, jet planes and atom-bombs, we still cannot save the life of a little child afflicted with a disease which has been known to man for centuries.

INFLATION IN THE WIFE-MARKET

A recent news dispatch revealed that the cost of brides in the Southern Sudan had risen from twenty spears to fifty spears. It also revealed that in Nigeria there was a move to stabilize the price of wives at a maximum of something under $100.

Already in Uganda, it is against the law for parents to set a price above five head of cattle, five goats and $2.80 for their daughters. Evidently, the authorities in Uganda do not want to see the business of wife-selling degenerate into a racket, and, after all, five head of cattle, five goats and the $2.80 should bring something.

Apparently, the natives in the areas mentioned do not want to see an inflationary spiral in their lands like that which has affected the bride-selling profession in New Guinea. There brides have been selling for several thousand dollars recently.

We are not in favor of inaugurating this system in the United States at this time for several reasons. Not the least is the danger that too many husbands would flood the market in an effort to realize a profit on his old model, with which he might make a down payment on a newer model. Another danger would be the likelihood of countless disputes arising over the appraised price of various wives.

Rather than become involved in all this, we suggest that the U. S. system be retained a while longer and that fathers and husbands continue to be prevented from selling their brides—even for five head of cattle, five goats and $2.80.

FIN-FAN ITEMS

By— R. L. SCOTT

Spring fishing on the Coosa-Talladega Lakes has not reached its climax because of unseasonal weather. Usually, by this time of year, Crappie are running the banks and it's an easy matter to creel the limit in short order. Largemouth Bass and Stripes are not as active as they should be for this season. Perhaps, Mother Nature has her reasons for checking the angler's heavy take of the finny tribes on various occasions, and it's probably good for future fishing prospects that she does so. It's bound to be rough on all sport species to have the females caught before they have a chance to spawn or to catch the guardian male from a nest of young fingerlings.

Nevertheless, when fishing is reported as only fair on these fertile Central Alabama waters, chances are that you will have better luck than expected.

Last week's Whoppers entered in the Alabama Power Company Fishing Contest show good catches on a fair report from all Lakes.

Lake Martin—

Fred Wilder, Southside Standard Service Station, Dadeville, reports: Luther Fuller, Route 1, LaFayette, used worms as bait on a fly rod and boated a nice string of Sheelcrackers. The location of the catch was on the stained waters of Blue Creek and his largest was 13 ounces.

Lake Lay—

B. J. Phillip's Paint and Tackle Shop, Sylacauga, reports: Andy Matchan, Matchan's Barber Shop, Sylacauga, tried his favorite fishing spot, Paint Creek, with his spinning outfit and cleaned house. Andy can catch 'em if they are there and he never fails to bring home a nice string on each visit. Twice last week he brought in strings of Smallmouth Bass, the largest of the first day's fishing was 4 pounds and the second day's largest catch was 4 pounds and 2 ounces.

Jack Story's Hardware, Wilsonville, reports: Bobby Boyles, Wilsonville, had good luck with a Bass Master fishing the Shoals near Smith's Camp. Bobby hooked eight Smallmouth Bass that weighed 14 pounds, the largest was 3 pounds, 12 ounces. Harold Hill, Montgomery, caught the limit on Smallmouth Bass, total weight of string was 16 pounds. W. E. Stone, Harpersville, fished Spring Creek and took home the limit on Crappie.

H. C. Leigh's Fishing Camp, Waxahatachee Creek, near Shelby, reports: J. A. Huneycutt, 1708-2nd Court West, Birmingham, had friends to visit his cabin at Leigh's Camp expecting a fish dinner, but the weather was too rough for boat fishing so the party had to fish from the bank. The party of nine caught everything but the kitchen sink. They had a big fish dinner, also took 15 Bream, 1 Catfish and 1 Rock Bass home. The moral of this story is: Don't give up just because the wind is blowing and the water is high and well stained.

Lake Mitchell—

A. I. Powell, River Road Store, Higgin's Ferry Road, reports: J. Lee Smith, Clanton, boated a 2-pound Crappie near the Scout Camp.

J. O. Miller's Novelty Store, Clanton, reports. Mrs. K. A. Hardy, Clanton, fished Walnut Creek with her brother, Buck Bice, and together strung 12 large Crappies, the best weighed 1 pound; 13 ounces.

G. H. Kelly's Cross Roads Store, near Rockford, reports: Charles Bowen, Tallassee, entered his largest Crappie catch which weighed in at 2 pounds, 7 ounces. Weogufka Creek was the place and live minnows was the bait used.

Traywick's Fishing Camp, Yellow Leaf Creek, near Clanton, reports: Street, Birmingham, used a River Runt to hook 7 nice Smallmouth Bass, his largest was 4 pounds even.

Raymond Wyatt's Fishing Camp, Walnut Creek, near Clanton, reports: Mrs. Clara Ward, Clanton, used live minnows to catch her string of Smallmouth Bass, they averaged about 2 pounds each.

Lake Jordan—

Mrs. C. F. Stearns, Manager, Blackwell's Fishing Lodge, Shoals Creek, near Holtville, reports: Young W. C. "Buddy" Wilson, III, age 7 years, 34 Southcourt, Montgomery, boated a 1 pound, 8 ounce Crappie before the grown-ups even wet a hook. Buddy's dad relates: "We were only about two minutes out of Blackwell's, no one except Buddy, had time to get their fishing gear into the water. My son, however, had his fishing rod and reel in his hand from the time we left Montgomery, therefore, he was the first to start trolling. When his line had been in the water less than three minutes, he shouts, "Mother, I think there is something on my line." Mother's reply only explained the, the motion of the boat and the drag that the lure would have in the water. The motor was not stopped until we saw that our seven year old son had pulled in a "Whopper Catch" within three feet of the boat."—What about that?

Gore's Fishing Camp, near Rockford Ferry, reports: S. H. Dungan, Clanton, caught a 2 pound, 8 ounce Stripe with a Buck's Fluffy Tail, G. W. Bryant, Clanton, also used a Fluffy Tail and his best catch was a 2 pound, 9 ounce Smallmouth Bass.

WAS HIS FACE RED?

Tulsa, Okla. — En route home to Detroit, Mich., Nich Shoner left his automobile while it was being gassed during an early morning stop at nearby Sapulpa. Asleep in the back seat was his mother-in-law, Mrs. Julia Bodner, 85. The car ready, Shoner resumed his journey and, ninety miles later, decided to stop for coffee. When he turned to awaken Mrs. Bodney, she was not there. She, too, had left the car at Sapulpa and returned in time to see Shoner drive off.

OWN COAT SOLD

Pasadena, Calif. — Mrs. Bernice Leonard went to a rummage sale and seeing a need for additional help, she took off her $60 coat, placed it on a rack and helped serve the bargain hunters. When the sale was over, she couldn't find the coat and reported it stolen. Police surmised that an eager bargain hunter and an over-zealous saleslady had made a mistake.

NOT ENOUGH X's

Chicago, Ill.—An unidentified taxpayer returned to the office of the Internal Revenue Bureau to make a correction on his income tax return. The man originally had signed his return with an "X", explaining he could not write English, "XX" and explained, "I forgot I had two names."

PRUNE whip can turn into a fancy dessert if you serve it in tall "parfait" type glasses, layering with sliced bananas. Top with whipped cream and finely chopped nuts.

Ever tried peppermint sticks as muddlers with tea? They're tasty and interesting. Try them with cocoa for the youngsters, too, to give them a real treat.

Chipped beef or Welsh rarebit can be made more appetizing by tossing in some peanuts. They give interesting texture.

Grilled cheese sandwiches are excellent when served with a sauce made by heating condensed cream of mushroom soup which has been thinned slightly with some milk. Fish and chicken sandwiches, grilled, are good with the sauce, too.

Stuff dates or cooked, pitted prunes with peanut butter and top with halves of nutmeats. These are nice as a snack or a salad accompaniment.

Nice garnish for meat? Dip apricot halves in beaten egg and bread crumbs and saute in hot fat in the skillet. Serve hot.

To give cabbage slaw an interesting "personality," mash an avocado and add to it soured cream, crumbled blue cheese, lemon juice and salt with a dash of pepper. Mix thoroughly through finely shredded cabbage.

Insert tart apple slices in slits made on the fat of oast pork to give interesting flavor to the gravy.

Mashed potatoes will be rich and delicious if you add some soured cream along with the other ingredients when making them.

LION SMASHES WINDOW

Livingston, Mon. — Just as the radio brought word of the atomic test in Nevada, a double front window in the home of H. L. Rice caved in with a crash. It wasn't the repercussion from the atomic explosion, but an inquisitive mountain lion had smashed the glass then left a trail of blood through snow-covered yards in the neighborhood. Hounds treed the animal and a hunter shot it.

ENOUGH'S ENOUGH

Detroit, Mich. — Ernest Hazelton, a bus driver, abandoned his load of work-bound riders, after becoming rankled by women passengers' comments about his driving. Guiding his bus to a curb, Hazelton grabbed his jacket and disappeared. He turned up later at the bus terminal, declaring, "I am sick of people. I quit."

DETERMINED TAXPAYER

Scranton, Pa. — A lone clerk in the local office of the Bureau of Internal Revenue looked wearily at the bedraggled figure who strode into the office at five minutes to midnight. The determined taxpayer explained he had walked 10 miles to get his return in on time.

SEES CHILDREN PERISH

Meadville, Pa. — Unable to find a ladder, Donald McElhaney, a father of nine, watched helplessly as five of his children, trapped in an upstairs bedroom in their flaming home, burned to death. Four other children and his wife fled to safety through second-floor windows.

Our attendance was good Sunday morning and Sunday night. However, some were absent and we would be glad to have you come next Sunday if possible.

We had two wonderful messages brought to us by Bro. Sidney Sample, and he will be back with us next Sunday for both services, So if you didn't get to hear him last Sunday, by all means, be there Sunday. He is a real spirit-filled man of God. Let's fill the house Sunday, and I know you will receive a blessing.

We were so glad to have Mr. Bill Wilson place his membership back with us Sunday. May God's richest blessings be upon him and his family is our prayer.

Most of the sick are much better. Let's still remember Mrs. John Griffin in our prayers. She is still not able to be out. But we know that all things are possible with God and if we have faith and will trust Him for all things, He will pour out unto us blessings we will not be able to receive.

We had a wonderful revival and souls were saved, but there are yet lost ones in our community. Won't you help us pray that they might see their lost condition and turn to Christ and except Him as their Savior and Lord today?

Remember Sunday School at 10 o'clock Sunday morning. Be sure you attend and hear this great man of God preach. — Reporter.

COAT SOLD FOR 50 CENTS

Decatur, Ill. — An enthusiastic rummage sale worker sold the coat belonging to another worker, Mrs. Don J. Armstrong, (by mistake, of course) for 50 cents. There were some keys, a driver's license and a small amount of cash in the pockets of the coat. Mrs. Armstrong hopes to get these back but says, if the coat wasn't worth more than 50 cents, she will get a new one.

SIMPSON-LAWSON WEDDING

Mrs. Lillian Thompson Simpson, daughter of Mrs. J. W. Thompson and the late Mr. Thompson of Clanton was married late Sunday afternoon, April 19th, to Thomas Wainright Lawson, also of Clanton, formerly of Troy, Ala.

The wedding took place at the home of the bride, with Dr. J. Gilbert Hutchinson, pastor of the First Baptist Church, officiating.

The mantle in the living room was centered with a large arrangement of white mixed flowers and tall seven-branched candelabras and green palms, completed the improvised altar for the double ring ceremony.

Miss Beverly Jones, neice of the bride, played several nuptial numbers including the traditional wedding march on the organ. Michael Haywood sang, "Because," accompanied by Miss Jones.

The bride wore a lovely taupe suit of wool crepe, with a magnolia white hat and matching accessories of brown. Her wedding corsage was a white orchid.

The bride's table was covered with a lace cloth and centered with a three-tiered spun sugar wedding cake embossed with molded lilies and topped with a miniature bride and groom. Silver holders with burning white tapers were placed on each side. On the buffet was a lovely arrangement of pink and white flowers flanked by burning tapers in silver holders.

The cake was cut by the bride and groom in the traditional way and was served to the guests by the bride's sister, Mrs. C. T. Jones, of Birmingham. Mrs. J. Gilbert Hutchinson poured coffee from a silver coffee urn, and she was assisted in serving by: Mrs. Leo Thompson and Ann, of Clanton; Mrs. W. E. Thompson and Mrs. Murray Holder, of Meridian, Miss.

Mother's Day is the second Sunday in May and we are planning a big day in our Baptist Church for that day. We want to have an all-day program with dinner on the ground. Come and bring a covered dish and let's enjoy this fellowship. We invite all of our friends both far and near to be with us on this day. Also on this day our entire offering will go for our building program. Won't you be prepared to help in this undertaking? We will have singing and preaching in the afternoon and a visitor will be our speaker for the afternoon service. Make your plans now to attend this all-day meeting.

Vacation Bible School starts May 25th through June 5th. If you can help in this school it would really be appreciated. So far there are not enough workers. We cannot deprive the children of this privilege because adults will not help. Call Bro. Rasberry at once if you are able to help. Also encourage your children to attend this. The hours will be announced later.

In August, beginning Sunday, the 23rd, and running through Friday, the 28th, will be the summer revival. Services will be in the morning and evening. Bro. Fred Pastma, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Bay Minette, Ala., will be the evangelist.

The youth revival came to a close last Friday night. Bro. Ray Watt brought inspiring, soul-winning messages the entire week. Bro. Hilton Olive led the wonderful song services. The church was almost filled every night. Thursday night one of the two middle sections was completely occupied by men and boys and some had to sit elsewhere. Through Thursday night there were nine by profession of faith and 18 for re-dedication.

Those attending the District Sunday School meeting at Milton Church last Sunday afternoon at 2:30 were: Rev. W. F. Rasberry, Mr. S. B. Rogers, Mesdames Daisy Littlejohn, Frankie Seales, K. D. Scott, Catherine Cobern, Evie Cochran, Gray, and Miss Lucy Walker, Jo Nell Foster and Laura Ann Dennis.

We extend our sympathy to the friends, family and loved ones of Mr. Will R. Cox.

Folks and Things ABOUT TOWN —By Ben

Is it true that Dyer Shackleford's dogs have learned to open his deep-freeze and go into it and get meat out for themselves whenever they choose? That's the way we heard it. The dogs have learned to open the latch with their nose and push the top up so as to get to the meat. What with the price of meat there will probably be a lock put on that deep-freeze. Then it'll be dog eat dog we presume.

Semmie Scott has some blue birds that ain't blue. Course along about this time of year when it's Spring most birds that we see are anything but blue. However, this time we are talking about their color and not their condition. Semmie had a family of the little birds in his front yard that just grew to flying size the other day and when they flew away from their home with their parents (which, incidentally were blue) three of the little fellows were white and one was blue. The little white blue birds had pink eyes. Semmie caught one that had fallen in the road and put it back into a tree. He got a good close look at the little bird and Semmie thinks it's mother could have been frightened by a white leghorn rooster or something.

Another story that intrigues us this week is the story about John Deramus. It seems that John was visiting some customers over about Livingston the other day when the storms were blowing about over the state. John was driving down the main street when he spied a parking place. Before he could get into it a "city slicker" (we say "city slicker" because Livingston is a College Town) beat him to the parking place and John had to seek further for a place to park. You have already probably guessed the ending of our little story, but to make a short story longer we will continue. Within a very short time after the above incident a hard wind blew a tree across the parking space that John had tried to get and smashed the other fellow's car. Now there should be a lesson in that story and we believe it is that you should never raise a fuss when someone dives into a parking space that you have eye upon. We are practically certain that John Deramus will not.

Two Arrested For Forgery Last Week

Two women, one white and one colored, were arrested by the Sheriff's office here last week for forgery.

The white woman forged a $76 check at a local department store and the colored girl forged a check at a local bank.

Sheriff J. Luther Kendrick has warned merchants to be more careful in cashing checks unless the parties cashing and signing the checks are well known to them.

The white woman is out on bail but the colored girl is in the county jail having been unable to make bond.

JEMISON SENIOR PLAY

The Senior Class of Jemison High School will present "Lena Rivers," a modern dramatization of Mary J. Holmes' most popular novel, Friday night, May 8, at eight o'clock.

The story deals with the plight of young Lena Rivers and her beloved Granny Nichols who are compelled to leave their New England home and seek refuge with Granny Nichols' son, John, who has changed the family name of Nichols to Livingstone, because of the social aspirations of his dominating wife, Matilda. Arriving in Kentucky where the Livingstones have a large plantation, Lena and her grandmother are subject to the sort of treatment that is usually handed to poor relations. Mrs. Livingstone insists that her husband's relatives five in the small room which formerly housed servants, and she and her daughter, Caroline, tremble with fear at the thought of their wealthy friends' reactions to the awkward country girl and Granny Nichols.

The characters are: Barbara Glasscock, Frances Black, Charles Williams, Willodean Edwards, Louise Lenoir, Doris Peters, Tommy Martin, Wayne Guin, Billie Sue Burgess, Bobby Jones, Charles Cobb, Nelda Ann Childress and J. W. Langston. — Mrs. M. C. Sutley.

Letter To The Editor

THERE IS NO PEACE

There is no peace where shells are bursting
Where blood is flowing and men are dying,
There is no peace where there is no singing
Naught but the sounds of loved ones crying.

All the world is steeped in anguish and in woe,
Smiles have failed and heads are heavy,
E'en the beauty of the sunset has lost its glow
In a world that is fighting to be free.

Yet out of sadness and despair,
Out of the turmoil will come answered prayer;
'Twill be the dawn of a world that's free
From the highest mountain to the rolling sea.

Where men may work, play and love
'Neath God's own skies of blue above.
And all mankind will tell the story
With peace on earth and all its glory.

—MRS. D. H. PRICKETT.

Report from Washington

BY

ARMISTEAD SELDEN

Congressman, Sixth District

In the past we have heard much criticism of filibusters in the United States Senate. This criticism has been loudest when the filibuster has been used by Southern Senators.

For the past four weeks we have been witnessing a "talkathon" in the Senate which has had every indication of being a full-blown filibuster, and, strangely enough, some of the members who have been the most critical of the filibuster have been using it very adeptly.

Senate debate on the so-called Tidelands Bill should end this week when a scheduled vote on the bill will climax about 26 days of argument. Although it is generally conceded the bill will pass by a healthy majority, opponents of the legislation have prevented an earlier vote by talking almost continuously since Senate debate began. A decision to give up their "talkathon" came after Majority Leader Taft threatened to throw the Senate into all-night sessions until a vote was taken on the tidelands issue.

The bill, designed to confirm state ownership of submerged lands out to the various costal states' historic boundaries, is opposed by those Senators who want complete Federal control of all offshore submerged lands. The opponents have consistently maintained that they were not filibustering, but were merely "educating the public" on the importance of the tidelands issue. However, there is every indication that the Senate has been in the midst of a filibuster in the true sense of the word.

The stand of those who believe a filibuster has been in progress was strengthened when Sen. Wayne Morse, the controversial Independent from Oregon, held the Senate floor on April 24-25 for a continuous period of 22 hours, 26 minutes. This show of endurance broke all filibuster records in the Senate. The Senator even refused to yield for questions, which would have given him "breaks."

Sen. Morse's performance constituted the longest time a Senator has ever talked continuously without relief. The late Sen. Robert M. LaFollette, Sr., held the floor for 18 hours and 23 minutes on May 29-30, 1908. However, he was relieved by 20 or more roll calls. The longest actual speaking record before that of Senator Morse was generally credited to the late Sen. Huey P. Long of Louisiana. The famous "Kingfish" from Lonisiana spoke for 15½ hours June 12-13, 1935, but his remarks were interrupted by at least one quorum call. Sen. Allen J. Ellender, one of the present Senators from Louisiana, was credited with speaking 12 hours and 21 minutes without interruption March 14-15, 1949, on amending the cloture rule of the Senate.

To further strengthen the argument that the delaying tactics used by the bill's opponents should be called a filibuster, Sen. Holland of Florida cited 39 instances in one day where opponents of the bill talked about matters which did not concern submerged lands. These instances included references to television, bald heads, characteristics of Swedish people, Amos and Andy, poetry, baseball, analogy, and other subjects completely unrelated to the bill in question.

In the midst of the controversy, the Senate Rules Committee on April 22 ironically reported a bill (S. Res. 20) to change the cloture rule to limit debate.

Certainly no criticism can be made against the Southern Senators who have taken part in this debate for their use of the filibuster. Yet a number of Senators who have advocated adoption of this rule while loudly condemning the tactics of a filibuster seem to have had a change of heart. In adition to Morse, such Fair Deal Senators as Douglas of Illinois, Humphrey of Minnesota, Anderson of New Mexico and Lehman of New York have played important roles in the Talkathon which has plagued the Senate for nearly a month. Although they have continued to disclaim any part in a filibuster, with or without tongues in cheeks, in my book a full-fledged filibuster has certainly been in progress. As one Southern Senator adroitly said, the talkers surely were "teaching the Southerners something they didn't know about filibustering."

In any event, I would think that the arguments of these particluar advocates of the cloture rule and long-time opponents of the filibuster have been decidedly weakened in the eyes of the American people.

Selden Asks Continuation Of Federal Aid To Peach Growers

Stresses Need Of Funds To Fight Phony Disease

Washington, D. C., May 1—Rep. Armistead I. Selden, Jr., has called on the House Appropriations Committee to ask Congress to continue necessary federal funds for assisting peach growers with control of the Phony Disease which is a constant danger to peach crops in Alabama.

The Department of Agriculture [illegible] Appropriations Committee [illegible] this peach tree disease since [illegible] Congressman Selden said he thought complete elimination of the program at this time would be ill advised.

"If the Committee feels the Federal government should no longer take part in this program," he said, "certainly ample time should be provided the states to [illegible] which would enable them to operate the program without federal aid."

Selden pointed out that the area affected most by the peach crop disease included Chilton County in the 6th Congressional District and Autauga County, with the approximate center of the area located in Clanton.

"In this area," he stated, "331,955 trees on 573 properties were inspected last year, and 11,170 trees on 378 properties were found to be infected with Phony Disease."

"New control practices for the disease have been put into effect as rapidly as they have been released by research entomologists and pathologists. Although there is still much to learn before best control is achieved, research is continuing and hopes are high that improved methods will soon be forthcoming."

"But, until better methods are developed, sound reasoning seems to dictate that the present control practices must be continued if the Alabama peach industry is to survive."

Selden's statement in support of continuing federal assistance for the disease control program was presented to the Agriculture Subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee which recently held hearings on a proposal to eliminate completely the federal aid. The subcommittee's action on the proposal will be reveiwed by the full Appropriations Committee before Congress is given a report.

To Be Presented In Senior Piano Recital

Misses Sadie Higgins, Donna Klinner and Elinor Warr, pupils of Mrs. Raymond P. Mims, will be presented in their senior piano recital Thursday at 8:00 p.m. in the auditorium of the First Methodist Church, Clanton. This program represents the culmination of considerable music study during their high school years and is also a final preparation for college where the girls will either major or minor in music.

Sadie is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe F. Higgins. She has been an enthusiastic member of the glee club for all six years of high school and has been active in Beta Club. Paralleling her music interests, Sadie is identified with school publications having been assistant editor of the Silver Shield. She has been accepted at Agnes Scott College, Atlanta, Ga., where she will enter this fall.

Donna is enrolled at Randolph-Macon for next year. She has been a glee club accompanist for two years, is a member of Beta Club and recently was voted class musician. She has also achieved the academic honor of salutaturian of her class. Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Klinner are her parents.

THE PRISONERS' RETURN

The pitiful and revolting side of war is clearly revealed by the spectacle of disabled and wounded prisoners who have been exchanged by the two sides in Korea. The specter of brutal treatment and long-time confinement created an apathy among many U. N. soldiers who were returned—and a psychological shock, which doctors say only time and care will heal.

There seems to be one hope generated by the prisoner exchange which has been generally overlooked. This is the probability that communist prisoners will often tell the truth about the U. S. behind enemy lines.

Just as our own prisoners are being carefully interrogated, in an effort by U. S. officials to see what sort of treatment they received at the hands of the Communists, so, too, will Communist prisoners be questioned in North Korea and China. It is reasonable to assume that many will tell the truth—that they were treated well, fed well, and handled fairly, as human beings, by personnel of the United States and allied countries.

These facts, of course, are contrary to the picture which has been painted by the Communists. While we are discovering brutal death marches and new atrocities, inflicted on our own soldiers, nearly 6,000 Communists, if they dare tell the truth, must admit they have been treated fairly by U. N. and U. S. soldiers. It might even be accurate to say that the 5,800 Communist prisoners returned by the U. N. probably realize, better than any other group in China and North Korea, that the propaganda of their own government is not true.

If a complete prisoner exchange is completed, over 100,000 Communist prisoners—who have been treated decently by the allies—will wind up in North Korea and China. We hope they spread the gospel.

COLLEGES ASK HELP

Four liberal arts colleges in Maryland recently appealed to business leaders for funds to help them meet the problem posed by rising costs and declining incomes. The colleges formed an organization called the Association of Independent Colleges in Maryland.

This is not the first development of this kind in the United States but is indicative of a trend which has developed in this country since the end of World War II. Several rounds of inflation since 1945 have hit the small, independent colleges a hard blow. If the trend continues, there is serious doubt whether some of the nation's independent liberal arts colleges— especially the smaller ones—can long survive.

A search of the records shows that the small, liberal arts college produces a large share of the nation's leading business and professional men and women. The number is out of proportion to the number of students graduated by these colleges, compared with those graduated by the larger and wealthier universities and colleges.

The appeal to businesses for support is a natural one for the small liberal arts colleges to make. Aid from private business and enterprise is a form of aid which will not, and should not, bring about controls, or restrictions on college freedoms from the outside. While there is great need for, and a major place for, state and other public-supported colleges, and denominational colleges, there is also a need for colleges which do not depend on either means of financing.

HOARSENESS

The term hoarseness is associated with the quality of the voice, particularly when it has a harsh, grating sound. A hoarse voice is not a pleasant voice to hear, but neither does it mean that disease is present since many persons are naturally endowed with a lower pitch in tone than others.

However, when hoarseness affects [illegible] normally, that is without any swelling or obstruction caused by infection or disease, the voice will be clear; but if there is some interference, hoarseness results. Thus hoarseness becomes a symptom and not a disease in itself.

Many diseases affect the vocal cords in the larynx, but some are more common than others. For example, the common cold is the most common condition causing hoarseness. However, this type is usually temporary and disappears once the inflamed and swollen tissues return to normal.

Hoarseness may be present in varying degrees from that which develops after cheering in some game to the serious hoarseness which is associated with cancer and diseases of the heart or brain. Hoarseness is frequently associated with tumors of the neck and chest. Hoarseness may also develop, if a growth or tumor develops in the larynx. These tumors may be benign or malignant, but if they fall in the latter group hoarseness is usually the first and only danger signal. Pain, coughing and difficomplished in saving the larynx; do not ordinarily occur until the disease is well advanced. When detected early, much can be accomplished in saying the larynx; but when in the advanced stages radical surgery is almost always necessary.

For these reasons, if hoarseness persists for weeks after apparent recovery from a cold or develops without a cold, the condition should not be ignored or treated lightly.

SUNDAY'S SERMON

Rev. Robert H. Harper

Paul Under Guard in Rome.
Lesson for May 10: Acts 28: 14b-4, 30-31.
Golden Text: Romans: 8: 28.

Between the parting of Paul on the seacoast from the elders of Ephesus and his arrival in Rome some time had passed and many stirring events had intervened. In Jerusalem he had suffered from efforts of the Jewish leaders against him, had been taken away to Caesarea for safekeeping, and there, after many vicissitudes, he had appealed his case unto Caesar. He was sent by ship toward Rome. On the way he suffered shipwreck. But at last he reached the city, entering it by the famous Appian Way.

In Rome, Paul was permitted to dwell in his own hired house, but he was ever guarded by a Roman soldier. We can but wonder at the influence the great prisoner had upon the soldier or soldiers who came in touch with him during the two years he dwelt in the house.

As soon as he was settled in his house, he sent for the Jews who were in Rome, and a day was appointed that they might come and hear him concerning the gospel. Some of them believed what Paul preached unto them, but there were some who refused to believe.

We find in Paul at Rome a fine example of devotedness to duty. Being confined did not deter him from preaching as liberty was allowed all to visit him. If a man could work thus handicapped for his Lord, we should take courage in our own labors of the present, no matter where we may be.

The Way To Tell Flying Ants From Termites

Auburn, Ala. — Flying ants that swarm in the spring often give homemakers frightening visions of crumbling woodwork.

Although these swarms may resemble termites, they are really ants if they have "hourglass" figures, says W. A. Ruffin, API Extension entomologist.

Ruffin points out that ants and termites are alike in many ways. Both produce large numbers of winged forms that swarm from the nest at mating time. Both live in colonies. But otherwise these two insects are very different.

To save the trouble of calling for help to identify these winged insects when they swarm, Ruffin gives two easy ways to distinguish ants from termites. First, notice the waist. Ants have "pinched in" waists while termites have thick almost straight bodies. Second, check the wings. Both ants and termites have two sets of wings, but if one set is shorter than the other, the insects are ants. If the two sets of wings are almost the same length, they are termites.

DIVISION OF ELEMENTARY EDUCATION

The Adult Education program of the Elementary Division is planned for adults with a limited formal education. The classes are organized to meet six hours per week for nine months and are placed in areas where it is possible to reach a number of illiterates. Persons joining their classes may continue until they have reached a sixth grade equivalency in the skills.

At the present time we have 17 classes (10 Negro and 7 white) with an average of 26 people enrolled in each class. There are two classes pending. In a study made last year it was found that the average age of the participants was between 30 and 40 years and that there were approximately a third more women enrolled than men.

The adult education program should be expanded. There are daily requests for various phases of adult education activities. Approximately 80% of the people of Alabama have not finished 12 years of schooling in our public school program. The state public schools have an obligation particularly to these adults.

Adult Education should be included as an integral part of public education and the adults registered in classes should be counted in the average daily attendance. It should be an obligation of each public school to participate in some phase of adult education. All adults should have an opportunity of furthering their educational interests, through hobby classes, art classes, community choruses, orchestras, forums, child-care clinics and classes in academic subjects. Many states are making great progress in this area of education and Alabama should begin to make definite plans.

THE URGENCY OF EXERCISE

"Train yourself in godliness. Exercise for the body is not useless, but godliness is useful in every respect." I Timothy 4:8 (Weymouth)

Athletics play a big part in our high school and college life. But we have not yet carried it to the extreme of the ancient Greeks. Their Olympic Games were officially connected with the worship of their pagan gods. The mane comes from the fact that Mount Olympus was supposed to be the habitat of the mighty Zeus and his cohort of lesser deities. The quadrennial contests held at Olympia constituted the most important religious festival observed by the Greek people and were participated in by specially trained young men from every Greek state.

In those historic games there was an invariable rule, which was that every contestant for Olympian honors must seperate himself from his home community, live for at least two years in complete isolation, subject himself to a rigid diet, and engage daily for the entire period in rigorous exercise. When the time arrived for the particular contest for which he had prepared himself —the foot-race or throwing the discus, for instance, the judges would not permit his being enrolled among the competitors except on the testimony of the proper authority that he had met all the preparatory demands for entrance.

Our Bible verse quoted here is taken as a figure of speech from the requirements necessary for entry the Olympic competition. The apostle Paul, the writer of the verse, used the same figure in his declaration before the Roman court, saying, "And herein do I exercise myself, to have always a conscience void of offence toward God and man."

The gist of it is that God is not satisfied with a mere profession of faith in Him. A trustworthy Christian must give himself to the daily practice of the requirements of his religion. Otherwise he will not be prepared to meet the test when the crisis comes. He may join with the congregation in the tuneful song, "Am I A Soldier of The Cross," but he is not much of a soldier unless he is found on the drill-ground every day. Rigid self-discipline, constant self-examniation, unvarying interest in the higher things that relate to one's relationship to God and to his fellowmen, the practice of obedience to the divinely revealed rules that are necessary to victorious living, are the conditions that must be met if the professor of the religion of Jesus Christ is to exhibit the Christian idea to an unbelieving world. It may be tough going, but that is what the Bible says.

Farmers Urged To Save Big White Clover Crop

Auburn, Ala. — Alabama farmers should plan to save a record acreage of white clover seed this spring.

D. R. Harbor, API Extension agronomist, points out that the supply of these seed has never been great enough to force prices down below a money-making level for the producer. "Therefore," he says, "farmers can add to their income by combining every possible acre of white clover. Another reason for bigger harvests is that farmers need to expand their acreages of this pasture plant."

Harbor reminds farmers that it's now time to get ready for the spring harvest season. "As a first step, cattle still on white clover should be removed immediately. Combines should be checked to insure quick harvesting when the seed are ready. This check-up may save valuable time later on."

Harbor explained that seed yields should be increased if the clover is now clipped fairly high off the ground so that the seedheads will form at a uniform height.

Seedheads are ready for harvest when twothirds of the seed will rub out easily or when threefourths of the seedheads have turned- brown. Harvesting may be done by direct combining, that is combining the seed from the standing clover plants, or by cutting, windrowing, and combining from the windrow.

If in doubt about which method should be used to get the best yields on a particular field, contact the local county agent for advice, says Harbor.

Sod Crops Act As Blotter To Cut Erosion Problem

Water that runs downhill usually runs off with both soil and plant food.

But sod crops act like a blotter to absorb and hold water necessary to produce crops. Well terraced fields farmed on a contour and supported by good crop rotations, help the land absorb and store water, says S. R. Doughty, API Extension soil conservationist.

Is A Knock A Boost?

My Fellow Citizens:

I well remember the day when I was a boy down on the farm as I am today when papa made the statement that a knock often proved to be a boost. During them days there were not so many ways of getting them knocks to so many people. No, we didn't even have a phone and so far as I know radio and television had not even been put on paper. Of course there was a few telephones among the silk stocken society and telewomen were plentiful.

We looked forward to getting our County newspaper for we could and did believe what was wrote in her columes. The older I got the more I noticed certain trends and more selfishness.

I believe that one thing that caused me to think and take more seriously what I read in print was one day I was telling papa something and he, knowing the facts, ask me where I had gotten my information. I told him that I had read it in the paper and knew it was true for it was printed. Without trying to explain further, he went into the sitting room where my older brother, John, kep his typewriters (you know, for he was in business school) and wrote out these words, "Bill McDonald is a little Indian boy who lives in Alaska and goes to school in Chilton County, Alabama."

It was then I decided to start thinking more for myself when I would read something in print.

Nowdays when I sit in my barn door (for it is quiter there) and read the news I just remember that it was the late Joe Stalling who told his Communist Party that if he could devide us that he could conker us without firing a shot.

My fellow Chiltonites, let us remember when someone starts nocking, he or they have a selfish motive. What's good for one is good for all of us, generally speaking. Let us all put our shoulders to the wheel and work together. Let us remember that if we can't find something good to say it might be best to keep our mouths or traps closed.

If you have confidence in me, I'll try to have confidence in you. Will be written at you agin in about two weeks, so until then may the Good Lord keep and guide you.

I love youall,
Papa's Plowhand,
BILL McDONALD,
Sitting in the front Cribdoor.

Treatment Needed Before Pigs Go Into Corn Field

Auburn, Ala. — It's time to get the spring pig crop ready to go on those patches of early hogging corn

To get fast, cheap gains when shoaty pigs are turned into the corn field, it's necessary to prepare for the event, points out G. B. Phillips, API Extension animal industry specialist. Here are some suggestions he gives on handling the pre-hogging herd:

1. Shut the pigs in a pen for 24 hours and give them all they will eat of a dry ground feed to which sodium flouride has been well mixed at the rate of one pound to 100 pounds of feed. Keep drinking water near by, but don't wet the feed.

2. Control lice and mange with lindane, one pound to 25 gallons of water, or one pound of BHC (six per cent gamma) to five gallons of water.

Phillip's recommendations after turning pigs onto the hogging corn (when the ear can be easily shucked and the grains rub off easily) are these;

1. Use temporary cross fences to confine pigs to about what they'll clean up in 30 days.

2. Self feed a protein supplement along with a low cost mineral mixture such as equal parts of ground limestone, hardwood ashes, and common salt.

3. Feed common dry salt and keep plenty of water, the cheapest hog feed, before them at all times.

4. Provide plenty of shade and a wallow that is clean.

5. Watch for screwworms, and treat all wounds with Smear EQ335 or other aproved remedy.

Phillips also points out that hogs don't sweat. When they're not eating, they should be sleeping. Since pigs can't sleep soundly in the sun, provide plenty of shade close to the grazing area.

Home Demonstration Goal Is Better Living

By MRS. LILLIE M. ALEXANDER
State Home Demonstration Agent

SIXTY-THREE thousand home demonstration women in 2000 clubs over Alabama will observe National Home Demonstration Week, May 3-9. One part of the celebration will be district meetings in Florence, Asbury, Tuscaloosa, Selma, Jackson, Eufaula, and Auburn. Four thousand rural women proclaiming their theme, "Today's Home Builds Tomorrow's World," are expected to attend these meetings.

Mrs. Lillie M. Alexander

Home demonstration members throughout the state can look back on the past year and see that they reached many of the goals they set for themselves.

Eighteen thousand volunteer local leaders have extended the work of the home demonstration agents by assisting with programs on foods and nutrition, food preservation, clothing and textiles, home management, house furnishings, consumer education, and child care and family life.

Leaders in community clubs and county councils and state objective chairmen have planned, developed, and carried out effective programs, assisting the 4-H Clubs through the rural youth objective. The 4-H girls and boys in the state have been encouraged with their projects, and assisted with their programs during the year.

Home demonstration citizenship chairmen have taken an active part in encouraging good citizenship among 4-H'ers and home demonstration club members. These women have studied good government, and encouraged farm families to become better citizens.

The community and county home demonstration programs in community activities have developed this year, and worthwhile projects for better communities are under way all over the state.

Defense activities such as Civil Defense and War Bond drives have also been actively participated in by home demonstration club women.

Interest in farm organization and its value has been pointed out to farm people over the state.

As I look back on 58 years of Extension work I realize that the farm home's influence is being felt today in Alabama and in this nation. And its accomplishments are being observed by other nations. Alabama's home demonstration women have accepted the challenge, "Today's Home Builds Tomorrow's World." And, are doing something about it.

They're Never Idle

A veteran of 35 years is the Wilmer HD Club in Mobile County. Any one of the 35 members will tell you they have a good club because they are never idle. This year they chose to repair books in the Wilmer school library as a club project. Already bound are over 100 books, with even more than that to be reworked. Working on the project are, left to right, Mrs. Tressie Howell, Mrs. W. O. Wood, Mrs. Byron G. Galloway, and Mrs. Vest Hare.

Save That Tractor

Keep Repair Bills Low Service Air Cleaner

By J. T. GAILLARD
API Extension Engineer

DIRT is your tractor's worst enemy—the greatest cause of engine wear. Service the air cleaner regularly and prevent needlessly wearing away your tractor motor.

For every 5 gallons of gasoline burned, your tractor breathes enough air to fill a 90-ton silo. This air is filled with dust and must be cleaned; otherwise, the dirt will enter the engine, where it acts as a grinding compound and causes excessive wear of all moving parts.

To service the cleaner, remove the cleaner cup, clean thoroughly, and refill it with oil of the S.A.E. number recommended by the manufacturer. The air cleaner should be serviced at least once a day under normal use, more often under dusty conditions.

Check air hose and connections frequently to see that there are no holes in the hose and that connections are tight. For the same reasons, check the intake manifold and carburetor gaskets regularly.

Keep crankcase breather caps clean. These caps are miniature air cleaners and should be serviced at the same intervals as the air cleaner. Wash them in kerosene and dip in clean engine oil.

Keep your oil clean, for dirt in oil wears out engine parts. Clean containers, carrying cans, and funnels help in keeping dirt out of oil.

State HD Council Head

Meet Mrs. L. Chatterton, president of the Alabama Council of Home Demonstration Clubs!

She is a gracious, friendly farm lady from Hale County who believes her organization does more than any other to better rural life all over Alabama. "Our accomplishments are far-reaching," says Mrs. Chatterton. "The good work of these clubs is being spread all around the world."

Mrs. Chatterton, after moving to Alabama from Montana in 1944, joined the Prairie-Eden HD Club, and has been an active member ever since.

THE SEARCH IS ON—Since a rural reading program sponsored by the Houston County HD Council started in January, club members have been searching for good books. There is a prize for the member who reads the largest number of books on the approved list. Checking out books from the bookmobile are, left to right, Mrs. Clayton Horn, council president; Mrs. W. A. Womack, county chairman for the rural reading program; Mrs. C. C. Hicks, Ashford HD Club member; Mrs. W. H. Summerford, Mrs. Rex Crawford, Mrs. J. B. Hilson, all Cowarts HD Club members, and Miss Marian Neil, Houston County librarian.

Green County Club Member Tells How HD Club Helped Her

MOST of my life I've been affiliated with the Extension program in one of its organizations. I'm 50 years old now and 41 of these years I have either been a 4-H'er or a home demonstration club member. For several years I've been a home demonstration club member in two counties.

When I was nine years old, I joined the Ralph 4-H Club and was a member for seven years. I married soon after my 16th birthday and joined the first home demonstration club organized in Tuscaloosa County's Sylvan Community. Within a short time I also joined a Green County club at Live Oak, and was a member of both clubs until 1948. My family then moved to Mt. Hebron in Greene County where I joined the Mt. Hebron Club and the Gainesville Club in Sumter County. I'm still a member of both clubs and hold an office in each.

During 41 years of club work I've held at different times every major office of a 4-H and a home demonstration club and served as chairman on many committees. I am now "Food Preservation Leader" of the Mt. Hebron Club in Green County.

Home demonstration club work has meant lots to me; it's helped me become a better leader, a better homemaker, and, most important of all, a better mother for my ten children.

I regret very much that I cannot share my experience with every rural woman in Alabama, for if I could I'm certain each of them would soon become interested in home demonstration club work.

THEY SEW FOR THE SICK—Kindness shown by members of the Tharptown HD Club in Franklin County will be remembered by patients at the District Tuberculosis Sanitarium of Decatur for a long time. Each member of the club is furnishing material and making either a pair of pajamas or a housecoat for a patient at the hospital. The project gets off to a good start here as Mrs. Lester Heaps, left, and Mrs. Gordie Smith cut out the material and start their sewing.

Along the Way with P. O. DAVIS
DIRECTOR, A&L EXTENSION SERVICE

FARMERS, as they plant cotton this spring, are determining how many acres they'll plant next spring. If they plant enough acres to make a big crop, they'll invoke marketing quotas on themselves in 1954.

And marketing quotas mean acreage control by allotments. The actual acreage a farmer plants under allotments will not be determined by him but by others.

This, in brief, is the essence of the cotton situation at present.

Within a year exports have dropped sharply (30%), thus causing the supply of cotton to climb to a high level. If farmers produce a crop of 12 to 12.5 million bales this year, the supply should be low enough to avoid marketing quotas next year. If, however, the 1953 crop turns out to be 15 to 16 million bales, marketing quotas will be certain so far as can now be foreseen.

In viewing cotton, each farmer of course thinks about his own situation. Perhaps, cotton has been his main money crop for many years. He has equipment and know-how for making cotton. If he shifts to other crops or to livestock his income basis will be changed. His income next fall may not be as much as with cotton; and he'll have debts to pay.

It is, therefore, a difficult problem for each farmer. It's unfortunate indeed that the demand for cotton isn't big enough to permit each farmer to plant as he chooses; but it isn't, and in dealing with it he must be realistic.

My main plea is for each farmer to be realistic in viewing the over-all situation, as well as his own. By planting too much, farmers will forfeit their freedom in producing cotton next year. Controls will be invoked, and each farmer will plant no more than his allotment.

As we turn from cotton we see corn, peanuts, other crops, and livestock. As we see corn, we think of two bad crop years, especially a tough drouth and excess heat in 1952. Corn was literally cooked in the fields.

But such weather is abnormal in Alabama. We have temporary drouth every year, but last year's was unusually long and hot.

Corn will continue as a major crop in Alabama—it will occupy more Alabama land than any other crop. But land alone will not determine its value. Variety, fertilizer, soil preparation, and cultivation are all important factors in making corn.

I keep talking about corn because it's the key crop with livestock. Cattle, of course, will do well on grazing and hay but other animals need grain as well as grazing; and corn is our number one feed grain.

It has been very thrilling indeed to see hogs grazing this spring on clover with corn to balance pasture. A good crop of corn last year would have resulted in much more pork on Alabama farms this year.

The same is true for next year. A bigger corn crop in 1953 will result in more pounds of pork in 1954; and more income to farmers, plus better land.

A few more words about cattle, both beef and dairy. Beef cattle prices have declined sharply of late. Two years ago they were 190 per cent of parity but they're now down to 89 per cent.

It's true that milk has been in surplus, or too much, this spring. This is of vital concern to dairymen.

But the outlook for livestock and poultry on Alabama farms is favorable. There are more people and the per capita consumption of meat, milk, and eggs is growing.

BUY GOOD BULLS—O. L. Grisson of Spruce Pine, Rt. 1, says it takes good bulls to raise good calves. His cows are bred to this fine herd sire from Milky Way Farms in Arizona. Grisson has 40 head of registered cattle from which he sells breeding stock.

GOOD PASTURES MEAN MORE PROFIT—Plenty of home-raised feed is a "must" in the beef cattle business. O. L. Grisson of Spruce Pine, Rt. 1, (right) tells Assistant County Agent H. W. Warren (center) and his son, Roy, that he uses 150 pounds of 62 per cent phosphate, 100 pounds of 60 per cent potash, and 700 pounds of lime annually on each acre of his pasture.

Good Business

Franklin County Grows More Beef

MORE and more of Franklin County's acres once in cotton and other row crops are being turned into the business of growing feed for an expanding beef industry.

O. L. Grisson of Spruce Pine, formerly a cotton farmer, recently pointed out why he had changed most of his farm to the production of beef. "The first big reason for cutting down on my row crop acreage was that it took too much labor to grow cotton as the main cash crop. "Then, too," he added, "there is much less work in the beef cattle business. Another point I am not overlooking is that I can grow beef cattle on my land and build it up at the same time.

"All of these," added Grisson, "are logical reasons, and I can prove how this system has paid off on my farm."

Five years ago Grisson decided he needed another crop to supplement cotton. He, like many other farmers over the state, concluded cattle was the answer. . . but not common cattle. If he was going to grow cows, why not raise the best. And that's just what he's doing.

On a 295-acre farm, most of which is now in feed crops, are 43 head of Hereford cattle, including 40 purebreds.

The Franklin County cattleman, because of his "purebred know how," has one of the top herds in North Alabama. Part of the proof of this is that he showed and sold the champion bull in the North Alabama Hereford show and sale in Florence in 1950. The prize animal brought a fancy price of $8500. Grisson was so pleased that he used the money to buy 70 more acres of land. Thus he increased the size of his ranch, hoping to produce many more top bulls.

Grisson said good bulls, like the one he is using from Milky Way Farms in Phoenix, Arizona, plenty of quality hay, and lots of pasture all add up to a good cow business.

The pasture program on this farm includes 50 acres of white Dutch clover-orchard grass and 25 acres of sericea for summer grazing. The winter pasture consists of crimson clover and rescue grass.

Grisson, a unit test demonstration farmer for three years, credits much of his pasture success to the fertilizer program. Following the advice of Assistant County Agent H. W. Warren, the cattleman uses 150 pounds of 62 per cent phosphate, 100 pounds of 60 per cent muriate of potash, and 700 pounds of lime on each acre annually.

Marengo HD Ladies Organize Choral Group

FROM Linden comes word that many of the ladies in Marengo County's HD clubs are finding special pleasure in singing these days.

At their program planning meeting in January, members of the council voted to organize a choral group as a county-wide project.

They held their first meeting at the Linden community house and were organized into three voice sections—soprano, alto, and tenor. Miss Gladys Armstrong, assistant home demonstration agent, was selected director and Mrs. Joe Fulford, pianist.

In addition to satisfying their own desire to sing, Jean Edmonds, home demonstration agent, says the women are letting others enjoy their music by singing at churches throughout the county. The ladies also have an engagement to sing at the district home demonstration meeting at Selma during National HD Week.

For All Ages

Home Library Furnishes Books For Community

THE attractive farm home of Mrs. Clay Lenahan, out on Guin, Rt. 1, has become the most popular place in the Zion Community lately.

The outside appearance is not much different from that of any other home in this Marion County community, and to a stranger it might go unnoticed. But once you go inside Mrs. Lenahan's living room, you'll see why she has so much company: the room houses a home library made possible by members of the local HD club.

Since there was no public library service in the community, the ladies decided to do something about the situation. At one of their regular home demonstration club meetings, they hit on the idea of setting up a library in one of the homes. Each family in the community was to donate some books to get the project started.

A plea for books was very effective. Now in the library are about 300 volumes available to folks in the community at no cost, provided they aren't kept too long.

A large, portable case is filled with books for all ages. Even the two-year-old can find a picture book that will interest him while his mother looks around for something she'd like to read. There's information in the library for the knowledge-hungry farm men too, because its shelves contain several books on agricultural subjects.

Mrs. Lenahan says the people are using the library service even more than the founders expected. It is a little over one year old now, and the sponsors say it is serving a good purpose and continues to grow.

They plan to keep up interest in the project by moving the library to a different home in the community each year.

OH-E-E WHAT A PRETTY KITTY—There are books for the two-year-olds too. Deborah Davis finds a nice picture book to look at while her mother, Mrs. Gaston Davis, looks around for something she'd like to borrow from the home library in Zion Community. The library project, sponsored by the Zion HD Club, has over 300 books on its shelves and continues to grow as club members donate more books.

THE READING CENTER—Mrs. Clay Lenahan, left, is librarian for the newly organized home library in Marion County's Zion Community. She tells Mrs. Gaston Davis, president of the local home demonstration club, that people in the community are using the library service even more than the founders expected. Members of the local home demonstration club sponsored the project.

1. GREEN FEED FOR THE LIVESTOCK—On his 200-acre farm near Yellow Pine Cecil Milstead (left) has 145 head of cattle, 15 hogs, and 50 sheep contented on 90 acres of clover and grasses which they have grazed since last November. The Washington County farmer points out some of his top grassland to County Agent Howard Moss.

2. A NEWCOMER—What makes cattlemen happier than to find a newborn calf on acres of green pastures? Cecil Milstead of Yellow Pine witnessed this recently on his 200-acre Washington County farm and it brought his total number of grade Herefords to 145 head.

3. A SHEPHERD WATCHES HIS FLOCK—Gene Milstead of Yellow Pine keeps a careful watch over his herd of 50 sheep. The young farmer also helps his father, Cecil Milstead, operate their 200-acre crop-livestock farm. Last year the Milsteads averaged 50 bushels of corn per acre on 70 acres and they picked 17 bales of cotton off a dozen acres.

There's No Secret

Livestock Plus Crops Makes Good Business

There's plenty evidence of this on Cecil Milstead's farm in Yellow Pine.

First of all, the Washington County farmer likes to tell the story about his last year's cotton crop. He had an even dozen acres in the crop. Each acre received 600 pounds of 6-8-8 at planting time and was cultivated enough to control weeds and grasses. Milstead did not poison to control insects, and, strange as it may sound, the cotton farmer picked 17 bales off the 12 acres.

What's more, he broke his corn production records last year. His cribs were packed with 3500 bushels of corn—an average of 50 bushels per acre on his 70 acres of corn.

The farmer planted his corn in mid-April on well prepared ground and put 500 pounds of 6-8-4 on each acre. Weeds and grass were kept at a minimum and in the latter part of June the corn got a 200-pound application of nitrate of soda per acre.

"There's no 'key' to top production," Milstead says. "It simply takes a little hard work and hours of planning sound farming practices."

There's more than cotton and corn on the Milstead farm. In fact, Howard Moss, Washington County's farm agent, praised Milstead and his son, Gene, for their progressive and productive livestock program. A goal to furnish grazing for his animals the year around is met as nearly as possible. To supply the green feed, Milstead uses 90 acres of Winter crops of crimson clover, oats, and ryegrass that were seeded last September and October on fallowed land. The oats and ryegrass followed a crop of Sudan grass that received 500 pounds of 6-8-4, 1,000 pounds of basic slag, and two tons of manure per acre. The clover acres got 800 pounds of slag per acre at planting time. In spite of the severe drouth, the clover field was furnishing grazing in six weeks and the livestock grazed throughout the winter on these acres.

One hundred acres of bahia and dallis grass, sericea, and kobe lespedeza supply the summer grazing. Each of these acres get an annual 200-pound application of nitrate of soda and 600 pounds of 0-14-14.

The farmer has found that this crop and grazing program keeps 145 cows, 15 hogs, and 50 sheep happy and productive.

Milstead and Gene are dry lot feeding 26 head of last year's late calves. The animals, heifers, steers, and bulls are getting a mixture of 100 pounds of cottonseed meal and 400 pounds of ground corn. Hogs are in the cattle lot to make sure no grain goes to waste.

For Good Fishing

Keep Your Pond Free Of Weeds

MAY is a good month to control weeds in your fish ponds, says Earl Kennamer, API Extension specialist in fish and wildlife. This is because growth is tender and more easily killed than in late summer.

To control weeds that grow above water, such as cattails and lily pads, mix an ester type of 2,4-D at the rate of one-half measuring cup to 5 gallons of kerosene or diesel fuel. Spray this on the exposed parts of leaves on a hot sunny day. Then repeat on new growth as soon as it appears. About three applications may be necessary for complete control.

Kennamer adds that most underwater weeds and floating blankets of non-greasy summer algae can be killed with sodium arsenite, a highly poisonous chemical. Should you plan to use it, be sure to contact your county agent for full directions and recommendations.

Where a few underwater weeds appear in a new pond, dig them up by the roots immediately.

Fertilization must be done correctly to shade the bottom of the pond and prevent weed growth.

New ponds should have the edges deepened to 15 to 18 inches completely around the shoreline to help prevent shallow water weed growths.

This Month on the Farm

by API EXTENSION SPECIALISTS

THE spring litter of pigs should be weaned at 8 weeks of age and the sow bred for the fall litter about a week later. Sows bred about May 1 should farrow during the last 10 days of August—and that's a very good time.

KEEP up spray program on fruit trees for the control of diseases and worms in fruit. Dust vegetable crops every week with Auburn approved garden dust to control diseases and insects.

MOVE the pullets to a clean range, away from the old poultry area. A clean range will reduce parasite infestation and losses from disease. Grazing crops will cut feed costs. From a flock of 500 pullets you can expect an egg crop worth at least $4000 during the coming year. For such a valuable crop you can afford to use at least one and a half to two acres of good pasture.

GET ready for the turkey poults. Start grazing crops for these birds. Turkeys can profitably graze soybeans, grain sorghum, clover and other such crops. Alabama produced about one pound of turkey meat per person last year. The national consumption of turkey meat was five and one-half pounds per person.

SIDE-DRESS corn with nitrogen 30 to 40 days after planting. Early kinds should be side-dressed about 20 days after planting. With good stands—8000 stalks or more per acre—you can profitably use up to 90 pounds of nitrogen per acre.

NOW is the time to spray cattle for horn flies, stable flies, and mosquitoes. These pests cause cattle much misery and prevent them from gaining as they should. Next fall's grubs can be greatly reduced too by following a regular monthly spray program now. Use a spray containing both DDT and BHC. Follow the directions on the package. Use a bucket and rag, a hand sprayer, or a power sprayer, depending on the number of beef cattle to be sprayed.

SOUTHERN pine beetles often cause considerable damage during dry weather in late spring. This is especially true following spring fires which occur before the grass is green. Check for insect attack and promptly apply control measures. Cut and utilize dead and dying trees before decay makes them unfit for use.

THIS is market season for the shepherd. Shear all sheep not already shorn, except lambs, and put the wool in a wool pool. There will be at least three pools in Alabama in which wool can be marketed for the maximum price. Lambs should be sold on a regular lamb day. Contact your county agent for dates of both wool pools and lamb sales.

AFTER selling the lambs, confine ewes in a dry lot for a few days to "dry up" the milk. Be sure to check all udders before turning out the ewes. A ration of hay will be sufficient while sheep are confined.

Get Higher Yields

Specialist Gives Tips On Saving Seed

NOW that time for grass and legume seed saving is almost here again, here are a few jolting figures on last year's losses due to incorrect harvesting.

The hard fact is that last spring farmers lost as many seeds—18 million pounds—as they harvested. It cost them $5 million to gather fewer crimson clover, fescue, white clover, caley peas, rescue, and small grains.

Practically all of the loss could have been prevented, Ralph Jones, API Extension seeds specialist, said in a report to farmers who have seeds to be saved this spring. He listed the reasons for the loss and then told how the errors could be corrected.

The first two causes—combining seed on rough, rocky fields and in weedy fields—cannot be corrected this season, he admitted. "But certainly future seed crops should be planted on land which will allow harvesting equipment to be operated efficiently. Moreover, good land preparation will further get the area into shape for combining. The weed problem can be licked by planting on areas relatively free of weeds. Pulling the remaining weeds or using chemical weed control where possible will solve the remainder of the problem.

Jones listed the other three reasons for seed losses as (1) the grower did not know exactly when the seed were ready for harvest, (2) failure to have combine or other harvesting equipment ready when the crop matured, and (3) improper operation of combining equipment.

All of these errors said Jones, can be corrected to a great extent this harvest season. He then continued:

"Points that will help the grower determine when some of the major seed crops are ready for harvest are these:

Crimson clover—Harvest when 75 to 80 per cent of the seed heads turn brown and when seed will strip from seed heads as they are drawn lightly between the fingers.

Fescue—Harvest when most of the seed have passed into the hard dough stages. At this stage, the seed will be dark or purplish in color and some of the florets will drop into the hand when the spikelets are pulled between the fingers.

White clover—This crop is ready for combining when three-fourths of the seed in the second set of blooms are in the hard dough stage.

Caley peas—For direct combining of this crop, wait until about ninety per cent of the pods have turned brown. Where seed are to be windrowed before combining, mow when one-half to three-fourths of the pods are brown.

Small grains—These crops do not shatter and harvesting should be delayed until the seed heads are fully ripe. Delay in harvesting after maturity has been reached, however, can result in lodging and will reduce yields.

1. Before putting the combine to work, make certain it is in proper repair and good operating condition.

2. Adjust the forward speed of the machine and the width of swath to keep the combine evenly loaded but not overloaded.

3. Adjust the cylinder speed and the cylinder's concave setting to suit the crop and its condition.

4. Adjust air on cleaning fan for maximum seed and not for maximum cleanliness of seed. Remember that the combine is a harvesting machine and not a cleaner.

5. Adjust opening of chopper, shoe sieve, and special sieve, if one is used, to allow seed to fall through and keep all or most of the small pieces of straw and chaff from falling through.

6. Most important of all, read, study, and re-read the operating manual until you have become the "Master" of your combine. Even then, don't throw your manual away. Keep it for reference.

Mrs. John Lambert, president of the Cleburne County HD Council has a perfect club attendance record that dates back to 1948, the year she joined. Moreover, she has been at all quarterly council sessions. She is the past president of the West Heflin club, an office which she held for three years after the club was organized.

Mrs. Lambert, high in her praise for home demonstration club work, thinks they are doing much to improve rural living. She believes the information given to the club members by the home demonstration agents and other Extension specialists is very valuable to farm women in helping them improve on methods of doing their work. She thinks every homemaker would be wise to take advantage of the educational training available at the club meetings.

Mrs. Lambert said that in addition to their home work members of her club have helped in many community activities.

Screwworms will likely cause trouble this summer and fall if they are not controlled. Livestock growers should not buy animals of any kind from Florida or South Alabama without examining them carefully for wounds likely to be infested with screwworms. As a precautionary measure treat fresh wounds and the navel of newborn animals to prevent screwworm infestation. Smear EQ335 used once a week will control screwworms and prevent reinfestation. If animals are sprayed regularly throughout the summer to control flies, mosquitoes, and ticks, less trouble will be had with screwworms.

HELPING THE YOUNGSTERS—When Baldwin County's home demonstration club ladies went to work, the 4-H Club house at Fairhope got a general overhauling. The building, used by youngsters of Baldwin and neighboring counties for camping, was badly in need of new kitchen equipment, cots, a fan, ceiling for the auditorium, and general repair. So the ladies pitched in and got the job done. Seventeen HD clubs in the county raised over $550 which they pooled with the 4-H'ers' $269 to see the project through. Ladies of the East Fairhope Club are demonstrating the new kitchen equipment furnished by them.

The school at the Alabama Power Company showroom in Montgomery was designed to show retail food merchants how to sell more dairy foods. It was attended by Montgomery retail food merchants. Cooperating with Edmonson in sponsoring the school were the Montgomery Chamber of Commerce, the Alabama Power Company, refrigeration equipment dealers, and dairy foods distributors of Montgomery.

BE sure that lights are off of the laying flock by the first of May. These lights will be needed on the flock again in June or July. Remove them now so that they will respond properly to the lights later. Make plans now for moving the old hens to temporary laying shelters when the pullet flock is ready for the laying house.

Cure Those Seed

To Keep Germination High Cure Crimson Clover Seed

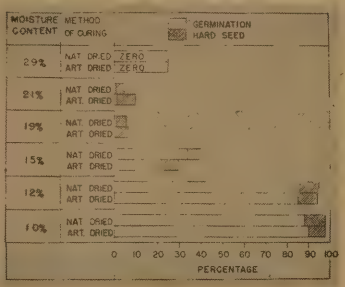
By H. S. WARD, API Associate Botanist, and J. L. BUTT, API Associate Agricultural Engineer

IN most cases your crimson clover seed should be cured after combining to prevent a decrease in germination percentage while in storage.

The drying may be done by use of natural heat and air or by artificial methods—both give good results. However, artificial drying is better during damp cloudy weather.

Results from the Experiment Station show that for best germination, crimson clover seed should be dried to moisture contents below 15 per cent before they are stored.

In tests by the station, combine-run crimson clover seed were stored at moisture contents of 29, 21, 15, 12, and 10 per cents from June to November in especially designed chambers that kept the moisture constant. Temperature was not controlled, but was the same that prevails in steel storage bins during the summer. Combine-run seed were divided into two lots and dried to the storage moistures below 19 per cent, one of which was naturally cured in a 2-inch layer in an open steel shed. The other was dried artificially with heated air at 110°F. After curing by either method, the germination was 92 per cent which was initially high when they were placed in storage.



Percentage germination and hard seed of naturally and artificially dried combined crimson clover seed after storage at various moisture contents for 5 months.

Results not reported here show that seed stored with initially low germinations—due to prolonged damp weather during curing or delays in drying after combining—will have much larger losses in germination during storage than seed stored with initially high germinations.

The effects of the various seed moistures after 5 months of storage on per cent germination and hard seed are presented in the accompanying chart. The results show clearly that for high germinating crimson clover seed at planting time, the seed must be stored at moisture contents lower than 15 per cent. Safe storage moisture contents are either 10 or 12 per cent. Seed which are to be in storage longer than 5 months should be dried to 10 per cent moisture content.

The important consideration is to lower the moisture of combine-run seed to the safe storage moisture before the seed are placed in storage. Make plans now to cure your combined crimson clover seed to 12 per cent moisture content or less . . . if damp, cloudy weather prevails after combining, take your seed to an artificially drying plant.

ANOTHER LINK ADDED—The Sears, Roebuck poultry chain in Marion County is one link longer since Ronald and Don Howell have been added to the list of poultry growers. The Hamilton High Sr. 4-H Club brothers have 300 chicks which they are raising for layers. They are off to a good start too, for they have lost only seven of their birds since the project was started. Their best pullets will be selected and entered in the county poultry show next fall. These enterprising young lads are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Howell of Hamilton, Rt. 1.

TWO FOR THE PRICE OF ONE—Percy Mitchell out on Ardmore, Tenn., Rt. 2, says the money he spent breeding one of his dairy cows artificially to a bull in the Auburn stud has really paid off. His cow has twin heifers born on Friday, February 13. Mitchell, a grade B dairyman, likes the artificial breeding program because it gives small herd owners a chance to breed their cows to good bulls without keeping one on the farm.

ANYBODY around Hollins can tell you the home demonstration club is the hub of nearly all this Clay County community's activities.

The most outstanding community project, though, was the presentation of the one-act comedy "Hill Billy Sue," which club members put on for the homefolks and in two adjoining communities.

Not only did working together in presenting the play develop a real fellowship among club members, it also gave the community some wholesome entertainment and was a means of developing friendships among club members in the two other communities—Olive Branch and Highland—where the play was given.

The proceeds from the performance, approximately $60, are being used for club house improvements, contributions to the various national fund-raising campaigns, and financing other community projects.

Members of the cast who presented the play are, left to right, Mrs. J. T. Vernon, a traveling saleswoman; Mrs. Otis Grice, the mountain boy; Mrs. W. J. Mason, as Miss Bonita; Mrs. P. C. Price, Ma Blackmon; Mrs. Troy House, the woman veterinarian; Mrs. Tom Chandler, Uncle Duck Plumer; Mrs. Vergie Lee Mason, the city lawyer's son; Mrs. Maudie Hammonds, Hill Billy Sue, and Mrs. James Reynolds, director of the play.

Other projects sponsored by the club include Vacation Bible School, Rural Life Sunday, making quilts for four orphanages, cooperating with the Hollins P.T.A., giving a shower for the Hollins school lunchroom, sending flowers, food, and cards to families having sickness or death in the community, and compiling a community recipe book called "Hollins Favorite Recipes."

Dale HD Clubs Have Scholarship Fund

THREE loan scholarships of $175 each are available to daughters of Dale County's home demonstration club members and former 4-H Club girls.

The fund, set up by the County HD council, is to be used by successful applicants until they have finished college and have started to work. Then it is to be repaid, without interest.

At present two of the scholarships are being used by Paula Herring of Arguta and Elizabeth Brown of Skipperville.

The first scholarship fund, made available in 1948, was named the Nellie Mims Childree Scholarship Fund in honor of an outstanding HD member.

RAINY DAYS ARE WORK DAYS TOO—When the weather is too bad for outside farm work, Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Crowder spend their time putting the finishing touches to their new home in the Stansel Community of Pickens County. These cabinets Mrs. Crowder is admiring were just finished by the couple at the unbelievable low cost of $15. Many of the ideas for the home have come from programs of the Stansel HD Club, of which Mrs. Crowder is president.

A Good Job

Old Furniture Gets New Look

MANY pieces of furniture in the homes of Hale County home demonstration club members which were once "white elephants" are again useful and attractive. The articles have been rebuilt in the furniture refinishing workshop held at the Vocational Agricultural building in Greensboro on Monday afternoons during February.

Sixteen club members attended the workshop and overhauled pieces of their furniture by removing old varnish, retying springs, and revarnishing and putting on new upholstery.

Pieces of furniture which were refinished include two antique dining room chairs, one club chair, one boudoir chair, one coffee table, one telephone table, one antique Pennsylvania Dutch chair table, one antique lamp table, one Duncan Phyfe lamp table, and a shadow box which was made from an antique clock frame.

JUST LIKE NEW—Hale County home demonstration club members spent several hours reworking pieces of their furniture at a refinishing workshop held in Greensboro recently. These ladies putting finishing touches on a chair are, left to right, Mrs. W. T. Singley, Miss Lutie Easter, Mrs. Joe Barton, and Mrs. Goldie D. Kerr. Mrs. Kerr is home demonstration agent.

IT'S SPRING TIME everywhere and the washing machines in Lamar County have a feeling they want to go places. Therefore, many of them are leaving the front porches and going to the wash room behind the house.

But spring isn't causing the change. This big movement is taking place throughout the county as the result of plans made at the first countywide home demonstration club planning meeting. Nearly 100 farm women from all parts of the county met in Vernon to plan their year's program of work and one of their big objectives is to have all washing machines moved off the front porches and placed behind the homes in a wash house.

Miss Vervil Mitchell, Lamar County's home demonstration agent, says that Mrs. Fletcher Turman, chairman of the committee to promote this project, has reported that 25 farm women are expected to transfer their washing machines to the wash house before the year is up.

Mrs. R. T. Mixon of Vernon, Rt. 2, at right, has led the way in this project for other farm women in Lamar County. Today, she says that a modern wash house that's built for convenience like the one here has simply changed washing from a dreaded chore into "just another job."

To have a permanent record of progress made by home demonstration clubs of Montgomery County, a committee has begun work on a history and scrapbook. From pictures, news stories, and reports collected over the years by home agents, the committee hopes to have a complete history of its club work of the past 36 years.

Individual members will also be called on by the committee for assistance in getting information on club activities. But in the future it will be easier to keep the records straight—a club historian will be elected and assigned this responsibility.

LET'S BROIL STEAK

HOW is the best way to broil a steak? That's an old point homemakers are again debating, now that steak dinners are scheduled on family menus because of the great abundance of beef at lower prices.

Broiling, an ideal way to cook tender beefsteaks, gives an especially fine flavor to meat having enough fat to prevent dryness in cooking. Suited to broiling are the better grades of tenderloin, sirloin, T-bone, rib, and club steaks—all cuts from the more tender muscles of the side of beef. Look for fine-textured lean, well-marbled with fat; and look for red porous bones, which indicate the steak is from young, well-fed animals.

For home-broiling, a steak 1 to 2 inches thick is probably best. Slash fat at the edges of the meat to prevent curling as it cooks. Preheat the broiler and grease the broiler-rack lightly to keep meat from sticking to it.

Important for successful broiling is placing the steak at the right distance from the heat. This calls for judgment. Generally the rule is to have the top of the meat 2 inches from the heat if you want the steak rare, 3 inches if it is to be well-done. Thick steaks should be placed farther from the heat than thin steaks because they need slower cooking. The oven door should be left open or ajar during broiling, not only to allow the cook to keep watch of the browning but also to see that spattering fat doesn't catch fire.

Broil steak until the top side is browned to your liking, season, then turn on the other side. Browning the other side may take less time because the meat is hot when it is turned. If a fork is used to turn, stick it into the fat, not the lean, to keep juices from running out. Turning with tongs may be easier.

No exact broiling time can be given because broiling arrangements differ in ranges, people differ in the doneness they like, and the meat itself differs. But here is an approximate timetable as a guide:

For steak 1-inch thick—rare, time 10 minutes, or 5 minutes for each side; medium, 15 minutes; well done, 20 to 25 minutes.

For steak 1½ inches thick—rare, 15 minutes; medium, 20 minutes; well done, 25 to 30 minutes.

For steak 2 inches thick—rare, 25 minutes; medium, 35 minutes; well done, 45 to 50 minutes.

To save time and dish-washing as well as steak juices, the so-called "sizzling platters" often are used instead of the broiler of the range. These are metal platters, indented to carry juices away from the meat as it cooks yet hold it in the well of the platter. Steak can be cooked and also served on such platters.

Peak marketing season for many vegetables is just around the corner. It's certainly not too early to locate the best market outlets for your spring and summer crops. A friendly personal call on the buyers you expect to deal with may afford an opportunity for a thorough understanding as to what they want, when and how they want delivery, and other factors that you should know before harvest time. Most of the wholesalers or retailers who buy your foods are accustomed to very friendly relations with others who sell to them. If you are to get your share of the dollars they will spend, this is a very important thing for you to do also.

One of Coffee County's top-ranking home demonstration club women is Mrs. Ira Allen. She has held nearly every office during her four years in the Goodman Club.

Since she considers it a treat to work with young people, the farm lady, who has three daughters, is now rural youth chairman in her local club. What's more, she is adult sponsor for the Goodman 4-H neighboraide meetings and one daughter, Tommie, an active 4-H'er, is in charge of the gatherings. Mrs. Allen also works with her community teen-agers in the church.

Besides all this, the Allens are busy finishing last-minute jobs before moving into a new home on their 200-acre livestock farm.

RELEASE OF FOUNDATION SEED OF COMBINE SAGRAIN, a new variety of grain sorghum developed by the Experiment Station, is planned for 1954. Apparently this new variety of grain sorghum is best adapted to southern Alabama. It requires a longer growing period than most varieties now being grown in the state. The variety yields well and is suitable for combining. It lodges less than any other variety tested by the Station. The grain head is loose, which reduces damage caused by insects, diseases, and birds.

CALCIUM MUST BE FED TO HENS in order to produce sound, strong egg shells. Egg shells are about 93 per cent calcium carbonate. Thin soft-shelled eggs and a reduction in number of eggs laid often result from failure to feed enough calcium. Laying hens that are suddenly deprived of calcium will stop laying in 10 to 14 days. Some calcium is added to laying mashes, but additional sources of this mineral should be fed free choice. Such products as marine shells, marble pebbles, limestone or calcium carbonate are commonly used to supply this additional calcium. A hen will eat about 3 pounds of calcium products annually.

VINE-CUTTINGS OF SWEETPOTATOES planted the first week of June produced 35 per cent more No. 1 sweetpotatoes and 17 per cent greater total yield than slips planted at the same time. These are the results of a 3-year study at Auburn and a 2-year study at Atmore.

COWPEA CURCULIO, the cause of wormy peas, can be effectively controlled by dusting the peas at weekly intervals with dusts of 5 per cent DDT or 20 per cent toxaphene. Treatments should be started when the peas begin to bloom. Field peas dusted for control of cowpea curculio should not be eaten as snaps.

TIME TO STOCK BASS. To insure good fishing next summer, now is the time to stock largemouth bass in ponds stocked last fall with bluegills. One hundred bass fingerlings should be added per acre of pond water regularly fertilized. These fingerlings may be obtained through a local county agent or SCS representative or by writing the State Conservation Department.

THE AVERAGE INCREASES IN YIELD of three spring vegetables over a number of years from the use of organic materials (2 tons sericea straw and 6 tons green crotalaria) were 4,217 pounds per acre without irrigation and 6,360 pounds with irrigation.

CULL HARDWOODS CAN READILY BE KILLED WITH AMMATE applied in frills during May. Make single ax frills completely around the tree near the base and put one tablespoonful of Ammate crystals every three inches in the frills. Ax strokes should overlap to assure cutting the inner bark completely around the tree. Small red gums and all sizes of oak die within a few months.

Folks and Things ABOUT TOWN —By Ben

Some folks are born lucky and then some are hardware men. Jimmy Bell is both. In fact he just completed a term as President of the Alabama Retail Hardware Dealers Association that held it's annual convention at Birmingham this week. As a token of their appreciation they presented him with a leather bag Wednesday night. But that wasn't the half of it. They had a drawing it seems and he won a trip with all expenses paid to Miami, Fla. And that ain't all either. Seems they had a second drawing for some reason or other and he won a window fan. It's a darn good thing they held an election for the Mayor's job up there instead of a drawing or Jimmy Bell would have been the Mayor of Birmingham instead of Jimmy Morgan.

Jack Hayes dog, Albino, died last Sunday. Dr. J. Gilbert Hutchinson and the congregation at the First Baptist Church paid their respects at the Sunday night service. Ob had been to church more regularly than many of the congregation and had served his master well for many years. Besides attending Sunday School and Church he also attended meetings of the Board of Deacons of which Jack is a member. Ob was a familiar sight to all residents of our little city and daily we marveled at his intelligence and faithfulness to his duty. We know he is missed terribly by his owner, but many others here will also miss him.

We are going to raid Phillip Eiland's turnip green patch the first thing he knows. He has the nicest little patch just beside the building where he directs the business of the Farmers Marketing Exchange next to the L. & N. Railroad. They're young and tender now and just right for plucking. He can expect to find them gone just any night now.

The Rev. J. H. Aplin of the Assembly of God Church, told us this one Wednesday. An old negro farmer had planted his crop several times and after each planting a rain would come along and wash his seed out of the ground and ruin his prospective crop in general. This had happened several times and one day the old negro was leaning on his hoe handle and looking over what was left of his latest planting when the preacher came along. He unburdened himself to the preacher and the preacher tried to comfort him by telling him that it was all for the best. "The Lord knows what he is doing and it will all come out all right," he told the farmer. "Well, maybe so," replied the old negro, "but he sho don't know nothing about farming."

When William died suddenly the neighbors were shocked, and a kindly woman proceeded to comfort William's wife by describing his good points. "He was such a man of principle," said the neighbor. "And don't I know it," said the woman. Every Saturday night didn't he come home and place his pay envelope in front of me as regular as clock work? Not a night did he miss all the time we were married. "Of course, the envelope was always empty, but it was the principle of the thing!"

Study Club Met Friday

On Friday afternoon at three o'clock the Study Club met at the home of Mrs. Charles Patterson for the last meeting of the Club year. Beautiful floral arrangements were used in the reception room. In the absence of the president, Mrs. J. E. Gowan, Mrs. Joe Mullins presided.

Mrs. Omar L. Reynolds was the program director for the afternoon, and introduced the speaker, the Reverend M. K. Vickers, who addressed the club members on the theme chosen for the May meeting, Our Present Current Situation. Mr. Vickers proved himself very much abreast of the times. He gave a pleasing and comprehensive outline of present day problems and impressed the large number of guests and club members present, with a awareness of our present current situation.

At the conclusion of the program a salad plate was served. Mrs. Patterson was assisted in the gracious receiving of her guests by her mother, Mrs. J. Watts Moore.

Home Demonstration Week Offers Various Activities

For a brief glimpse at some activities taking place in Home Demonstration Clubs we are listing below a few of the things being done with Club projects and individual members:

Cooper Home Demonstration Club — A fairly new Club — has put up a highway sign to direct people to their local church. They want to be proud of their Church when people see it, so the Club is sponsoring the project of churchyard improvement.

Poplar Springs — Has been working on church yard improvement for several years now. During the past year they have purchased shrubbery. Part of their finances have come from the sale of magazine subscriptions.

Mineral Springs — Is carrying out a project of cemetery improvement. In addition to cleaning the cemetery, they are collecting funds and making plans to put an adequate fence around the area.

Thomas Jr., Cane Creek and Fairview Clubs are working with young people to give them opportunities, training and recreation. Mrs. Beulah Williams, County Rural Youth Chairman, reports that her community is to observe Rural Youth Sunday with a special program in four different churches.

Cedar Grove Club — Mrs. Leslie Thornton has purchased some time-saving equipment for her kitchen with profits she has realized from the sale of nylon flowers. She learned to make the flowers at a meeting of her Club. Among the things she has purchased was a mixer and a pressure sauce pan.

Macedonia Club — Members practice being good neighbors to their friends and neighbors in need. One example of their cooperation is on days that the blood center is in the county, all the Club members that can contribute to this project.

Jemison Club — Members enjoy about four family-Club get-together-se a year. Recently they held a spend-the-day meeting with Mrs. I. H. McNeill. Club members furnished the food and a complete meal was eaten by those present.

Thorsby Club — Members enjoy doing little favors, for each other. Each member has a secret friend to whom they give gifts and favors throughout the year. Recently as the result of a tip, Club members showered their hostess, Mrs. Bob Goodgame, with pot holders. Mrs. Goodgame was pleasantly surprised with the clever, useful potholders.

Isabella Club — Mrs. D. O. Manning stays busy with her handy work around her home. Not only does she take pride with her yard and flowers, but she also has completed a hooked rug and chair slip covers for the living room recently.

Cane Creek Club — As a result of hard work and good planning Cane Creek Club is enjoying having their Home Demonstration Club meetings and 4-H Club meetings in their new Club House. Recently the Club members have set shrubbery around the new building.

Wentland Speaks To Adventists

The local congregation of the Seventh-Day Adventists feel that they are to be highly honored Friday evening when Mr. R. H. Wentland, Home Missionary Secretary for the Southern Union speaks to them.

Mr. Wentland made many friends when he was here in January. He will illustrate this lecture with talking pictures. From his eleven years in the mission field, Saigon, Indo-China, he brings many thrilling stories of the Lord's providences. The war makes the work difficult. His son, R. H. Wentland, Jr., is now serving as a minister in Saigon, where he spent many years as a boy.

Mr. Wentland will speak Sabbath morning and again Sabbath afternoon at 5 o'clock. The public is cordially invited.

Coon-On-A-Log Next Sunday

Next Sunday is Coon-On-A-Log Day for coonhunters of Chilton County. At Tiffin's Lake on the Mitchell Dam Road, 2:00 p.m., coonhounds will have their chance to tackle the 'ole "Rac" in the presence of spectators.

The 'Coon will be placed in the center of the lake on a log, and hounds released one at a time for their try at conquering the fighting 'ole varmint.

Immediately following the lakeside festivities, a coonskin will be dragged over the countryside and the hounds released in pairs. A live 'ole 'Coon will be tied up in a tree and the first hound barking "tree" will be the winner.

Seventy percent of the receipts will go to winning hounds.

Refreshments will be served on the grounds for everyone.

All coonhunters of Chilton County are cordially invited to bring the hound, any age, breed or color or condition and prove if he can handle the live 'ole 'Coon.

The event is being staged by the East Alabama Night Hunters Association under the sponsorship of the Chilton County Foxhunters Association.

Boockholdt Asks Employers' Help On Child Labor Law

Young people under 17 years of age who want to work during the summer months should get certificates, J. H. Boockholdt, county superintendent of schools said this week.

Mr. Boockholdt said that the following will issue certificates: Miss Margaret Plott and Miss Louise Foshee, both at Board of Education Office in Clanton.

Under the Alabama Child Labor Law, children under 16 cannot work during school hours. After school hours and during the summer they may do certain kinds of work which will not injure their health, or morals. They must, however, have certificates. There are certain types of employment prohibited for minors under 16 years of age.

To work at such jobs as delivery boys, office boys, in grocery stores, and other work not around machinery, minors 14 and 15 will be issued vacation certificates.

Boys 12 and 13 years of age can work during vacation at certain jobs if they get certificates.

Boys 10 and 11 years of age can carry papers in residential sections, but not sell papers or other articles on the street, if they have a carrier badge.

Boys 12, 13, 14 and 15 years of age can sell papers or magazines in the business section if they have a seller's badge.

Mrs. Daisy Donovan, Chief, Child Labor Inspector, said that every effort was being made to stop the illegal employment of children around sawmills and in factories where they might be seriously hurt or killed.

Children under 16 years of age cannot work before 7 o'clock in the morning and after 7 o'clock at night except boys employed to sell or deliver papers who may work until 8:00 p.m., Mrs. Brown points out.

"Our child labor laws are designed to protect the health and welfare of boys and girls," Mrs. Donovan says. "The legislature passed these laws so that every boy and girl could get an education, and to protect them from working in places which would encourage delinquency.

"We urge all parents, employers and boys and girls to cooperate in protecting the welfare of children," Mrs. Donovan said. "Going to work at too early an age, or doing types of work which may injure the health, or working around machinery may not seem serious at the time. The cost, however, may be less happiness or less opportunity to make a good living in the years ahead."

The Alabama Child Labor Law does not protect the boys and girls engaging in agricultural employment. If such agricultural products are sold in interstate commerce, there are certain Federal regulations which govern this employment. For further information consult your Superintendent of Schools.

Those who hire boys and girls without the necessary certificate of age to legalize their employment are guilty of violating the law and are punishable by a fine, Mrs. Donovan pointed out.

Want A Home Demonstration Club In Your Community?

A number of requests have come to the Home Agent's office during the past year for new Clubs to be organized throughout the County. There are twenty Clubs in the county with a membership of 604. The two Home Agents have contact each month with around 300 of these people. In order to contact more people with Home Demonstration program and organize more Clubs it is necessary that a few requirements be asked of a group wishing to get a Club organized in their community. Here are some of the requirements:

1. Attendance at each Club meeting should average 10.

2. A group of officers should be elected and carry out their duties.

3. Subject leaders for foods, clothing, food preservation, child care, home furnishing, food buying and home management should attend leadership training meetings. One meeting a year is held for each of these leaders when a specialist from Auburn comes to the county.

4. Representatives from Club should attend each of four Home Demonstration Council meetings a year to make county-wide plans for Home Demonstration Club programs and participate in Council activities.

5. Club should sponsor projects for community betterment.

Many people in Chilton County are not reached by the home-making information available through a Home Demonstration Club. It is hoped that several communities can organize a Club in the coming year.

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING

Revenue collected by newspapers for advertising was almost $200,000,000 higher in 1952 than in 1951, according to a recent report by Stewart M. Chambers, chairman of the Board of Directors of the Bureau of Advertising, American Newspaper Publishers' Association.

It is significant to note that with television rapidly and thoroughly entering the advertising field, the volume and revenue of newspaper advertising continues to increase year by year. Mr. Chambers is optimistic about the future for newspapers, believing that continued rapid expansion of the U. S. economy will mean new promise for the advertising business.

Many newspaper men believe that the passing of the peak in the rearmament boom will provide newspapers a period of wide opportunity. Producers will be converting to civilian production and will have to develop markets and sell to the individual, rather than to the Government. This may make for increased newspaper advertising in the year ahead, since peak spending for defense is expected to be reached before this time next year.

FROM DAWN TO DUSK

"As thy days, so shall thy strength be."—Deuteronomy 33:25.

What each day needs that shalt thou ask, each day will set its proper task. (Goethe).

Commencement speakers usually exhibit a passion for prophecy. They are given to advising Young America that the world is lying at its feet, that the future is big with promise, and that about all that is left to be done is to walk in and take possession. The purpose of this brief article is to remind adults as well as young people that the future is composed of ordinary days, and that the use to which one puts each period between the rising and the setting of the sun determines his success or failure during his life-span. It was something like this that our Lord had in mind when He said, "Are there not twelve hours in the day?"

In the Lord's Prayer we are taught to offer the petition, "Give us this day our daily bread." That simply means that we are to look to the providential care of our Maker for support in the performance of our ever recurring duties.

Dr. William Osler in his famous address to the Yale students told of an afternoon that he spent with Walt Whitman. Near the close of the day a group of workman passed the kindly old poet's cottage. After greeting them in his usual friendly way, Whitman said to his visitor, "Ah! the glory of the day's work, whether with hand or brains I have tried:

To exalt the present and the real,
To teach the average man the glory of his daily work or trade."

The daily employment in worthwhile tasks, whether by necessity or otherwise, saves life from the curse of dull monotony. It brings one to the realization that every morning there is a new earth, every evening a new heaven. To the appreciative there is no such thing as "killing time." Opportunity is the handmaid of the industrious who really desire to be of help to others. Neither age, nor infirmity, nor loneliness can impose a handicap upon one who believes that his time is in God's hand, and that contentment is the reward of those who properly use it.

Life is a plain business and our job is to plough a deep straight furrow day by day, leaving it to God to supply the rain and sunshine necessary to mature the crop. That idea was evidently in the mind of the ancient Psalmist when he led the Hebrew hosts in the majestic song the climactic verse of which was, "So teach us to number our days that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom." How can one measure up to God's expectancy? Here is the answer: "As thy days, so shall thy strength be."

My Pet Peeve-

I OPENED one eye and looked at the clock. Jumpin' catfish! It was eight-thirty. Already I was half an hour late for work.

I jumped out of bed and started to dress.

"Time to get up," says I to the wife. "I'm late."

She groaned and turned over, but didn't open her eyes.

"Get up," says I. "It's eight-thirty."

"Go away," says she.

"Please," I begged. "Get up and start the coffee."

"Go away," says she. "Make your own coffee."

"Please," says I. "I'll get fired."

"Who cares," says she.

Frantically I struggled with shoes and socks. "Please, get up and fix the coffee. Just one little cup," I begged.

"Go away," says she.

"You're unreasonable," says I. "I slave to feed you and you won't even make me a cup of coffee."

"You're stupid," says she.

"WHAT!"

"Yeah, Pop," says the oldest boy from the doorway. "This is Saturday."

"Now that you're up," says the wife, "see that the boys have breakfast."

"You knew it all the time," says I.

"Sure," says she. And snuggles down for a long nap.

"I REMEMBER"

BY THE OLD TIMERS

From Mrs. John Pluck, Blairsville, Pennsylvania: I remember when grandfather would have a field of wheat to cut by July 4 the other farmers would come and help all day. The wives would help grandmother cook the big dinner and supper and she would always try to have new potatoes from her garden and young chickens. And in the evening they would dance in the barn.

From Mrs. Katie Cooper, Okmulgee, Oklahoma: I remember when my mother sheared the sheep, washing the wool, and sent it to the cording mill to be corded. Then she would spin the thread to make blankets, gloves, jackets and sweaters for the entire family.

From Mrs. G. E. Alkise, Long Beach, Calif.: I remember when our folks made vinegar by putting water and a piece of brown paper in an empty keg and keeping it warm back of the stove. The brown paper made a jelly like substance called "mother" that made the vinegar.

From Mrs. Frank Steffen, Bowbells, North Dakota: I remember when we lived in Minnesota. I was 15-years-old and my sister seventeen. Our brothers hired us to plow for them so they could get a job on a threshing machine. I plowed with a Sulky plow and sister with a gang plow. We earned five dollars with which we bought some cloth and made our fall outfits.

CONGRESSIONAL Going

Q—If both Hawaii and Alaska become states, who will decide the arrangement of the new stars on our flag?

A—Congress can claim original jurisdiction or originality in setting the location of the stars. In June, 1777, the Continental Congress adopted a resolution saying "the flag of the 13 United States be 13 stripes, alternate red and white, and that the union be 13 stars, white in a blue field, representing a new constellation." But Congress has never passed a law saying specifically where they should be. Two bills have been introduced for realignment of the stars into a pattern of 50.

Q—I know the House has passed a statehood bill for Hawaii, but is any action being initiated to bring Alaska into the union, too?

A—Four days of hearings on bills to give Alaska statehood have been scheduled to start April 14 before the Territories Subcommittee of the House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee. In addition, the Committee plans to hold hearings in principal Alaskan cities in August.

Q—What kind of progress is President Eisenhower making with his legislative proposals?

A—By the end of the first quarter of 1953, the President had won Congressional approval of two of 19 specific legislative proposals. The 83rd Congress had taken no action at all, not even held hearings, on 11 Presidential recommendations for legislation.

Q—Are any representatives of church groups registered as lobbyists?

A—Officials of nearly every major denomination have Washington offices where they can keep close watch on legislative developments. Most of these groups have officials who have at some time registered under the Federal Regulation of Lobbying law.

Q—I understand President Eisenhower has submitted another reorganization plan to Congress. What does this one provide for?

A—April 2 the President sent Congress a plan to reorganize the Office of Defense Mobilization. It would merge the functions of the ODM and the National Security Resources Board and would give ODM permanent status. ODM would direct strategic materials stockpiling, a job now handled by the Departments of Defense and Interior. The ODM plan was the President's third. The first, already approved by Congress, was for a Department of Health, Education and Welfare; the second called for reorganization of the Department of Agriculture.

Sparkman Fights For Housing Program

Senator Sparkman, of Alabama, is urging other Senators to join him in backing President Eisenhower's request for 35,000 low-rent housing units for 1953-54.

Sparkman described as most disappointing the action of the House of Representatives in voting to kill the program. He charged that the Republican-controlled House had thereby repudiated the President, and had voted to kill a program which has "been a boon to builders and lenders of this country, and has made possible decent shelter for thousands of families in Alabama and all over the country who otherwise would still be living in run-down shacks or in slums."

Senator Sparkman stated that 98 cities and towns in Alabama have either constructed or begun construction of low-rent housing projects, or have been allocated units on which to begin construction after June 30 of this year. He said that he had checked with the Public Housing Administration and had been informed that the Alabama projects, including more than 5500 units, on which construction is to begin after June 30 will have to be cancelled unless the Senate reverses the action of the House.

Following is a list of Alabama towns, and the number of units involved, that would be affected:

Abbeville (40), Adamsville (115), Aliceville (44), Altoona (34), Anniston (136), Arab (32), Attalla (110), Berry (24), Birmingham (2000), Brookside (6), Carson (10), Chatom (22), Collinsville (2), Crossville (6), Demopolis (100), Elba (34), Enterprise (50), Florala (42), Florence (100), Gardendale (62), Gadsden (200), Geneva (34), Graysville (74), Haleyville (8), Hanceville (12), Harpersville (16); Hartford (34), Heflin (34), Kimberly (62), Leeds (18), Leighton (30), Lineville (28), McIntosh (10), Millry (8), York (18), Mobile (207), Montgomery (910), Mulga (23), Oneonta (10), Opp (60), Pell City (48), Piedmont (36), Ragland (26), Reform (6), Scottsboro (100), Sun Flower (10), Talladega (196), Trussville (34), Vincent (12), Warrior (74), Winfield (4), Yellow Pine (10).

FOR GOOD ROADS . . . Francis V. Dupont, Federal public roads commissioner, testifies before House public works subcommittee on nation's highways.

"It would be unjust and unfair," Sparkman declared, "not to permit these towns and cities to proceed with their plans, and thereby enable many families to have better homes and better surroundings.

"As the Alabama League of Municipalities recently declared, "No program of the Federal Government is more important to our municipalities—to our Alabama Communities—than the low-rent housing program."

Senator Sparkman was author of the Housing Act of 1949 which, among other provisions, included the low-rent program. Under the Act, low-rent projects have to be initiated by local governing authorities, and are also administered by local authorities.

Senator Taft, Majority Leader of the Senate, and one of the leading sponsors of the low-rent housing program has given assurance that he will fight to restore the 35,000 units requested by President Eisenhower.

CONCERN is being expressed in many quarters about the nation's economy. The question has been asked: Will peace, if it comes, also mean depression?

It is generally believed, Congressional Quarterly reports after an extensive survey of federal agencies, that the remainder of 1953 will see a healthy economy, although U. S. economy has been closely attuned to the defense program. Cutbacks in that program will mean some economic adjusting, but it should not mean a depression in 1953.

The survey, however, indicated that the prospects for 1954 are less certain, and that there may be a major test of the nation's economic strength in 1955, when defense spending is expected to level off.

It is the projected transition from a defense to a civilian economy that marks 1955 as a crucial year. A recession would be entirely possible if civilian markets are unable to expand enough to take up the slack left by a decline in the defense build-up, Congressional Quarterly reports.

Peace in Korea might also mean lower taxes, and this would help ease business and the consumer over the drop in demand and in available money. The trend could also include an increase in public works construction.

But the years after 1953 will present economic problems to industry, the consumer and government alike.

● Meanwhile, the world watched for new Russian peace bids and heard President Eisenhower outline a plan for peace. The President in a speech before the American Society of Newspaper Editors challenged the Russians to end the Korean War, agree to disarmament and the unification of Korea and Germany and to prove their peaceful intentions.

The speech is being called "massive and magnificent" and is being applauded in the capitals of the free world. In it Eisenhower warned that America will speed its rearmament drive on "all fronts" if Russia fails to make prompt response.

● On the Korean front Chinese and U. N. officers were attempting to get full-scale peace talks underway again. But wise observers were pointing out that the Reds have not backed down from their demands that all prisoners must be returned, whether they want to or not, and that the United States maintains its principle of voluntary return which mired the talks last October.

If the Communists will agree on a neutral country to take custody of some 50,000 prisoners the Allies say refuse to return to Red rule then there is a chance for peace in 1953. If not, the situation in the next few months may become more serious than ever before.

● As a final note, the free world is pointing to the latest breach of conduct by the Reds in Korea. The Reds used convoy routes over which they were moving Allied sick and wounded to move military supplies. It is reported they mingled the trucks so the supplies would not be attacked by U. N. planes.

It only points out again the belief of the free world, you can't trust the Communists under any circumstances.

Korean Veterans Briefed On Discharge Procedure

Montgomery, Ala. — "Like counting the buttons on your blouse" is the way the steps which should be taken by Korean Veterans following discharge is summed up by the Alabama Department of Veterans' Affairs in a statement released today. "A possible nearly $6,000 per veteran is at stake, including education and training benefits, unemployment compensation, mustering out payments, loan assistance and the like," the statement continues, "but these benefits must be safeguarded."

"The magic key which unlocks the storehouse is the honorable discharge certificate or separation papers. Once lost or destroyed, exact duplicates can never be obtained, hence the first step is to have these valuable papers recorded," advised the Department. In Alabama, this may be done without cost by the Probate Judge of the veteran's home county. After being recorded, photostatic copies should be used when needed and the originals safely stored. Certified or photostatic copies will be provided free if required in connection with claims for benefits with the Veterans' Administration. If the veteran expects to utilize education and training rights, the next step is to select the school or training establishment. He should look around and choose wisely on the basis of comparison of tuition rates and quality of instruction, remembering that he may make but one change of program. If desired, he may have professional counseling from the Veterans Administration, or take guidance from the volunteer advisement groups set up in each county. Information concerning either is available at all county offices of the Department of Veterans' Affairs. Korean veterans have two years from date of discharge in which to apply for educational benefits.

The next step is to notify their former employer, if employed before entering service and the old job is desired back. Korean veterans have re-employment rights.

Although present-day veterans have 120 days after separation to take out the low-cost government insurance which is available, they are advised to do so promptly after returning home. VA installation and offices of the Department of Veterans' Affairs will assist at no cost.

A most important early step, if the veteran was injured in line of duty or incurred disease while in the service, is to file claim for service-connection. Should service records fail to show the disease or disability, affidavits can be secured now from comrades in arms who remember the particulars. This evidence may prove most helpful and might be extremely difficult to obtain after a lapse of time.

If the veteran has appointed an attorney-in-fact to handle business and personal affairs while in service, he will probably want to give consideration to revoking this authority now as another step in his return to civilian life. After discharge or separation, the veteran should notify his local draft board, providing the current permanent home address.

"These steps 'like buttons on a blouse' will help materially in a neat and orderly transition back to civilian life and will help to fully protect the veteran's rights," the statement concludes.

Within Coosa County lies Weogufka State Park which offers an abundance of recreational opportunities.

ALABAMA HIGHLIGHTS

Coosa County was created by the Legislature on December 18, 1832, from land obtained by the Creek Cession. Lexington, now extinct and a part of the Crumpler plantation, was the first County seat. In 1835 Rockford was chosen the County seat and remains as such to the present time.

Coosa County is rich in aboriginal history by the evidence of primitive settlements. Many of the Creeks and place names suggest occupancy by the Upper Creeks from a remote period. In 1540, DeSoto's expedition passed through the County and stopped eight days at Itawa, or Hatchett Creek. Numerous objects of aboriginal nature have been picked up in all parts of the County. A very fine collection of these objects brought together by the late Mr. John K. McEwen of Rockford, is now on exhibit at the State Department of Archives and History.

Coosa County was the site of many aboriginal towns. Among these were Itaba or Hatchett Creek, four miles north of Rockford. This was a town of great antiquity and when DeSoto visited it with his invading army in 1540, he was detained there for a week by the overflow of the Coosa River.

Others were Lalokalka, meaning "fish separated from," located on Hatchatchee Creek; Opil'ako, meaning "Big Swamp," located on Pitchlocco Creek; and Olitutchina, meaning "Three Islands," was an Upper Creek town. Then there was Sakapatayi which was situated on the Socatatoy branch of Hatchett's Creek a few miles west of Kellyton.

At the last P.-T.A. meeting several book reviews were given by students. Those taking part were: First Grade, Walter Graham and Edd Clapp; Fourth Grade, Tommy Watson and Howard Graham; Fifth Grade, Nancy Daniel and Ollis Jean Littlejohn; Sixth Grade, Sandra Day; Ninth Grade, Betty Barnes.

All these students expressed their appreciation for the new library books. There is such a wide selection now that every student can find one to suit his particular taste.

Officers for next year were elected: President, Mr. Billy Dennis; Vice-President, Mrs. Edd Clapp; Secretary and Treasurer, Miss Martha Alice Smith.

The past term was a good one under the leadership of Mrs. Sammie Begue and her committees. Under their direction a music teacher was employed and a new piano bought.

The Sr. II Class would like to take this opportunity in behalf of the school to thank Dr. and Mrs. H. M. Nix, the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the Ladies Auxiliary to the Veterans of Foreign Wars for the flag and flag pole and the very impressive program that was presented in dedication of the flag.

Frances Reynolds, Frances Thomas, Blanche Mitchell, Jane Shanks, Frances Watson, Delene Hampton, Marcelle Hampton, Marie Graham, Alvis Aldridge, Johnnie Potts, Margaret Clapp, Daisy Bolding, Jessie Gillespie, Blanche Dennis, Nettie Shanks, Earline Higginbotham, Wilma Rucker, Annie L. Potts, Eloise Latham, Hazel Kelley, Lily Hathcock, Grace Crumpton, Bee M. Cobern, Bobby Graham, Van Potts, Ed Clapp, Perry Thomas, Gene Hathcock, George Gillespie, Joe Kelley, Buck Burnett, Billy Dennis, Quinton Mitchell, Bill Hampton, Theran Watson, Newt Aldridge, Hershel Shanks, Frank Cowen, Curtis Rucker, Woodrow Latham, Paul Compton, Abney Brown, Howard Chism, Cecil Powell, Ira Cox, Wesley Payne, Herbert Walker, Willie Parrish.

Since the flag and flag pole came the boys and girls have been deeply conscious of the fact that we live in a country where freedom rules, where each individual decides what he will do with his life. As Old Glory waves proudly over our campus we pause each day to send up a silent prayer of gratitude for our many blessings. Before she came to us she was flown over the Capitol Building in Washington for one entire day. Now she has come to visit us—not for a day or a year, but for always we trust.

AAUW Fetes Senior Girls Of County With Garden Picnic

One of the lovliest events of the Spring season was the picnic luncheon on May 1, 1953, when the American Association of University Women entertained the high school senior girls from over Chilton County and their sponsors. The picnic was held on the lovely, comfortable lawn of the L. H. Bodden home.

As each of the seventy-nine radiant and youthful guests arrived she was received and greeted at the front of the lawn. As each registered she was pinned with a card containing her class colors, her name, and school. For a mixer each girl was given a bingo card with squares to be filled in with autographs and which they used later to play a game of "autograph bingo."

The May Day theme was used throughout the lawn decorations. The center of interest was a May Pole which was made with the different class colors. There were: Pink and green for the Jemison High School and the Thorsby Institute; wine and white for the Chilton County High School; gold and white for Isabella; red and white for Maplesville, and rainbow colors for Verbena.

Glass and wrought iron tables, decorated with large Spring bouquets underneath were placed under the lofty trees. On the tables were arranged platters of tasty sandwiches and salads and a daisy-topped lazy-susan filled with relishes. The May Day theme was further carried out in the individual cakes which were made in the form of May baskets and decorated with mint florets.

Following the luncheon the guests enjoyed playing a game of "Autograph Bingo" of which Nelda Sue Childress of Jemison was the winner.

Section 3. Provided further that in Civil action, in said Court, where the amount claimed in the complaint or the value of the property involved, does not exceed the sum of $500.00, exclusive of interest and costs, shall be tried in said Court without a jury, and appeals in such cases shall be as provided by law to the Circuit Court of Chilton County.

Tribute To Mother—

Mother's Day is one of our very sacred days — the oldest day set aside for us to honor. God really set aside Mother's Day for He made Eve for Adam, and Eve is the mother of all living beings. But it took our law-making bodies in recent times to designate a certain day in each year to be known as Mother's Day. Credit for the founding of Mother's Day is usually given to Miss Anna Jarvis of Philadelphia, Pa. She suggested the wearing of a white carnation in memory of a deceased mother, and a red one in tribute to a living one.

To you who have a mother living, you should be very thankful and hold her in the highest honor as motherhood is the most sacred event to any woman.

Mothers have made a great sacrifice that our country may be a place of worship and peace; that we may enjoy security. For her love given so abundantly and for her patience so sorely taxed, we give thanks for our finest gift—Mother.

Homemaking II Class At Maplesville

The Hmemaking II Class of Maplesville High School enjoyed an interesting talk last Thursday by Mayor V. B. McCain. This class has begun a study of home care of the sick and first aid. Mayor McCain spoke to the class on the progress our Young Incorporation, Maplesville, has made in maintaining healthful conditions for its citizens. He also emphasized the importance of proper garbage disposal, rat extermination campaigns, and other sanitary provisions.

The class was very interested in Mayor McCain's discussion on the need for a healthful water supply for a community. At the conclusion of this discussion he took the class to the town's water works and explained in simple but very detailed form how Maplesville is supplied with a safe and adequate water supply Mayor McCain expressed the need of every individual assuming his share of the responsibility in maintaining health and cleanliness.

The members of the class who enjoyed this interesting discussion led by Mayor McCain were: Artie Hathcock, Marjorie McAfee, Mabel Motley, Bobbie Nell Patterson, Mattie Ruth Rush, Mary Charles Rush, Barbara Sewell, Dorothy Smith, Frances Walker and the home economics teacher, Miss Martha Alice Smith.

Alabama Deep Sea Rodeo July 24-26

Mobile, Ala. — Roy H. Martin, nationally famous sportsman and holder of seven world fishing records, will be the official judge of the 1953 Alabama Deep Sea Fishing Rodeo.

Martin, an outdoors writer, salt water fishing expert, and professional fishing Rodeo judge from Panama City, Fla., will be at the Rodeo with headquarters at historical Dauphin Island on a return engagement, having served as judge of the 1952 Alabama fishing festival.

Gus Woolford, Rodeo president, has pointed out that "the Alabama Deep Sea Fishing Rodeo committee is very fortunate in having Mr. Martin, one of the nation's top fishing experts, as judge for the 1953 event. Indications are that he will have plenty to do since record crowds are expected and more fishermen mean more fish to be judged."

Approximately $8,000 in prizes will be offered this year for outstanding catches and Woolford has announced that upward of 2,000 fishermen will be wetting their lines in the Gulf of Mexico during the Rodeo, scheduled on the week end of July 24-26.

Hill Says Nation Is On Road To Higher Interest Rates

Senator Lister Hill has charged the Administration with starting the nation on the "road to higher interest rates and tighter credit." Hill cited the recent action of the Treasury Department in raising the interest rate from 2½ to 3¼ per cent on a billion dollar issue of Government bonds. He declared that one immediate effect of the action was to raise to the highest point since 1933 the interest cost to the Government. "On this one bond issue, the American people will have to pay additional interest charges of 7½ million dollars a year for the next 30 years," Hill said in a statement. He added:

"This is not the most serious effect of the higher interest rate. The Government's action set off a chain reaction in the private banking industry. The big banks in New York and many other large banks throughout the country immediately followed suit and raised their interest rates to the same figure on prime commercial loans — to the highest rates in 19 years," Hill continued:

"The pressure is on to raise interest rates on GI loans and FHA home loans and increases are predicted within the next few days. The Commodity Credit Corporation has already raised its interest rate on price support loans on this year's crops from 3½ to 4 per cent and there is pressure to raise the cost of farm credit all along the line. The 2 per cent interest rates that have been in effect on REA and rural telephone loans may soon be a thing of the past. Higher interest with tight money has already caused a sharp drop in home building," Hill continued:

"The farmer who wants to borrow money to buy a farm or to improve his farm or to buy farm equipment may soon expect to pay higher interest rates. The business man who needs a loan to expand his business or to buy new equipment and the family who wants to build a home or to buy a car, radio, television set, or a refrigerator on the installment plan will have to pay a higher rate of interest."

Of the 270,359,176 bushels of 1952-crop corn put under the price support program through March 15, a total of 250,218,066 bushels was in farm storage loans.

There will be quartets from several places. Rebecca Hardy and her sister, Hilda, will be present to sing. All the old members, friends and relatives of Mulberry and her people are invited to attend.

Please take notice, we need 100 more books in our library for our young people. If you have any you can donate, they will certainly be appreciated. We will take a free-will offering any time you have it to give to buy books. Reading a good book is building a good character.

Pretty "Foxy" Terrier

Talking about dogs the other night—and Sandy Johnson topped everything off with a tall story about his fox terrier, "Boscum."

According to Sandy, "Comes bird season and that dog won't stir if I take down my rifle. Same if it's deer season and I go for my shotgun—he won't move, but he's scratching at the door if I so much as look at my rifle!"

One day, Sandy decided to fool him. He took down both his shotgun and his rifle — and swish, Boscum was on his way! So Sandy put the guns back and took out his fishing rod. He went outside and there was Boscum—digging like crazy for worms!

From where I sit, a dog that can outguess humans is as rare as a human that can outguess other humans. For instance, I like a glass of beer with lunch but I wouldn't think of pouring you one without first asking. Everybody has preferences—and it's finding out what they are and respecting them that keeps freedom from "going to the dogs."

Lutheran Church News—

The Service 11:00.
Sunday School 10:00.
Visitors welcome.

Our congregation is setting aside the entire month of May as "evangelism month" in which we shall endeavor to reach and win the unsaved for Christ and His Church.

Evangelism is not an option or luxury for the church; it is a Divine requirement. That was our Lord's final commission to the apostles.

The Lutheran Church teaches that every man is created in the image of God and has a soul that God loves and would save. No person has ever been so deep in sin that he could not be rescued by the Holy Spirit through faith in Christ. If you would have that peace that passes all understanding, then come humbly to the Cross and accept Christ as your all-sufficient Saviour.

If you have a personal problem, or if you are seeking a church home, the Lutheran Church and its pastor stand ready and willing to render any assistance that you might need. Please feel free to call or write us at any time, day or night.

Don't forget to tune in the Lutheran Hour on WKLF, Saturday afternoons at 4 o'clock; and This Is The Life Sunday evenings at 6 o'clock on Channel 13. I am sure that you will receive a blessing from either of these programs.

Bob Taber Resigns WKLF Staff; Accepts Position With Chilton County News Beginning June 1st

R. M. Tucker, editor of the Chilton County News, has announced that Bob Taber, general manager of the local radio station for the past four years, will join the staff of the Chilton County News.

"Bob Taber's vast experience both as a former newspaperman and a radio man will add greatly in making the Chilton County News a bigger and better newspaper in it's contribution to the City of Clanton and to Chilton County. We feel that we can be of greater assistance both to our advertisers and our readers with the acquiring of Bob Taber's long experience as a newspaperman," said Mr. Tucker.

Bob Taber has had some 15 years experience working on daily newspapers in upstate New York before entering radio as a Director of Special Events and News. In 1942 he entered the U. S. Armed Forces, serving until 1946 in the Infantry, and being overseas for nearly two of those years. He served in the ETO, landing in France shortly after the invasion, and seeing service on into Germany.

Following his discharge from the Army, Bob returned to Syracuse, N. Y., to re-enter the radio field. Shortly thereafter he moved South to become manager of Radio Station WFEB, Sylacauga, Ala. He served in this capacity until four years ago when he came to Clanton as manager of Radio Station WKLF.

Since his coming to the local radio station, it has progressed until it now is housed in a brand new building and has only just recently started full-time operation by installing a new transmitter to operate as WKLF-FM.

Since coming to Clanton, Bob Taber has been very active in civic affairs, having held two different offices in the Clanton Lions Club an dis now just completing a full term as Secretary of the Chilton County Chamber of Commerce. He is also a Mason.

While serving as manager of the local radio station his policy has been that of full cooperation with all civic, religious and welfare groups in the county. He has given freely of his time to all organizations and served one year as chairman of the Peach Festival, and is a former chairman of the Christmas Chest.

AAUW CALLS FOR CITIZEN OF BUDGET APPROPRIATIONS FOR UNITED NATIONS

Washington — Citizen action in support of the 1954 State Department budget appropriations for the United Nations has been called for by the American Association of University Women, Dr. Hallie Farmer, Montevallo, Alabama, chairman of the AAUW Legislative Program Committee, announced today. These appropriations are now being considered by the House and Senate.

In a letter to AAUW Legislative and international relations chairmen in 1,230 communities, the two AAUW committees in these fields called for individual and group action, saying:

"If you are prepared to act, write to your own Senators and Congressmen today, and outline for them the thought of your own group on the importance of adequate appropriations for this tremendously important organization. . .A vocal minority may convince Congress that the entire country is opposed to the United Nations. It is up to us and other interested citizens to correct this erroneous impression."

AAUW chairmen were informed that unless there is citizen support of the U. N. and its affiliated agencies, it appeared that the 1954 budget as submitted by President Eisenhower and Secretary Dulles would be cut. "As small a cut as $325,000 could eliminate the UNESCO Relations staff which also serves as the Secretariat for the U. S. National Commission for UNESCO," the letter pointed out, warning that "such a cut would cripple United States participation in UNESCO." The AAUW is represented on the U. S. Commission for UNESCO.

Since the founding of the United Nations, delegates to the AAUW biennial conventions have voted enthusiastic support of the U. N. The 1951 AAUW convention underscored this wholehearted support by voting not only "effective participation in" but "strengthening of" the U. N. and its affiliated agencies.

TRAIN HITS TRUCK CAB; NO INJURIES

A large gasoline truck cab, driven by Roy Downs, was hit by the L. & N. Sunday afternoon at Mims Crossing, but luckily no one was injured.

Downs had left the gasoline tank at Glenn's Store where he parks it every night and was driving home when his truck stalled on the L. & N. tracks. He jumped from the cab and tried to flag the train, but because of a sharp curve there the train was upon the truck before it had time to stop.

The cab was knocked 35 yards by the impact.

Application For Proof Of Age At Census Bureau

A revised application form for use of persons seeking to establish proof of age or citizenship through personal Census records is now available at the Census Bureau's district in Clanton, according to District Supervisor, Mary G. Auburtin.

The revised form is designed to encourage applicants to use the Censuses of 1880, 1900 and 1920, if possible, when requesting searches of the voluminous census records. Officials point out that information from these Censuses can be furnished more rapidly because the records for these years have been card indexed. Because of the comprehensive index, information can be provided in most instances if the applicant furnishes only his name, the name of the city or county and State in which he was living and the name of the head of the household in which he was residing. Searches of the card index of these censuses can be conducted five times faster than by the conventional method of looking through the original records.

Persons needing information from the Censuses of 1910, 1930, 1940 and 1950—if residing in a city at the time these censuses were taken—should furnish the house number, name of the street, city(county and State, and the name of the parent or head of the household with whom living. If residing in a small town; they should give all available information as to cross-streets, road names, name of township in which residence was located and any other available pertinent data. Rural residents are asked to furnish the rural route number and also the distance and direction of the residence from the nearest town.

Sprinkle sand or sawdust on the steps of newly painted stepladder before it dries. It costs nothing; takes only a minute to do and it may prevent a serious accident.

Large Payroll At Stake-

Chance H-W Chair Company To Move Because Of Water Shortage

Clanton and Chilton County stand a very good chance of losing a $2000-a-week payroll while over 70 men and women stand an excellent chance of losing their jobs.

That is the indication now as Mr. Troy Maddox, one of the partners of the H-W Chair Factory revealed late the week end that the plant has had strong offers to move to other locations within the state.

In revealing this information, Mr. Maddox stated that one community even went so far as to offer tree land, building and many of the facilities if the H-W Chair Company would move only half of their operation.

Mr. Maddox further revealed that the owners of the H-W Chair Factory are very seriously considering moving a portion or all of their operation to a location where a very serious water [illegible] Mr. Maddox said that the Chilton County News over the week end that expansion of the present facilities is very much needed, but that without the necessary water this was impossible. He said that the company is contemplating installing large steam benders and kilns. He also stated that his present workers do not have the necessary drinking water nor the right sanitation.

The company official also stated that he and other officials had been to the city in an attempt to get the city to furnish the necessary water, but that so far he had been unable to get an answer from them. He said that the present plant location is approximately 2000 feet from the city water main and he felt that the City would get their money back for the necessary expenditure within a very few months through the sale of the water to the plant.

When asked about the situation, Mayor C. Fenn Jones told the Chilton County News that the plant was outside the city limits and for that reason the city officials could not under the law spend the city taxpayers' money for this project. However Mayor C. Fenn Jones stated Monday that it was agreeable with him for the City to furnish the labor to run city water to the factory if the Councilmen would go along with him.

The H-W Chair Factory employs over 70 Chilton County people on a full time basis with a net earning of over $2000 per week. At the same time they employ five transfer trucks and over 40 individually-owned trucks are constantly working out of the plant.

Mr. Maddox said he felt that the H-W Chair Factory operation was some different than others in this area in as much as the money derived from the sale of their products was obtained in other parts of the country and brought back here to Chilton County to be spent. Mr. Maddox stated that nearly all of the materials used in the H-W Chair operation were obtained in the county. The company has grown to twice it's original size in the past year and a half.

Mr. Maddox said that he and the other officials of the company did not want to move their plant from this area, but that it is very necessary that they expand. He said that if water could not be gotten to the plant, the plant would have to go to water.

Keep Cattle Parasites Down To Raise Profits

Auburn, Ala. — With lower cattle prices, Alabama farmers need to be extra careful this year to protect their animals against parasites, both internal and external. Parasites reduce rate of beef gains—and the cattleman's profits.

All cattle should be sprayed as soon as fly numbers begin to build up, says W. H. Gregory, API Extension livestock man. He advises that a good spray material to use is one containing both lindane and toxaphene. Care should be taken to mix it exactly as directions on the bottle specify.

Additional sprayings should be given during the summer as often as flies become numerous, says Gregory. Usually this will be from every four to eight weeks, depending on the weather.

"Calves that do not appear to be doing well should be examined for internal parasites. If parasites are found, the calves should be given a dose of phenothiazine," adds Gregory.

If stove polish is moistened with vinegar instead of water, the stove will have a much brighter polish.

Save All Seed Possible For Planting And Marketing

Auburn, Ala. — When a farmer grows his own legume and grass seed, he usually plants more acres to these crops and uses heavier rates of seeding.

That's a good point to keep in mind when harvesting seed this spring, believes Ralph Jones, API Extension seed specialist. He is urging farmers to harvest and properly care for every pound of seed possible.

"You can always sell any surplus not needed for your own use," Jones adds.

More Water Coming-

Mayor Fenn Jones Announces Contract For New Filter Units

Mayor C. Fenn Jones has announced that contracts totaling $125,000 have been signed between the City of Clanton and the Goodwin Engineering Company for the construction of two more filtering units at the City Water Works.

At the same time he also announced that some of the pipe has already been received for the laying of a six-inch water main to Candler Terrace.

In making these announcements the Mayor told the Chilton County News that it was the plan of the City Council to give more water pressure to the whole of West End and that an elevated water tank would be erected in that area soon for that purpose.

Mayor Jones said that he and the Council, in expanding the water system, were attempting to bring better fire protection to the people of Candler Terrace.

In announcing the plans for the filtering units Mayor Jones reported that the increase would double the water supply for Clanton. He said that Yellow Leaf Creek has plenty of water and that over 1,800 gallons pass through the creek per minute.

Mayor Jones also reported that he had recommended to the City Council that they build living quarters at the City Water Works for the operator that is in attendance. The Goodwin Engineering Company is the same organization that did the natural gas construction for the City.

Mow pastures before the early weed crops mature seed. Weeds are costly in the pasture because they interfere with grazing and take moisture and plant food needed by the desirable grazing plants.

Plans Being Made For A Larger, Better Fair

Plans for a bigger-and-better-than-ever Chilton County Fair were made last week at the regular monthly meeting of the Chilton County Agricultural Council in the Judge of Probate Office. At the same time Agricultural Council Chairman Arthur W. Headley announced that the Fair would run five days this year, from August 25 through August 29th.

Mr. Headley told the Chilton County News that the Fair this year would include many different features as well as all of those that have been included during the past sessions. He announced that a contract had been signed with the Lee Amusemet Company to furnish all kinds of rides and amusements at night. The Fair will be conducted again this year at the Clanton City Airport.

As the announcement for the fair was being made, Probate Judge Dave Tingle also announced that the County will soon begin paving operations on the Airport Road out as far as the airport hangar.

Mr. Headley further announced that plans are going ahead for having the selections of this years' Cotton and Dairy Queens to be made at the Fair. The Fair will also include many educational and commercial exhibits, competitive dairy show as well as hogs, beef and sheep shows. This years' plans also call for storing the animals in tents outside of the main hangar. The show ring only will be inside the big building.

Nearly all of the Agricultural agencies in the county will be represented at this year's County Fair, said Mr. Headley. He said that there would be exhibits by the 4-H Clubs in the county, as well as the FFA and several of the schools from throughout the county will also enter exhibits this year. The General Chairman also announced there would be at least two exhibits by the Home Demonstration Clubs, as well as the Veterans Farm Training Agency, Soil Conservation, Forestry and the Chilton County Experimentation Station.

Assisting Mr. Headley in making this years' plans for the Fair are: M. R. (Red) Glasscock, dairy; Ralph Mims, beef cattle; Dan Mims, hogs; Mr. Headley and Mr. Glasscock, sheep; Bob Taber, publicity, and C. C. (Chick) Carleton and George Smith, the booth committee.

Last years' Fair was only a three-day affair.

Watch For Bugs In Trees Damaged By Storm, Fires

Timber owners should be on the lookout for bugs working in storm damaged or burned tres.

Bugs like weakened trees and often will complete the job of killing them before they have a chance to recover. says I. R. Martin, API Extension forester. He suggests that infested trees be removed and sold or cut for wood before the bugs have a chance to migrate to surrounding timber.

Never fasten silverware with rubber bands or keep rubber articles near it, as this tends to darken silverware.

WANTED: HOME GARDENS

The people of the United States will plant 20,000,000 home gardens for the purpose of increasing food production.

It is pointed out that hundreds of millions of human beings are living on a bare subsistence diet and that every bit of food produced in Chilton County gardens mean that much food available for such men, women and children. Food, it is pointd out, can be a powerful ammunition.

It is quite possible for many families in urban areas to increase their food supplies by taking advantage of unused space in and around their homes. Even the inexperienced can acquire necessary information from local agricultural experts and, altogether, the production of foodstuffs will amount to something in the battle against world starvation.

CONGRATULATIONS, FTA

Alabama has been named the Banner FTA State in the nation, according to announcement received from Washington. The National Education Association yearly selects for this honor the state which has made greatest progress in the devlopment of Future Teachers' clubs and chapters.

Recognition of Alabama's program of teacher recruitment and of training of future teachers resulted from the organization of 9 FTA chapters in the state-supported colleges and of 110 clubs in high schools. Total membership in the state is 1,600. A program of activities in the organizations was climaxed by a state meeting of club and chapter representatives in March, attended by 600 students.

Officers for the state organization are Bill Raye, student at Troy State Teachers College. Shades Valley High School, Jefferson County, will name the vice-president; Dothan High School, the secretary; and Piedmont High School, the historian. Mrs. Callie G. Locke, director of professional relations, Alabama Education Association, is executive secretary-treasurer, and Dr. Harris Harvill, Department of Education, Troy State Teachers College, is state sponsor.

IT'S AN OLD, OLD BRIDGE

It can happen to you-

Mental Illness Is No Respector Of Persons

(By William R. Morgan)

One desperately needed program that is often shrouded with superstition and ignorance, is mental health. I say ignorance and superstition because of the unjustified stigma that is so often lodged against the mentally ill. It is perfectly "respectable" to have a disease like cancer, pneumonia, flu or most other physical disorders; but not mental illness, which is not a subject to be discussed.

That attitude has been a millstone around the neck or any constructive program designed to combat mental illness. People who have nervous disorders are just as sick as though they have a disabling physical disease, and they need professional and often hospital care.

I say that "it can happen to you" because we are all subject to the strains and stresses of every day living. Some make the grade; others don't. The reason is that some are just better equipped mentally and emotionally than others; not so much through heredity as through environment and training.

Mental disorders strike every type of individual and every layer of society. Mental patients consist of: Black and white, rich and poor, rural and urban, young and old; in fact, no person in any walk of life is immune, Another appalling fact that should cause us to stop and think soberly is that recently published medical reports tell us that one-half of all hospital beds in this country are occupied by mental patients.

The time to put out a fire is before it starts. If a person delays treatment until a full-blown neurosis has developed, treatment then is difficult, time consuming, and there is no assurance of a cure. Don't shut your problems up within yourself. Seek counsel from your pastor, doctor, or some sympathetic friend so that they can offer you guidance.

Next week, I would like to discuss "Sexual Misinformation—A Major Cause of Mental Illness."

IN-SERVICE EDUCATION

In-Service education programs have increased greatly in the past year. There are many more places asking for help than can possible be reached. The function of in-service education for school personnel is the improvement of the quality of performance of an individual on the job, so that he will become more effective in creating an environment where pupils learn. The teacher, administrator, office worker, supervisor, custodian, lunch room operator, or bus driver is most effective as he retains the learning attitude.

The personnel of the Division assists in a number of in-service programs. This work entails working with planning committees, special groups, and general teachers meetings.

In-service education programs should be encouraged in all counties as it is evident that the counties and cities which have well organized programs are making progress much faster and more effectively.

The state department personnel things through the type of services which can be offered to school systems in this area, it is one of the most effective ways of working with school systems.

THE DIABETIC CHILD

Diabetes in children is not too common, but it does occur and warrants attention so that its victims may be taught and helped to lead a comparatively normal life. With the cooperation of the parents this can be done.

The earliest indicative symptom of diabetes is weight loss in spite of an abnormally large appetite, accompanied by an excessive thirst. Diabetic children often have a pinched, hungry expression. They may have dry, itching skin, Furuncles or boils are frequent, as well as other skin infections, all of which have a tendency to spread rapidly.

Acidosis is the first symptom in some children with diabetes. The condition may begin with weakness, nausea and vomiting. These may be abdominal pain, often severe; or there may be general aches and pains in all the muscles. A drowsiness develops and finally the child lapses into unconsciousness. The skin and mouth are dry and parched. The breathing is rapid, labored and very deep; and the breath has a sweet, fruity odor. When these changes occur they form a serious complication that requires engergetic emergency treatment.

Diet is important in the care of the juvenile diabetic. It should be balanced sufficiently to provide all the required energy the child needs plus enough for growth and development.

Practically every child with diabetes requires insulin. Since at this time there is no substitute for insulin that can be taken orally, children can be taught to give their own hypodermic injections and to watch their individual dosages.

The cooperation of the family is most essential in the care of the diabetic child. Constant reminders of diet and nagging "don'ts" will only inspire rebellion in the youngster. Let the child understand his condition so that he will know his requirements and limitations.

Report from Washington

BY

ARMISTEAD SELDEN

Congressman, Sixth District

The House has approved funds of about $1.1 billion to be spent in operating the State, Justice and Commerce Departments for the new fiscal year which begins July 1. This is a cut of 22 percent in formPresident Truman's budget requests, and is about $130 million less than the estimates of President Eisenhower.

House members defeated a rider to the money bill which would have given secretaries of these departments "absolute discretion" to fire employees when they deem it "advisable in the interest of the United States."

Such authority could have nullified the Veterans Preference and Civil Service Acts and jeopardized the jobs of veterans and career employees in government service.

In turning down the proposal to give department secretaries sweeping authority to fire employees, most House members expressed the opinion that the President's recent security order is adequate for dealing with employees of doubtful loyalty.

VA Loans Extended—

At the last meeting of the Veterans Affairs Committee, of which I am a member, we voted to continue VA authority to make direct home loans to veterans who cannot get GI financing from private sources. As approved by the Committee, the bill continues direct loans for another two years and authorizes total loans up to $25 million each quarter. This legislation is expected to reach the floor of the House for a vote in the near future.

Tribute to Late Members—

Each year the House of Representatives sets aside one day to pay tribute to deceased members of Congress. This memorial service, which I attended for the first time last week, is presided over by the Speaker. Its participants are all members of the House, except for the Chaplain and a military band.

Congressmen honored at this particular service, all of whom died within the past year, were the late Sen. Brien McMahon of Connecticut, and the late Representatives William Grady Stigler of Oklahoma; Adolph Joseph Sabath of Illinois; Edward Eugene Cox of Georgia, Joseph Raleigh Bryson of South Carolina; and Garrett Lee Withers of Kentucky.

Relatives of the deceased were escorted to their chairs in the House by Congressmen from their respective states. For half on hour preceding the service, a program of sacred selections was presented by the United States Army Band. Following the invocation, the Congressional Quartet, composed of four House members, sang a hymn. They were accompanied at the piano by Rep. Francis Bolton of Ohio.

As the Clerk of the House read the roll of deceased members and gave a short history of their lives, Rep. Marguerite Stitt Church of Illinois stood in front of the Speaker's rostrum and placed in a silver vase one rose in memory of each late member.

After this ceremony and a period of devotional silence, Rep. Robert J. Corbett of Pennsylvania addressed the House and the relatives of those memorialized. He emphasized the honor and the importance of membership in Congress and then told how the deceased members had upheld the faith placed in them by the people who elected them as leaders in our government

"Should the Congress," he said, "be destroyed in the confidence of the people and thus become powerless as a check on the Executive, then free government, as we know it, ends in America."

Another memorial address was delivered by Rep. Carl Albert of Oklahoma. His impressive talk wa accented by short phrases of poetry in keeping with the tributes he paid each deceased member.

He referred to the late Sen. Brien McMahon as a "brilliant, youthful New Englander who has been described by his successor as Connecticut's outstanding statesman." Adolph Sabath, Czechoslovakian immigrant who became a Congressman, he spoke of as a "lowly immigrant who at the age of 15 believed the American story and came to this country." Sabath was elected to the House for 24 successive terms.

Rep. Albert called the late Eugene Cox "a Southern gentleman in the noblest sense of the term. . .a generous harted friend." Joe Bryson he termed a "lovable son of Dixie who rose from the textile mills of South Carolina to a place of preeminence among his comrades. . .a Christian gentleman who practiced what he preached."

Bill Stigler, he described as a man "in whose veins ran the blood of the original American. . .chivalrous, patient and generous." Garrett Withers, he referred to as "a man in whom we caught a fleeting glimpse of that loving soul so dearly loved by all who knew man." Withers, who once served as a Senator and then retired, returned to Congress this year as a Representative from Kentucky.

In conclusion, Rep. Albert gave the following statement which I feel is worthy of note; "After more than 160 years this is still the best government on earth for the financier and farmer, for industrialist and industrial worker. After all this time no man may close the doors of your church against you. No man may sell your private property on the public auction block without due process of law. No man may cast you in prison without a trial by a jury of your peers. After all the centuries, history is still on the side of free men."

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA
STATE OF ALABAMA
CHILTON COUNTY
THE CHILTON COUNTY GAS DISTRICT
FIRST MORTGAGE NATURAL GAS REVENUE BOND

No. $1,000

THE CHILTON COUNTY GAS DISTRICT, Chilton County, Alabama, (herein called the "District"), a public corporation created under and pursuant to Act No. 762, General Laws of Alabama, approved September 11, 1951, General Acts of 1951, pp. 1319 et seq., for value received, hereby promises to pay, solely from the Bond Principal and Interest Fund, hereinafter described, to bearer on May 1, 19___, the sum of

and to pay solely from said Fund, interest on said sum at the rate of six per cent (6%) per annum, payable on November 1, 1953, and semiannually thereafter on the first day of May and the first day of November in each year from the date hereof until paid, upon the presentation and surrender, as they severally mature, of the coupons therefor attached hereto. Both the principal of and interest on this Bond are payable in lawful money of the United States of America at the principal office of the Birmingham Trust National Bank, in the City of Birmingham, Alabama.

This Bond is one of an issue aggregating Three Hundred Thirty Eight Thousand Dollars ($338,000) of like date and tenor, except as to numbers, maturity dates, and redemption provisions authorized under and pursuant to and all equally secured by a Mortgage and Indenture of Trust, dated as of May 1, 1953 (hereinafter called the "Mortgage") executed and delivered by the District to the Birmingham Trust National Bank, Birmingham, Alabama (herein called the "Trustee"), for the purpose of paying the cost of acquiring and constructing a system for the transmission of natural gas to the municipalities of Jemison and Thorsby, Alabama, and for the distribution of such gas in such municipalities and the surrounding territory.

The principal of and interest on the Bonds are payable solely out of the revenues from the gas system of the District. The Mortgage constitutes a closed first lien on said gas system and a sufficient amount of the gross revenues and income therefrom after the deduction of only the reasonable expenses incurred for the operation, maintenance and repair thereof for the equal and ratable security of all of the said Bonds, but the Mortgage does not authorize or permit a foreclosure of said system. Under and pursuant to the Mortgage, there has been created a special fund known as the Bond Principal and Interest Fund, which is required by the Mortgage to be held in trust by the Trustee and applied to the payment of the principal of and interest on said Bonds as they respectively mature and come due. The District has pledged to said Bond Principal and Interest Fund for such purposes a sufficient amount of the gross revenues and income from said system, after the deduction therefrom of only the reasonable expenses incurred for the operation, maintenance and repair thereof as provided in the Mortgage. The District has covenanted and agreed and hereby does covenant and agree to fix and maintain and alter from time to time, if and to the reasonable extent necessary, rates at such a level as to produce income sufficient (a) to pay the reasonable and necessary expenses incurred for the operation maintenance and repair of said system; (b) to provide for payments into said Bond Principal and Interest Fund of amounts sufficient for the payment of the principal of and interest on said Bonds as they respectively mature and come due; (c) to provide a Debt Service Reserve Fund to protect against the possibility of any deficiency in revenues in future years; and (d) to provide an Extension and Replacement Fund for improvements and extensions. The District has also covenanted and agreed and thereby covenants and agrees that it will apply the gross revenues and income from said system to such purposes. Reference is hereby made to the Mortgage for a description of the property thereby mortgaged and the revenue thereby pledged, the nature and extent of the security and a statement of the rights of the bearer hereof with respect thereto. Each bearer, by the acceptance of this Bond, consents to all of the provisions of the Mortgage.

All of the Bonds of this issue of Bonds which mature on May 1, 1964, or thereafter, are redeemable in whole or in part, at the option of the District on May 1, 1963, or on any interest payment date thereafter. If less than all of the outstanding Bonds are called for redemption, the Bonds to be redeemed shall be called for redemption in the inverse order of maturities and identification numbers, latest maturities and highest numbers first. Any redemption shall be at a redemption price equal to the par value thereof, plus accrued interest thereon to the redemption date, plus a redemption premium of twelve months' interest thereon, computed at the rate which the Bond or Bonds to be redeemed would bear on the redemption date, as therein specified, if the option had not been exercised. Notice of the intended redemption shall be given by publication, not more than 60 days and not less than 30 days prior to the proposed redemption date, at least once in a daily newspaper published and of general circulation in the City of Birmingham, Alabama. If any of said Bonds so redeemable shall have been called for redemption as herein provided, interest shall cease to accrue from and after the date fixed for redemption unless default shall be made in the payment of the redemption price thereof.

In the event of any default by the District in the payment of principal of or interest on this or the other Bonds of this issue or any other default as provided in the Mortgage, the Trustee may declare the principal of this Bond and interest accrued thereon immediately due and payable, whereupon this Bond and such interest shall become immediately due and payable and the holder hereof shall be entitled to all remedies and rights set forth in the Mortgage.

This Bond is a negotiable instrument and is exempt from all taxation under the laws of the State of Alabama. This and the other Bonds of this issue are not a debt or obligation of the State of Alabama, nor a debt or obligation of any municipality which is a member of the District; and neither the State nor any such municipality shall be liable in any way whatsoever on this or the other bonds of this issue, nor may the holder of this or any other Bonds of this issue compel the levy of any taxes for the payment thereof. This and the other Bonds of this issue shall not be payable out of any funds other than the revenues of the gas system of the District.

Neither this Bond nor any appurtenant coupon shall be valid or become obligatory for any purpose unless this Bond shall have been authenticated by the execution by the Trustee of the certificate hereon endorsed.

It is hereby certified, recited and declared that all acts, conditions and things required to happen, exist or be performed precedent to and in the issuance of this Bond and in the execution and delivery of the Mortgage have happened, do exist and have been performed as so required.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, THE CHILTON COUNTY GAS DISTRICT has caused this Bond to be executed in its name and on its behalf by its President and its corporate seal to be hereunto affixed and attested by its Secretary, and the coupons hereunto annexed to be executed with the facsimile signature of the President, who, by signing this bond, adopts as and for his own proper signature the facsimile signature appearing on each of said coupons, and has caused this Bond to be dated May 1, 1953.

IN TRUST, NEVERTHELESS, under and subject to the terms, provisions and conditions hereinafter set forth, for the equal and ratable benefit and security of all and singular the present and future holders of the Bonds and coupons issued under this Mortgage, without preference, priority or distinction of any one of the Bonds over any other of the Bonds by reason of priority in the issue, sale or negotiation thereof, or otherwise, and for securing the observance and performance of all of the terms, provisions and conditions of this Mortgage.

PROVIDED, HOWEVER, that these presents are upon the condition that, if the District, its successors or assigns, shall pay or cause to be paid to the holders of the Bonds, the principal and interest to become due in respect thereof at the time and in the manner stipulated therein and herein and shall keep, perform and observe all and singular the covenants and agreements in the Bonds and this mortgage expressed to be kept, performed and observed by or on the part of the District, then this Mortgage and the estate and rights hereby granted shall cease, determine and be void, otherwise to be and remain in full force and effect.

GENERAL PROVISIONS REGARDING THE BONDS

Section 1. The Bonds. The Bonds which may be issued and secured under this Mortgage are limited to an aggregate principal amount of Three Hundred Thirty Eight Thousand Dollars ($338,000), exclusive of Bonds issued in substitution for any of the Bonds destroyed, stolen or lost). $18,000 in each of the years 1982 and 1983.

Interest on the Bonds shall be payable on November 1, 1953, and semiannually thereafter on May 1 and November 1 in each year, but only upon the presentation and surrender of the respective coupons for such interest. The Bonds shall be payable as to both principal and interest in lawful money of the United States of America at the principal office of the Birmingham Trust National Bank, in the City of Birmingham, Alabama.

Section 2. Remittances. The District agrees with the holders of the Bonds and the coupons and with the Trustee, that it will pay all charges for exchange, fees, or expenses which may be made by said Bank in the making of remittances in bankable funds of the principal of and interest on any of the Bonds and the coupons at par. All such costs, fees and expenses shall be paid by the District as part of the expenses of operating the System.

Section 3. Bond Form. The form of the Bonds and coupons and the Trustee's authentication certificate shall be substantially in the respective forms thereof set forth in the recital to this Mortgage.

Section 4. Execution and Authentication. The Bonds shall be executed for and on behalf of the District with the manual signature of its President and sealed with its corporate seal and attested by its Secretary. The interest coupons attached to each of the Bonds shall be executed with the facsimile signature of the President, who, by the execution of each of the Bonds, shall adopt as and for his own signature for the facsimile thereof appearing on each of said coupons. In the event that any of the officers whose signatures appear on any of the Bonds or coupons or who shall have sealed any of the Bonds shall cease to be such officers before the authentication and delivery of the Bonds, such Bonds may, upon the request of the District, be authenticated and delivered, as herein provided, as though the persons who signed and sealed such Bonds and coupons had not ceased to be such officers of the District. None of the Bonds shall be valid or obligatory for any purpose or shall be entitled to any right or benefit hereunder unless there shall be endorsed thereon a certificate of authentication in substantially the form hereinabove set forth, duly executed by the Trustee; and such certificate of the Trustee upon any Bond executed on behalf of the District shall be conclusive evidence and the only evidence that the Bond so authenticated has been duly issued under this Mortgage and that the holder thereof is entitled to the benefit of this Mortgage.

Section 5. Lost or Mutilated or Destroyed Bonds or Coupons. In case any of the Bonds or any of the coupons appurtenant thereto shall be or become mutilated, destroyed, stolen or lost, then upon the surrender of such mutilated Bond or coupon to the Trustee, or the presentation to the District and to the Trustee of evidence satisfactory to them respectively of the destruction, theft or loss of such Bond or coupon, and of the claimant's title as true owner thereof at the time of such event and, in any event, upon being furnished with indemnity satisfactory to them respectively and upon the payment of all necessary expenses incurred by the District and the Trustee in investigating said claim and in issuing a new Bond or coupon, the District shall issue and the Trustee shall thereafter authenticate and deliver to or upon the order of the claimant, a Bond or coupon of like tenor, date, principal amount and maturity as the Bond or coupon so mutilated, destroyed, stolen, or lost with such notations thereon as the District and the Trustee shall determine. The Trustee shall forthwith cremate any mutilated Bond or coupons so surrendered and deliver a certificate of creamation to the District.

DELIVERY OF THE BONDS AND DISPOSITION OF THE PROCEEDS OF THE SALE THEREOF

Section 6. Sale and Delivery of Bonds, Disposition and use of Proceeds. Construction Fund. Upon the execution and delivery of this Mortgage, the District shall execute and deliver to the Trustee for authentication all of the Bonds and said Trustee shall authenticate said Bonds with all unmatured coupons thereunto attached and deliver them upon the order of the District to the purchaser or purchasers thereof upon the payment by such purchaser or purchasers to the Treasurer of the District of the purchase price thereof. The Bonds may be executed by the District and authenticated by said Trustee and delivered prior to any recordation of this Mortgage. All of the Bonds may be delivered to the purchaser or purchasers at one time or Bonds may be delivered to the purchaser or purchasers thereof from time to time upon order of the District. The receipt of the Treasurer shall be full acquittal to such purchaser or purchasers for the purchase price of any bonds and such purchaser or purchasers shall be under no obligation to see to the application thereof. Nevertheless, the Treasurer of the District shall hold the proceeds from the sale of the Bonds in trust and shall dispose of the same only as provided in this Mortgage. The amount received as accrued interest on the Bonds will be deposited by the Treasurer in the Bond Principal and Interest Fund hereinafter provided for. The Treasurer shall set aside the sum of $25,350 from the proceeds of the sale of the Bonds to pay interest on the Bonds during the estimated period of construction and for one year thereafter and shall deposit the same in the aforesaid Bond Principal and Interest Fund. The balance of said proceeds shall be deposited by the Treasurer with the Trustee and held by the Trustee as depositary and not as Trustee in a special account which is hereby designated the "Construction Fund" and withdrawn as hereinafter provided by the District only for the purposes of (1) paying the cost of acquiring and constructing the System, including the purchase of all equipment, rights-of-way and land, and all engineering, legal, financing and other expenses incident to the construction of the proposed system and the issuance of the Bonds and the Trustee's acceptance fee and (2) paying the expenses of operation of the System until such time as the revenue derived from such operation is sufficient for such purpose.

Section 7. Withdrawals from Construction Fund. The District may, from time to time during the construction of the System, withdraw monies from the Construction Fund, but only upon receipt by the Trustee from the District of a certificate or other order of the District duly executed by its President or Vice President and its Treasurer or Secretary and upon delivery to the Trustee of (1) a certificate by said President or Vice President that neither the District nor any of its officers, members of the Board of Directors of the District nor any of the employees of the District nor of the municipalities of Jemison or Thorsby has received or will receive any discount, rebate, commission, fee, proceeds from insurance, or other benefit or emolument in connection with any such expenditures or indebtedness except as expressly set forth therein; that no default exists in any of the provisions of the Bonds or of this Mortgage; and that there are no mechanics' or materialmen's liens, chattel mortgages, conditional sales or other title retention agreements or notices of any requirement of governmental or other authority accrued, pending or filed in connection with the construction or purchase of the System or of equipment, material or supplies for the System or in any matter concerning the System (except inchoate liens for labor or material supplied, payment for which will be made from such withdrawals or which are not yet due or payable) other than such as may be specified in said certificate; and (2) a certificate by the Engineers who have been retained by the District to supervise the construction of the System approving such withdrawal and stating:

(a) That such expenditures or indebtedness has not formed the basis of any previous withdrawal;

(b) That the amount which will remain in the Construction Fund after such withdrawal will be sufficient to pay all construction costs of the System;

(c) The purposes, in reasonable detail, for which such expenditures will be made and that such purpose or purposes are included within the purposes for which money may be withdrawn from the Construction Fund under the provisions of this Mortgage.

In addition to the data aforesaid, the Trustee may require as a condition precedent to such payments, further evidence as to the application of any monies previously disbursed by it, or as to the correctness of any statement contained in any certificate. Upon the written request of the holders of twenty per cent (20%) of the BONDS then outstanding, the Trustee shall require such evidence. The Trustee shall, however, be under no duty to require such evidence unless so requested. The Trustee shall also not be liable for any misapplication of monies in the Construction Fund if disbursed pursuant to the provisions of this Section 7 of this Mortgage and without knowledge or reason to believe that such disbursement constitutes a misapplication of funds.

Section 8. Completion of System; Transfer of Monies in Construction Fund to Reserve Fund. Upon the completion of construction of the System, the engineers who have been retained by the District to supervise the construction of the System, shall file with the Trustee and the original purchasers of the Bonds a certificate that such construction has been completed in accordance with plans and specifications previously approved; that such completed System has been tested and approved by them and that all expenses of purchasing and constructing the System and all other obligations incurred by the District in connection with such purchase and construction have been paid in full. Thereupon, the Trustee shall notify the engineer and the original purchasers of said Bonds the amount, if any, then on deposit in the Construction Fund. Any money then on deposit in the Construction Fund shall be transferred to the Debt Service Reserve Fund hereinafter provided for, or if the Board of Directors of the District shall so elect and shall so notify the Trustee and the original purchasers of the Bonds in writing, may be used by the District to purchase any outstanding Bond or Bonds at not in excess of the redemption price thereof. The Trustee shall thereupon notify the engineer and the original purchasers of the Bonds of any transfer to the Debt Service Reserve Fund as aforesaid and of the amount so transferred. The Trustee shall also notify said engineer and said original purchasers, if upon receipt of the aforesaid certificate of completion, there are no funds then remaining in the Construction Fund.

THE BUDGET FOR THE SYSTEM

Section 9. (a) Fiscal Year. The Budget. The System shall be operated on the basis of a fiscal year to be fixed by the District. Prior to the beginning of each fiscal year, the District shall cause to be prepared and approved by its Board of Directors an annual budget for the System. Said budget shall include the following:

(a) The estimated gross revenues and income to be derived from the System during such fiscal year;

(b) An estimated sum sufficient to provide for the payment of all expenses of administration and operation and such expenses for maintenance as may be necessary to preserve the System in good repair and working order during such fiscal year, which shall not be less than the amounts required by this Mortgage to be paid into the Operation and Maintenance Fund hereinafter provided for;

(c) The sum required for the payment of the principal of and interest on the Bonds maturing and coming due during such fiscal year, which shall not be less than the

SPIRIT CONTAGIOUS

Williamson, W. Va. — When all 40 employes of a Williamson supermarket left their jobs and marched to the Red Cross center to donate a pint of blood, fifteen customers caught their spirit and joined the parade. It was led by a navy recruiting unit sound truck and two fire trucks.

Importance Of Waterways Is Shown In Recent Rains

Auburn, Ala. — For the last couple of weeks it has been easy for farmers to see that during periods of heavy rains more water falls on crop land than can be absorbed. This proved true even on farms where good terraces, contour farming, and crop rotations were in use.

"This surplus water must flow from the farm through some kind of waterway," says S. R. Doughty, API Extension soil conservationist. "Unless a safe waterway is provided, serious damage from erosion will result. Generally, it is easiest and cheapest to use bottoms of natural draws or depressions for sod waterways. The sod may be grass, perennial legumes, or a grass-legume mixture."

1953 Home Demonstration Club Given Wide Field

The demonstrations which are given to Home Demonstration Club members include a wide field. The program is divided into seven major fields, so the demonstrations are selected mainly from these fields: foods and nutrition, food preservation, clothing, home furnishings, child care and family life, home management and consumer education. Other subjects that demonstrations may be selected from are: Poultry, landscaping, handicraft. The Extension Service employs a specialist in each field of work who prepares material and conducts leadership schools for the leaders from the Clubs. Each Club elects a leader in each of the seven major fields. These leaders represent their Club at Leadership Schools and then they are responsible for the demonstration in their Club.

Once each year the ladies enjoy having the County Agent meet with them and discuss some phase of work that is of interest to both men and women. In January, Mr. M. R. Glasscock attended all nineteen Clubs in the county and gave a most interesting discussion of "Poultry Production and How It Could Be Advanced in the County."

The demonstration for February was "Buying an All-Purpose Dress." Most women wear the same dress for many purposes so suggestions were given on how to select and buy a dress that can be worn for almost any occasion.

Grocery shopping is something all of us have to do, but everyone is not a wise buyer. For the March demonstration "When You Go To The Grocery Store" information was given on comparing foods and articles and becoming a wise shopper.

The April demonstration "A Quick Meal," or "An Oven Meal" gave the ladies suggestions for preparing the entire meal and cooking it all in the oven at the same time.

Many of the Club members have a home freezer or a locker at the freeze plant, so they are interested in "How To Prepare Foods For Freezing"—the May demonstration.

Often putting a sleeve in a garment is one of the most difficult parts about making it. In June, the ladies will learn more about this if they attend the demonstration, "The Sleeve That Fits."

"Kitchen Cleaning Chores" in July may be a demonstration that will help prevent the problems of keeping equipment and the kitchen looking nice at all times.

"All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," and so it is with Home Demonstration Club members. Each year, August is picnic month for the Clubs. Club members and their families enjoy various types of entertainment during the month—picnics, fish fries, barbecues and spend-the-days.

In September members will learn new and better methods of "Finishing and Caring for Floors."

Making a home a more attractive place to live in is the aim of all homemakers. In October, the Clubs will have the demonstration, "Making Curtains, Draperies and Cornice Boards," and will probably gain new ideas on Home Decorating.

Youth are often a problem in many homes, so the Home Demonstration women are anxious to do all they can about this. In November the Clubs will discuss "Teen Agers Need Parents," with the hope that this will be of benefit to all those who hear it.

"Family Religion" will be the topic of discussion in the December meeting. Each year Club members usually exchange gifts and have some type of Christmas program. Fun and fellowship is enjoyed by all members.

Special demonstrations are often given when requested by the members. Demonstrations have been given in making metal trays, hooked rugs and landscaping.

Today's Home Builds Tomorrow's World

The theme for National Home Demonstration Week again this year is Today's Home Builds Tomorrow's World. Director of Extension, C. M. Ferguson says, "Ideas and ideals are twin progeny of our homes. What we as adults do, what we think and how we act are reflected into the actions and thoughts of our children. There is no greater influence on human behavior in our society than the environment of our homes. This is as it should be. We cannot by default shun this responsibility. We must not expect our schools, our colleges, our Churches, our farms, and civic organizations, our youth organizations and our lodges to accept the responsibility that goes with it. Today, as never before, our children must face a confused world with confidence and courage. This requires character and mental stature. Only strong bodies and healthy minds produce such character and stature. We must take seriously the challenge — "Today's Home Builds Tomorrow's World."

BOOSTS SEAWAY . . . Brig. Gen. Bernard L. Robinson, deputy chief of army engineers, urges construction of St. Lawrence Seaway, in Senate hearing.

Mrs. Earl Parrish's guests over the week end were Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Gofford, the Dennis Kennedys and Miss Jollyn Kay of Greenville. Mrs. Parrish accompanied them to Birmingham on Sunday, returning Sunday night.

A public service program to promote safer driving.

This year—for the 12th straight production year—truck users are buying more Chevrolet trucks than any other make. That couldn't be true unless Chevrolet trucks offered more of what you want.

Already, 1953's official sales figures tell a remarkable story of clear-cut and decisive preference for Chevrolet trucks. But, this is not surprising, for truck users everywhere are discovering how far ahead of all others Chevrolet trucks really are.

They are discovering things like the tremendous new power in advanced Loadmaster engines in heavy-duty models . . . the remarkable gasoline economy . . . the extra ruggedness and strength of heavier, more rigid frame construction.

And, in addition to all these advantages, the Chevrolet line lists for less than any other trucks of comparable size and capacity. So, before you buy any truck, stop in and see us.

(b) Amendment of Budget. Such budget may be amended or revised by the District in accordance with changed circumstances and conditions at any time during such fiscal year. The District shall cause to be submitted copies of each such budget or any amendment or revision thereof promptly to the Trustee and the original purchasers of the Bonds.

COLLECTION AND DISPOSITION OF REVENUES; FUNDS

Section 10. Collection of Revenues and Deposit in Gross Revenue Account. The District shall cause its Treasurer to collect all gas service charges and other obligations due to the District promptly when due and to deposit the same and all other revenues and income from the system in a special account in a bank which is a member of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. Such funds so collected and so deposited shall be held in trust subject to transfer by the Trustee only and shall be transferred by the Trustee on or before the 20th day in each month to itself and deposited in a special account designated and established by the Trustee as the Gross Revenue Account. All charges for exchange, fees or expenses incurred in effecting such transfers shall be paid by the District as part of the expenses of operating the System.

Section 11. Operation and Maintenance Fund. There is hereby established the Operation and Maintenance Fund which shall be opened and maintained by the District as a bank which is a member of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and applied solely as hereinafter provided. As soon as it is collected therein, the Trustee shall transfer One Thousand Dollars ($1,000) in the Gross Revenue Account into the Operation and Maintenance Fund. On the 20th day of each month during each fiscal year the Trustee shall transfer into the Operation and Maintenance Fund from the Gross Revenue Account one-twelth (1-12) of the estimated expenses for the operation, maintenance and repair of the System in the budget for such fiscal year, less the amount by which any unexpended balance remaining in such Fund on the preceding date exceeds the sum of One Thousand Dollars ($1,000). The District shall require the bank in which the Operation and Maintenance Fund is deposited to notify the Trustee on the 19th day of each month, the exact balance on hand on such date in the Operation and Maintenance Fund. The budget for any fiscal year may be revised from time to time and any overdraft in the Operation and Maintenance Fund shall promptly be paid by the Trustee from the Gross Revenue Account; but in no event shall payments or transfers to the Operation and Maintenance Fund exceed the amount required to maintain therein the reasonable and necessary expenses of operation, maintenance and repair of the System for one month, plus a reserve or cushion of One Thousand Dollars ($1,000). The reasonable and necessary expenses of operation, maintenance and repair shall be deemed to have accrued or accrued by the District from the Operation and Maintenance Fund, and the bank in which such Fund shall be deposited shall discharge its obligation and liability by honoring a draft drawn by the District, signed by the Treasurer and countersigned by the President or Vice-President of the District on such Fund, if such Bank has no reason to believe that such draft is for some purpose other than the reasonable and necessary expenses of operation, maintenance and repairs of the System. Such expenses shall include the cost of procuring the insurance required by this Mortgage, engineering fees, legal fees and accountants fees for services rendered and the reasonable compensation of the Trustee for services performed hereunder. Such part of the said reserve or cushion of One Thousand Dollars ($1,000) in the Operation and Maintenance Fund as is not used in the payment of the expenses of operation, maintenance and repair shall be available upon the draft or order of the Trustee for the payment of the principal of and interest on the Bonds then due, but only in the event that no other funds are available therefor.

Section 12. Bond and Interest Fund. There is hereby established the Bond Principal and Interest Fund (herein called the Bond and Interest Fund) which shall be held in trust by the Trustee and applied solely for the payment of the principal of and interest on the Bonds as they respectively mature and become due to the payment of any redemption premium on any Bonds redeemed under the provisions of this Mortgage. The Trustee shall transfer from the Gross Revenue Account to itself for the account of the Bond and Interest Fund the following:

(a) On the twentieth day of each month beginning with and including the month during which interest on the Bonds shall last be paid from the proceeds of the sale of the Bonds, but in no event later than August 20, 1954, a sum equal to one-sixth (1-6) of the next succeeding interest payment on the Bonds;

(b) On the twentieth day of each month, beginning May 20, 1955, a sum equal to one-twelth (1-12) of the principal of the Bonds maturing on the next succeeding May 1st;

(c) All sums which should theretofore have been paid into said Bond and Interest Fund and which have not been so paid.

Section 13. Reserve Fund. There is hereby established a special trust fund which shall be designated the Debt Service Reserve Fund (hereinafter referred to as the Reserve Fund), which shall be held in trust by the Trustee and which shall be continued until the principal of and interest on the Bonds shall have been paid in full. On the twentieth day of each month, beginning November 20, 1954, the Trustee shall transfer from the Gross Revenue Account to itself for the account of the Reserve Fund the sum of Four Hundred Forty Five Dollars ($445.00), provided, however, that whenever and so long as the money held in the Reserve Fund shall equal or exceed the sum of Twenty-Six Thousand, Seven Hundred Twenty Dollars ($26,720), no further payments or transfers need be made to such Fund. If any payment or transfer to the Reserve Fund shall be less than the amount herein prescribed, the required payment for the next succeeding month shall be increased by the amount of such deficiency. The monies held in the Reserve Fund shall be used solely for the payment of the principal of and interest on the Bonds as they respectively mature and become due, but only in the event that, at the time of any principal or interest payment date, the money then held in the Bond and Interest Fund shall be insufficient for such purpose. If after any money is so expended from the Reserve Fund the amount therein is less than the amount required to be accumulated in said fund as provided in this Section, the aforesaid monthly transfers shall be resumed and shall be continued until the money in said Fund shall equal or exceed the amount so required to be accumulated in said Fund. Whenever and so long as the monies held in the Bond and Interest Fund and in the Reserve Fund shall together equal or exceed the total amount of the principal of and interest on all Bonds then outstanding, no further payments or transfers need be made to the Bond and Interest Fund or to the Reserve Fund.

Section 14. Extension Fund. There is hereby established the Extension and Replacement Fund (herein called the Extension Fund) which shall be held in trust by the Trustee and applied solely as hereinafter provided. On the twentieth day of each month, beginning November 20, 1954, or sooner if revenues are available therefor the Trustee shall transfer One Hundred Fifty Dollars ($150.00) from the Gross Revenue Account into the Extension Fund; provided that whenever and so long as the monies held in the Extension Fund shall equal or exceed Nine Thousand Dollars, ($9,000), no further transfers need be made thereto. If any transfer or payment to the Extension Fund shall be less than the amount herein prescribed, the required transfer or payment for the next succeeding month shall be increased by the amount of such deficiency. The monies in the Extension Fund shall be used (1) upon the order of the District, authorized by its Board of Directors and signed by the officer so authorized, solely for the payment of the reasonable cost of such replacements, extensions and improvements as shall have been approved in advance by the District or (2) upon the order of the Trustee solely for the payment of the principal of and interest on the Bonds but only in the event that, at the time of any principal or interest payment, the monies in the Bond and Interest Fund and in the Reserve Fund are insufficient for such purpose. No withdrawal may be made from the Extension Fund to pay the cost of any extensions or improvements to the System unless the District shall file with the Trustee a certificate stating the number of customers to be served by the extension or improvement and that the cost per customer to be served thereby does not exceed Two Hundred Dollars ($200.00). If the cost of proposed extensions or improvements shall exceed $200.00 per customer to be served thereby, no withdrawal shall be made to pay the cost thereof unless the District shall file with the Trustee the certificate of an engineer satisfactory to the Trustee (who may be the engineer for the District) setting forth that the cost of the proposed extensions or improvements does not exceed the sum of (1) $600 for each customer other than an industrial consumer proposed to be served by such extensions or improvements, and (2) ten times the average annual net income estimated by such engineer to be derived during all subsequent fiscal years of the District while any of the Bonds are outstanding, from the sale of gas to any industrial consumer or consumers proposed to be served by such extensions and improvements. The term "annual net income" as used in this section of this Mortgage means the gross revenues derived from the sale of gas to a consumer or consumers during a fiscal year, less the following costs for such year: (a) The cost to the District of gas sold to such consumer or consumers, and (b) $200 for each such consumer as the cost to the District of administering, operating, maintaining and repairing its facilities utilized in supplying such consumer. The term "industrial consumer" as used in this section of this Mortgage means a consumer who receives gas for industrial use only or, for use in or in connection with any business such as manufacturing, processing or assembling of goods, operation of commercial establishments, utilities or other business or enterprise for profit) in an amount of 200,000 cubic feet or more on any day, or as hereafter otherwise defined in the gas tariff or rate schedule of the supplier or suppliers of gas to the District. If, after any monies are expended from the Extension Fund as aforesaid the amount therein is less than the Nine Thousand Dollars ($9,000), the aforesaid monthly payments shall be resumed and shall be continued until the monies held in said Fund shall again equal or exceed Nine Thousand Dollars ($9,000).

Section 15. (a) Surplus Revenues. Withholding in Gross Revenue Account of Sufficient to Assure Fund Payments for Next Six Months. The term "surplus revenues," as used in paragraphs (a) and (b) of this Section of this Mortgage, means any revenues of the System remaining after the payments of the required sums into the special funds, as provided in the foregoing sections of this Mortgage, and after the setting apart in the Gross Revenue Account of a reserve of such revenues in an amount which, when added to the gross revenues and income reasonably expected to be derived from the System during the then ensuing six months' period shall be sufficient to make the aforesaid payments into the aforesaid special funds during the said six months' period. Any surplus revenues as of the 31st day of May and as of the 30th day of November in each year shall be transferred by the Trustee into the Reserve Fund until the total amount in the Reserve Fund shall equal Twenty-Six Thousand, Seven Hundred Twenty Dollars ($26,720), and thereafter, from time to time, whenever and so long as the amount in said Fund shall be less than $26,720. Whenever and so long as the amount in the Reserve Fund shall equal or exceed $26,720, any surplus revenues as of the 31st day of May and as of the 30th day of November in each year shall be transferred by the Trustee into the Extension Fund until the total amount in said Extension Fund shall equal Nine Thousand Dollars ($9,000), and thereafter from time to time whenever and so long as the amount in said Fund shall be less than $9,000.

(b) Surplus Revenues into Redemption Fund. Whenever and so long as the amount in said Reserve Fund shall equal or exceed $26,720 and the amount in the Extension Fund shall equal or exceed $9,000, any surplus revenues as of the 31st day of May and as of the 30th day of November in each year shall be transferred by the Trustee into a fund which is hereby designated the "Redemption Fund," and which shall be held in trust by the Trustee and applied solely to the redemption of all or any part of the Bonds prior to maturity (including expenses incurred in such redemption), as herein provided.

Section 16. Investment of Reserve Fund and Extension Fund in Government Bonds. All interest received and all profits realized on account of any such investments or reinvestments shall be added to and become a part of the special fund to which they belong. All such securities shall be credited to the special fund to which they belong at the then market value of such securities. The money on deposit in each of said special funds not invested as aforesaid and all monies on deposit in the Gross Revenue Account, in the Construction Fund, in the Operation and Maintenance Fund and in the Bond and Interest Fund shall at all times be collaterally secured by a deposit of bonds which are either direct and general obligations of or are unconditionally guaranteed as to both principal and interest by the United States of America and having a market value at least equal to the amount by which the monies on deposit in each of said special funds or in said account shall exceed $10,000.

Section 17. Disposition of Unexpended Balances after Maturity of all Bonds. In the event there has been no default in the payment of the principal of or interest on the Bonds, any unclaimed balance in the Bond and Interest Fund, in the Reserve Fund, in the Extension Fund and in the Redemption Fund remaining ten years after the last maturity date of the Bonds will be transmitted by the Trustee to the District or to its successor in interest and all rights of the holders of the Bonds and coupons in and to said Funds shall thereupon cease.

Section 20. Acquisition of System. That the District will commence and complete the acquisition and construction of facilities for which Bonds are issued under this Mortgage with all reasonable dispatch and that all monies derived from the sale of the Bonds shall be used solely for the purposes for which the same are authorized in this Mortgage and not otherwise.

Section 21. Efficient and Economical Operation of System. Annual Examination and Report by Engineer. That the District will at all times operate the System in an economical and efficient manner and will maintain it in first class operating condition and will make such improvements, replacements and repairs from time to time as are necessary to keep the System always in first-class operating condition. The District will cause an examination and inspection of the System and the operations of the System to be made by a licensed engineer at the end of each fiscal year covering the operations during such year, and copies of the report of such engineer together with his suggestions and recommendations, including the recommendation with respect to any increases in the rates, charges or fees for gas sold by the District as provided in Section 28B of this Mortgage, shall be furnished the Trustee and the original purchasers of any of the Bonds and, upon written request of the holder of any of the Bonds, to such bondholder.

Section 22. Insurance; Fidelity Bonds. That until all principal of and interest on the Bonds have been paid, the District will at all times insure and keep insured with responsible insurers all properties of the System which are of the character usually insured by owners similarly situated to an amount equal to the full insurable value of such property, and that the proceeds of all such insurance policies shall be available for and shall to the extent necessary be applied to the repair and replacement of the damaged property. If said proceeds are not sufficient for such purposes, the additional cost of repair or replacement shall be paid from the Extension Fund. Any excess in insurance proceeds over and above that necessary to replace or repair any property lost, destroyed or damaged and covered by such insurance shall be paid into the Redemption Fund. The District will carry workman's compensation insurance and public liability insurance in such amounts and to such extent as is customarily carried by like organizations engaged in like business of comparable size. The District will also at all times carry fidelity bonds on all of its officers and employees who may handle funds derived from the System, such Bonds to be in such amounts as are customarily carried by like organizations engaged in like business of comparable size. The cost of all such insurance and bonds shall be considered a part of the cost of operating and maintaining the System. The policies of insurance and the fidelity bonds required by this Section will be deposited with the Trustee.

Section 23. Rates. That the District shall fix, publish and maintain such reasonable rates for services furnished by the System at such level as to produce revenues sufficient to provide for the payment of the expenses of the administration and operation and such expenses for maintenance of the System as are necessary to preserve the same in good repair and working order, to maintain the payments required by this Mortgage to be made to the Operation and Maintenance Fund, to provide for the payment of the interest upon and the principal of the Bonds as and when the same become due and payable and for a reasonable reserve to assure against possible default in such payment, to maintain the payments herein required to be made to the Bond and Interest Fund and to the Reserve Fund, and to build up and maintain a reserve for improvements, betterments and extensions to the System other than those necessary to maintain the same in good repair and working order, and to maintain the payments required by this Mortgage to be made to the Extension Fund. If such rates do not produce revenues sufficient for all the aforesaid purposes, the District will alter and amend such rates to the reasonable extent necessary to produce revenues sufficient for all such purposes and will publish and maintain such amended or altered rates.

Section 24. No free service. That no free service shall be furnished by the System to the District or to any municipality, board, agency, instrumentality, person, firm or corporation. No customer shall be connected to the System or served by the District without a proper meter having been first installed and then only at uniform established rates.

Section 25. Shutting off Service for Failure to Pay. Upon failure of any user to pay for services rendered within sixty (60) days, the District shall cut off the connection of such user and shall not furnish him or permit him to receive from the System further gas until all obligations owed by him to the District on account of services shall have been paid in full. This covenant shall not, however, prevent the District from causing any System connection to be cut off sooner.

Section 26. Collection and Disposition of Revenues. That the District shall promptly collect or cause to be collected all service charges and other obligations as the same become due and that it will hold all collections and all revenues and income from the System, as collected, in trust to be applied as provided in this Mortgage and not otherwise.

Section 27. Books, Records, and Accounts. That the District shall install and maintain proper books of record and account in accordance with standard accounting practice, in which full and complete entries shall be made of all dealings and transactions of or in relation to the properties, business and affairs of the System. Said system of books, records and accounts shall be so kept as to reveal in detail each item of income and the disposition thereof and each item of expense and shall indicate under what budget item such expense was charged.

Section 28A. Monthly Operating Statement; Annual Audits. That the District will, on or before the tenth day of each month, furnish to the Trustee, to the Engineer retained by the District to make the annual inspection of the System as aforesaid, to the original purchasers of any of the Bonds, and upon written request of any holder of any of the Bonds, to such bondholder, an operating and income statement of the System in reasonable detail for each preceding month. If such monthly operating and income statement is not submitted to the Trustee during the next succeding month, the Trustee will employ an independent accountant to make such report and the services of such accountant shall be paid for by the District from the Operation and Maintenance Fund. Not later than sixty (60) days after the close of each fiscal year of the System, the District shall cause an audit of the books, records and accounts of the System for such fiscal year to be made by an independent public accountant satisfactory to the Trustee and shall cause to be prepared and certified by such public accountant a report of such audit together with a balance sheet and an income and surplus account, showing, respectively, in reasonable detail, the financial condition of the System at the close of the preceding year and the financial operations thereof during such year. Said annual audit, balance sheet and income and surplus account shall, at all reasonable times during usual business hours, be open to examination and inspection and copying by any taxpayer, user, or bondholder, furnished by the System, or holder of any of the Bonds, or anyone acting for and on behalf of such taxpayer, user of the services of the System, or bondholder. Copies of each such annual audit, balance sheet and income and surplus account shall be furnished the Trustee, the municipalities of Jemison and Thorsby, the engineer retained by the District to make the annual inspection of the System, the original purchasers of any of the Bonds and, upon written request of any holder of any of the Bonds, to such bondholder. Both the monthly operating and income statements and the annual audits shall show the total quantity and cost of gas purchased by the District, the number of customers served by the District, the total quantity and sales price of gas billed by the District to each class of customers, and the expense of operation, maintenance and repair of the System during the period covered by such statement or audit.

Each of the aforesaid annual audits, beginning with the annual audit for the fiscal year ending in the year 1958, shall set forth the average annual net income derived from the operation of the System during the previous three year period, the average amount payable annually during such period as principal of and interest on all Bonds then outstanding, and the average amount payable annually for the next ensuing three years period as principal of and interest on all Bonds then outstanding. The term "annual net income" as used in this section and in Section 28B of this Mortgage, means the gross revenues derived from the System during a fiscal year, less the following costs for such year: (a) All such costs of administering and operating the System in a sum properly chargeable to expenses of administration and operation by good accounting practices, and (b) all costs of maintaining the System in good repair and in good operating condition (not including items properly chargeable as capital additions by good accounting practices).

Each of the aforesaid annual audits shall also contain a certificate by the accountant who made the audit in which such accountant shall certify that his examination has disclosed no violation of the provisions of this Mortgage nor failure of the District to comply with the terms, provisions and covenants set forth herein, or if his examination has disclosed any such violation or failure to comply, such accountant shall specify in his certificate the details with respect to such violation or failure to comply.

Section 28B. Increases in Rates. The District covenants and agrees, in the event that the rates or charges for gas purchased by it in effect as of the date of this Mortgage, shall thereafter at any time or from time to time be increased, that it shall forthwith increase the rates and charges for gas sold by it in such amount as shall be necessary to produce additional revenues in an amount equal to the estimated increase in the cost of gas to the District resulting from any such increase in the rates or charges of gas purchased by the District. The District further covenants and agrees, in the event the average annual net income derived from the operation of the System during any previous three year period as shown on the annual audits of the System provided for in Section 28A of this Mortgage, shall be less than 1½ times the average amount payable annually during such period as principal of and interest on all Bonds then outstanding, that it shall forthwith increase its rates and charges for gas sold by it in such amount as shall be necessary to produce an average annual net income of at least 1½ times the average amount payable annually for the next ensuing three year period as principal of and interest on all Bonds then outstanding.

Section 29. Inspection of System and Books, Records and Accounts. That the District will permit the Trustee or the holder of any of the Bonds or its or his agent or attorney, duly appointed and authorized in writing, or any officer of or member of the governing bodies of the municipalities of Jemison and Thorsby, to examine and inspect the System and all papers, books, records, accounts, audits and data of the District relating thereto at all reasonable times and will permit photographs, copies or transcripts thereof to be made by any such person or persons at all reasonable times.

Section 30. Prohibition of Mortgages or Sales of System or Pledging of Revenues. That the District will not mortgage, pledge or otherwise encumber the Mortgaged Property or any part thereof or the Pledged Revenues or any part thereof, unless such encumbrance is junior, secondary and subject in all respects to all obligations set forth in this Mortgage. The District will not sell, lease in any manner dispose of any part of the System necessary to its continued maintenance and operation on a revenue producing and self-liquidating basis except as is expressly permitted by this Mortgage.

Section 31. Release Clause with Respect to Moveable or Replaced Personal Property. Until default hereunder and provided such action does not impair the utility thereof, the District, without procuring the consent of the Trustee, may alter, repair, replace, change or add to the Mortgaged Property or the fixtures, equipment or structures on the Mortgaged Property; and provided the District first substitutes property of equal value and utility to be subject to the lien hereof, free and clear of prior liens thereto, it may dispose of, free from the lien hereof, any personal property, fixtures and equipment that has been replaced by personal property, fixtures or equipment of equal value, provided such personal property, fixtures or equipment is no longer required for the operation of the System.

Section 32. Release Clause with Respect to Mortgaged Property. While the District is not in default to the knowledge of the Trustee in the payment of any Bond or coupon outstanding hereunder or in respect of any of the covenants on the part of the District herein contained, the District may obtain the release of any of the Mortgaged Property not needed by it as part of the System and the Trustee shall release the same from the lien hereof upon deposit by the District with the Trustee of the following:

(1) A resolution describing the property to be released in reasonable detail, stating that the District is not in default under any provisions of the Mortgage and requesting such release;

(2) A certificate of an independent engineer satisfactory to the Trustee, made and dated not more than sixty days prior to the date of the release, stating the full value in the opinion of the signer of the property to be released, that such property is not and will not be needed by the District as part of the System, that such release is, in the opinion of the signer, desirable in connection with the business of the District, and that the District is not, to the knowledge of the signer, in default under any of the provisions of the Mortgage.

(3) An amount in cash equal to the full value of the property to be released as specified in said engineer's certificate.

Upon compliance by the District with the foregoing conditions, the Trustee shall, at the expense of the District, execute and deliver to the District any and all instruments that may be necessary to release from the lien of the Mortgage that portion of the Mortgaged Property so sold by the District. The money deposited with the Trustee as aforesaid will be transferred to the Redemption Fund.

Section 33. No Extension of Time for Payment of Bonds. That the District will not directly or indirectly extend or consent to the extension of the time of payment of any of the Bonds or coupons by purchase, funding or refunding of such Bonds or coupons or by any other arrangement, unless consented to by the holders of all outstanding Bonds.

Section 34. Title to Mortgaged Property. That the District has title in fee simple to and the beneficial interest in and is lawfully possessed of the System and the Mortgaged Property and has the right and lawful authority to mortgage the same. The District will warrant and defend the title thereto and every part thereof to the Trustee, its successors and assigns, for the benefit of the holders of the Bonds and coupons, against the claims and demands of all persons whomsoever. All of the Mortgaged Property now owned or hereinafter acquired by the District is free and clear of and from all and any liens and encumbrances of every nature and kind, and will be so kept except as herein otherwise permitted and the District will at all times maintain and preserve the lien and rank of this Mortgage as herein provided.

Section 35. Title to Pledged Revenues. That the District has legal title to and the beneficial interest in the Pledged Revenues and the lawful rightful power and the lawful authority to pledge the same. The District will warrant and defend such pledge to the Trustee, its successors and assigns, for the benefit of the holders for the time being of the Bonds and coupons, against the claims and demands of all persons whomsoever. The Pledged Revenues will be kept free and clear of and from any and all liens and encumbrances of every nature and kind, as herein otherwise provided. The District will at all times maintain and preserve the lien and rank of this Mortgage as a first and prior lien upon the Pledged Revenues.

Section 36. Further Assurance. The District covenants that it will at any time or times do, execute, acknowledge and deliver, and cause to be done, executed, acknowledged and delivered, all such further acts, deeds, conveyances, assignments, pledges, transfers and assurances in law as the Trustee shall reasonably require for the better assuring, assigning, transferring, pledging and confirming unto the Trustee, all and singular, the property and rights herein assigned, transferred and pledged or intended so to be, and that it will cause this Mortgage and any and all additional instruments executed pursuant to the provisions hereof at all times to be kept recorded and filed in such public offices as may be necessary or required by law in order fully to preserve, continue and protect the security of the Bonds and the rights and remedies of the Trustee, and that it will fully comply with all the requirements of any and every recording law or any other law affecting the due recording and filing of this Mortgage or of any such additional instruments.

Section 37. Limit of Financial Liability to Revenues. The foregoing covenants are not intended to enforce any financial liabilities upon the District except to the extent of the Pledged Revenues. Compliance with each provision thereof may be imposed by any remedy hereinafter or in Act No. 762, General Acts of Alabama, approved September 11, 1951, set forth.

Nothing in this Mortgage contained shall, however, affect or impair the right of the holder of any of the Bonds or coupons, to enforce payment thereof at or after the maturity in such Bond or coupon provided or to enforce payment of any interest which may accrue on such Bond after its stated maturity under the provisions of Section 1 of this Mortgage, without reference to, or consent of, either the Trustee or the holder of any other Bond; provided however, any such payment may be enforced only out of the funds for such payment herein referred to.

Section 47. No foreclosure. Nothing contained in this Mortgage shall be construed as authorizing or permitting the foreclosure hereof.

THE TRUSTEE

Section 48. Acceptance of Trust. The Trustee hereby accepts the trusts imposed upon it by this Mortgage but only upon and subject to the following express terms and conditions:

(a) Action of Trustee through agents and attorneys. The Trustee may execute any of the trusts or powers hereof and perform any duties required of it, by or through attorneys, agents, employees or receivers, and shall be entitled to advice of counsel concerning all matters of trust hereof and its duties hereunder, and may in all cases pay such reasonable compensation as it shall deem proper to all such attorneys, agents, employees and receivers as may reasonably be employed in connection with the trust hereof, and all such outlays and expenditures shall be repaid to the Trustee out of the Operation and Maintainance Fund.

(b) Trustee not responsible for recitals or warranties by District. The Trustee shall not be responsible for any recitals herein or in the Bonds, or for insuring any property or collecting any insurance moneys, or for the payment of any insurance premiums or the execution of any instruments of further assurance by the District, or for the execution, recording, registration, filing or refiling of this Mortgage or any instrument or further assurance, or for the validity thereof or for the sufficiency of the security for the Bonds issued under or intended to be secured by, or for the payment of claims or liens upon the System or the Mortgaged Property, or otherwise as to the maintainance of the security hereof; nor be bound to ascertain or inquire as to the performance of any covenants, conditions or agreements on the part of the District, but the Trustee may require of the District full information and advice as to the performance of the covenants, conditions and agreements aforesaid. The recitals and statements in this Mortgage and in the Bonds contained are statements by the District, and shall not be considered as made by or as imposing any obligation or liability upon the Trustee.

(c) Authenticated Bonds, etc. The Trustee shall not be accountable for the use of any Bonds authenticated or delivered hereunder or of any of the proceeds of such Bonds paid out conformably herewith. The holders of the Bonds shall not be entitled to interest on funds deposited for the payment thereof. The Trustee may become the owner of any of the Bonds with the same rights which it would have if it were not Trustee.

(d) Action of Trustee on information believed to be genuine or on request of Bondholder. The Trustee shall be protected in acting upon any notice, requisition, request, consent, certificate, order, affidavit, letter, telegram or other paper or document believed by it to be genuine and correct and to have been signed or sent by the proper person or persons, and the Thustee shall not be bound to recognize any person as a holder of any of the Bonds or to take any action at his request, unless such Bond shall be deposited with the Trustee, or submitted to it for inspection. Any action taken by the Trustee pursuant to this Mortgage upon the request or authority or consent of any person who, at the time of making such request, or giving such authority or consent, is the owner of any of the Bonds, shall be conclusive and binding upon all future owners of the same Bond and of Bonds issued in exchange therefor or in place thereof.

(e) Indemnification of Trustee. The Trustee shall not be compelled to do any hereinunder, or to take any action toward the execution or enforcement of the trusts hereby created or to prosecute or to defend any suit in respect hereof unless requested so to do by the holders of the specified number of the Bonds as herein provided and unless indemnified to its satisfaction against loss, cost, liability and expense.

(f) Noticing Defaults. The Trustee shall not be required to take notice, or be deemed to have notice of any default hereunder, unless the Trustee shall be specifically notified in writing of such default by the holders of one or more of the Bonds.

(g) No personal liability for operation of System. The Trustee shall not be personally liable for any debts contracted or for damages to persons or to personal property injured or damaged, or for salaries or nonfulfillment of contracts during any period in which the Trustee may be in possession of or manage the System, as in this Mortgage provided.

(h) No withdrawal after notice of default. The Trustee shall not be required to permit the withdrawal of any cash, or take any other action, if at the time there exists to its knowledge, brought to its attention by written notice as provided in this Section, any default in respect of any of the covenants, agreements or provisions of this Mortgage.

Section 49. Lien of Trustee for Compensation and Expenses. The Trustee shall have a first lien hereunder upon the Mortgaged Property and the Pledged Revenues for reasonable compensation, expenses, advances and counsel fees incurred in and about the execution of the trusts hereby created and the exercise and performance of the powers and duties of the Trustee hereunder and the cost and expense of defending against any liability in the premises of any character whatsoever.

Section 50. Trustee may advance unpaid charge or insurance. In case the District shall fail seasonably to pay or cause to be paid, out of the Operation and Maintenance Fund or otherwise, any charge upon the System, or any part thereof, or to procure and maintain the insurance thereon required by this Mortgage, the Trustee may pay such charge or procure and maintain such insurance, without prejudice, however, to any rights hereunder of the Trustee or the holders of the Bonds arising in consequence of such failure; and any amount at any time so paid under this Section, with interest thereon from the date of payment at the rate of four per cent (4%) per annum shall be payable on the order of the Trustee from the Operation and Maintenance Fund and shall become an additional obligation secured by this Mortgage and the same shall be given preference in payment over any of the Bonds, but the Trustee shall be under no obligation to make any such payments, unless indemnified to its satisfaction against the expense thereof or furnished with means therefor by the holders of any of the Bonds.

Section 51. Examination of books, records and insurance policies in Trustee's possession. The Trustee shall permit the District, its officers or members or any holder of any of the Bonds, or its or his agent or attorney duly appointed and authorized in writing, to examine and inspect all insurance policies, all of the papers, books, records, accounts and data in its possession and relating to the System at all reasonable times and shall permit copies or transcripts thereof to be made by any such person or persons at all reasonable times.

Section 52. Notices by the Trustee. Any notice required or permitted to be given by the Trustee to the District under the provisions of this Mortgage shall be sufficiently given if it shall have been mailed, postage prepaid, addressed to the District at _____, Alabama, or at such other address as the District shall have in writing given to the Trustee.

Section 53. Resignation of the Trustee. The Trustee at the time acting hereunder may at any time resign and be discharged from the trusts hereby created by giving not less than sixty (60) days' written notice to the District and publishing notice thereof, specifying the date when such resignation will take effect, once a week in three (3) successive calendar weeks, in a newspaper published and of general circulation in the City of Birmingham, Alabama, and in a financial newspaper or journal published in the City of New York, New York, or the City of Chicago, Illinois, and such resignation shall take effect upon the day specified in such notice, unless a successor Trustee shall have been appointed by the holders of the Bonds or by the District as hereinafter provided and shall have accepted such appointment, in which event such resignation shall take effect immediately upon the appointment and acceptance of a successor Trustee.

Section 54. Removal of Trustee. The Trustee may be removed at any time by an instrument or concurrent instruments in writing, delivered to the Trustee and to the District, and signed by the holders of a majority in amount of the Bonds then outstanding.

Section 55. Successor Trustee. In case the Trustee hereunder shall resign or be removed, or be dissolved, or shall be in course of dissolution or liquidation, or otherwise become incapable of acting hereunder, or in case the Trustee shall be taken under the control of any public officer or officers, or of a receiver appointed by a court, a successor may be appointed by the holders of a majority in principal amount of the Bonds then outstanding, by an instrument or concurrent instruments in writing, signed by such holders, or by their attorneys in fact, duly authorized in writing; provided, nevertheless, that in any such event the District, by an instrument executed by authority of its Board of Directors and signed by its President and Secretary, may appoint a temporary Trustee to fill such vacancy until a successor Trustee shall be appointed by the holders of the Bonds in the manner above provided; and any such temporary Trustee so appointed by the District shall immediately and without further act be superseded by the Trustee so appointed by such holders. The District shall publish notice of any such appointment made by it, once in each week for two successive calendar weeks, in a newspaper published and of general circulation in the City of Birmingham, Alabama, and in a financial newspaper or journal published in the City of New York, New York, or the City of Chicago, Illinois.

In the event that no appointment of a successor Trustee shall have been made by the holders of the bonds pursuant to the foregoing provisions of this Section within sixty days after a vacancy in the office of Trustee shall have occurred, the holder of any of the Bonds issued hereunder or any retiring Trustee may apply to any court of competent jurisdiction for the appointment of a successor Trustee, and such court may thereupon, after such notice, if any, as it shall deem proper, appoint a successor Trustee.

Section 56. Vesting title in Successor Trustee. Any successor Trustee appointed hereunder shall execute, acknowledge and deliver to its predecessor, and also to the District, an instrument in writing accepting such appointment hereunder, and thereupon such successor Trustee, without any further act, deed or conveyance, shall become fully vested with all the estates, properties, rights, powers, trusts, duties and obligations of its predecessor; but such predecessor shall, nevertheless, on the written request of the District, execute and deliver an instrument transferring to such successor Trustee all the estates, properties, rights, powers and trusts of such predecessor hereunder; and every predecessor Trustee shall deliver all securities and moneys held by it to its successor; provided, however, that before any such delivery is required or made, all fees, advances and expenses of the retiring or removed Trustee shall be paid in full. Should any deed, conveyance or instrument in writing from the District be required by any successor Trustee for more fully and certainly vesting in such Trustee the estates, rights, powers and duties hereby vested or intended to be vested in the predecessor Trustee, any and all such deeds, conveyances and instruments in writing shall, on request, be executed, acknowledged and delivered by the District. The resignation of any trustee and the instrument or instruments removing any trustee and appointing a successor trustee hereunder, together with all deeds, conveyances and other instruments provided for in this Mortgage shall, at the expense of the District, be filed and recorded in the office of the Judge of Probate of the county or counties in which this Mortgage is recorded.

Section 57. Merger, consolidation or conversion of Trustee. Any corporation into which the Trustee, or any successor to it in the trusts created by this Mortgage, may be merged or converted or with which it or any successor to it may be consolidated, or any corporation resulting from any merger, conversion or consolidation to which the Trustee or any successor to it shall be a party shall, if satisfactory to the District, be the successor Trustee under this Mortgage without the execution or filing of any paper or any other act on the part of any of the parties hereto, anything herein to the contrary notwithstanding.

Section 58. Severability Clause. The invalidity of any one or more phrases, sentences, clauses or paragraphs hereof shall not affect the remaining portions of this Mortgage or any parts thereof, all of which are inserted conditionally on being held valid in law, and in the event that one or more of the phrases, sentences, clauses or paragraphs contained herein should be invalid, this instrument shall be construed as if such invalid phrase or phrases, sentence or sentences, clause or clauses and paragraph or paragraphs had not been inserted.

Section 59. Counterparts. This Mortgage may be simultaneously executed in several counterparts, all of which shall constitute one and the same instrument, but in making proof of any counterpart hereof it shall not be necessary to produce or prove the execution of any other counterpart.

MEREDITH WILLSON'S latest composition, "The Marguerite Waltz," is set to be recorded as the result of a deluge of congratulatory mail . . . The tune is dedicated to Marguerite Piazza, who co-stars with Meredith and Robert Merrill on their Monday night NBC revue . . . According to the Hollywood and Vine experts, Betty Hutton definitely is set to launch a TV series sometime in the immediate future . . . Her agents are talking to two networks . . . Don't bank on it, though, if you're a Hutton fan . . . These same "experts" have had Danny Kaye on TV for over a year now and he has never even been a guest star.

Loretta Young, long time screen favorite, has signed a contract to do a telepix series . . . She'll do 39 episodes . . . Margaret Truman has signed a six-months option for a TV series titled "The Cinderella Hour". . . A better title for any show featuring this charming gal would probably be "The Cinderella Story" for she became a star with only a fair voice and a wonderful personality . . . Robert Newton is shooting a series of 50 half-hour video films in the Caribbean with Raoul Walsh as director . . . Newton plays a pirate.

A new Bozo record is "My Mule Charley" backed by "Filbert the Frog," and the children will be charmed with Walt Disney's "Little Hiawatha" as told by Don Wilson . . . Do you know this about telephone taxes?

Including the federal excise tax, a total of 29¢ out of every dollar received from Southern Bell customers last year was paid out in taxes to federal, state and local governments. To put it another way, the average amount of taxes was $2.91 a month per telephone.

Telephone taxes are necessary to the support of government, but they do mount up. Higher taxes of course have effect on the price you pay for telephone service.

The next time you pay your telephone bill, remember that a good part of it is taxes for government and national defense.

Have you congratulated Zora Guy Smith yet? She received a "Certificate of Service" from Selective Service last week for ten years "of loyal and faithful service." Zora Guy really went to work for Selective Service in 1940, and has been with them ever since with the exception of a short time along about 1948 or '49. Anyway, we're glad for her and hope she has many more years of pleasant associations with the local Board.

Didn't know that little Tommy Kemp had become a minister. We know that the many friends of the Kemps here will be proud to learn this. Judge J. O. Hope Tommy does well in his chosen field of work. There is no higher calling.

Clanton Ball Club is going to sell season tickets this year. Understand there will be 30 games played on the home field and the tickets will sell for $10.00. That's 33 and 1-3 cents a game and is the most economical entertainment that we have heard of lately. Ask the members of the team when you see them next about their bargain in season tickets.

The little boy, about ten years old, rode his bicycle up to John Studdard's Service Station. He stopped at the air hose and got off. He leaned over and picked up the air hose and held it to his front tire which was a bit low on air. However, he held it there a little too long. "BANG" and the little boy walked off down the hill pushing his bicycle, the front tire flapping.

K. A. Hardy has been having a rough time getting his mail. It all started when Jeff Miller had some signs printed. Now we know it sounds like no connection between having signs printed and a man getting his mail, but here is the story: Jeff Miller runs the J. O. Miller 5c & 10c Store. He had some signs printed which stated: "WARNING, FISHING POX," Very Contagious. No Known Cure. Then it goes on to tell about the symptoms and the treatment which you can easily guess. Anyway, the Postman on K. A. Hardy's route got close enough to the house to see the big red "WARNING" and refused to go any closer; really, though, it was contagious we guess, and didn't want to get the fishing fever.

King Peach Will Reign

Peach Festival Committee To Hold "Kickoff" Dinner Tonight

The date is set.

Plans are in the making.

And Chilton County gears itself for the Sixth Annual Peach Festival to be conducted in Clanton on Wednesday, July 8th, 1953.

R. L. (Dick) Scott, General Chairman, after holding nearly daily conferences with past chairmen, has called a "kickoff" meeting for his workers for 7 o'clock tonight at the Dixie Cafe. The announcement was made last Monday night following an executive meeting in the Chilton County courthouse.

Chairman Scott has announced that the Peach Festival this year, honoring Chilton's multi-million dollar crop and it's better than 600 peach growers, will be the best the South has seen yet.

A grand parade, selection of Queen Elberta and a King to reign over the peach domain of Chilton, a county-wide holiday, peach auctions, barbecues, ball games, and many other events are being arranged to duly honor the rapidly developing agricultural specialty industry of Chilton County.

County Agent M. R. Glasscock has reported that Chilton County orchards totalling over 400,000 producing trees are right now developing the county's largest crop. Over a million bushels, or over two thousand car-lots of peaches are in prospect for the June and July harvest.

At the same time the County Agent also announced that Chilton County's six hundred peach growing families are now busily engaged in the process of thinning peaches from the insects and diseases.

"Chilton County Peaches Are Tops," is still the slogan for the Festival. And Chilton County growers are making every effort to develop a better quality peach this year to make sure that they live up to that slogan, according to Mr. Glasscock.

Serving along with Scott are Pope Payne, Co-Chairman; Harold H. Smyer, Secretary-Treasurer; Bob Taber, Publicity; Mrs. Erle Ellis, Peach Queen; M. R. Glasscock, Peach Sales Committee Chairman; J. Reed Thompson, Peach Exhibits; J. Archie Ogburn, Program; and J. Luther Kendrick, Safety. Mr. Scott said that other committee chairmen would be announced at tonight's meeting.

The Advisory Committee for this year's Peach Festival include J. Hollis Jackson, President of the Chilton County Chamber of Commerce; Joe A. Jackson, Bob Taber, Archie Ogburn and M. R. Glasscock, past general chairmen of the Peach Festival.

All-Day Singing Shiloh 5th Sunday

SIXTH ANNUAL PEACH FESTIVAL TO BE HELD IN CLANTON

Chilton County's sixth annual Peach Festival is to be held in Clanton, Ala., Wednesday, July 8th, announced R. L. "Dick" Scott, the 1953 Peach Festival Chairman. This announcement was made following an executive committee meeting in the Chilton County Court House, Clanton, Monday evening.

Committees were named to develop the 1953 gala preach event. Chairman Scott stated that the Peach Festival this year, honoring Chilton's multi-million dollar crop and its 600 peach growers, will be the best yet held.

A grand parade, selection of Queen Elberta and a King to reign over the peach domain of Chilton, a county-wide holiday, peach auctions, barbecues, ball games, and other events are being arranged to duly honor a rapidly developing agricultural speciality industry in Chilton County.

M. R. Glasscock, County Agent, stated that Chilton County orchards totaling over 400,000 producing trees are now developing the county's largest crop. Over 1,000,000 bushels, or over 2,000 car-lots, of peaches are in prospect for June and July harvest. Chilton County's six hundred peach growing families are now busily engaged in the process of thinning peaches to develop size and spraying trees to protect peaches from insects and diseases.

"Chilton County Peaches Are Tops" is the slogan of the Festival. Chilton County growers are making every effort to develop top quality peaches to live up to the slogan and to offer peaches at their best.

Chairman Scott, his Co-Chairman J. Pope Payne; Publicity Chairman, R. B. Taber; and many others are busy preparing to duly honor the queen of the fruits — Peaches — and to recognize Chilton's progressive farmers for the outstanding achievements attained in peach production. Chairman Scott invites all Alabamians to join the Chilton County group in Clanton July 8th.

The meeting in which Mr. Yeargan was named to this important office was held with the General Gorgas Post No. 1, at Birmingham.

All-Day Singing At Refuge Next Sunday

The annual all-day singing will be held at Refuge Baptist Church, five miles east of Clanton, next Sunday, May 17th. All singers are invited to come and help out, and all listeners are also invited. Come on out and spend the day singing and listening to good gospel songs. We are expecting some special singers to be with us. We give a cordial invitation to all to attend. Mr. S. V. Miller will be chairman for the day. Everyone invited to come.

Maybe Next Year, He Said

Chilton County Still Under Consideration For Hospital

State Health Officer, D. G. Gill, stated in a letter to Senator Tom Phillips last week that Chilton County would be considered for a hospital this year, but the government appropriation for Alabama had been cut between five and six million dollars for this State. This, he added, might make it necessary to wait until 1954 before work on the local hospital could start.

Chilton County's funds for the project are ready and the delay all along has been the State appropriation from the government. With the cut received recently it looks like Chilton County will have to wait another year before construction can begin.

The letter to Senator Phillips stated:

"Up to the present time the U. S. Congress has not made an appropriation for hospital construction under the Hill-Burton Act for the next fiscal year. Until such time as an appropriation is made it is not possible for the Health Department to make allocations. Unofficially we understand that there will be a cut in the amount of money available, which may reduce Alabama's appropriation between $500,000.00 and $600,000.00 this coming year. Before this projected cut we had set up the hospitals that we hope to build beginning some time after July 1, 1953. In this list is a hospital for Chilton County. When the actual federal appropriation is made I expect to go over all our applications with a sub-committee from my Board and decide which institutions we can build with the funds available. Chilton County will definitely be one of those under consideration and I hope that we can include it this next year. If that is not possible then a delay until the 1954 fiscal year will be necessary. The increased cost of building in the last two years has slowed down our building program considerably and as a result many of the communities had to wait for an extended period before we could begin construction.

Very sincerely,
D. G. GILL, M.D.,
State Health Officer."

CLANTON BASEBALL CLUB JOINS AUTAUGA LEAGUE; BUSY SEASON IS PLANNED

ROOSTING LEOPARD . . . "Baby," Chicago's Lincoln Park zoo leopard poses atop twelve-foot exercise tree. "Baby" is a native of India, and is five years old.

The Clanton Baseball Club has joined the Autauga County Baseball League and plans for a busy season is being made by the management. Season tickets will go on sale in the near future for $10 each which will entitle the holder to attend all home games. Plans are now to play at least 30 games at home.

The season will open on May 22 and will close late in August. Members of the League are Prattville, Autaugaville, Billingsley, Zeigler of Selma, and Clanton. The League is trying to get a Thorsby-Jemison team so that it will be a six-team league. Whether this will materialize is yet to be seen, according to a conversation with a member of the league this week.

The League will be governed by a Board of Directors which will be composed of a member from each member team. Games will be played on Tuesday and Friday nights with the exception of Billingsley. Because of an unlighted field the home games at Billingsley will be played in the afternoon.

A schedule will be worked out and announced as soon as the membership is completed.

LET'S FINISH THE JOB

The vote in the House of Representatives at Montgomery Tuesday to cut poll tax penalty to two years was a step in the right direction. Now let's finish the job.

The vote on the measure was 71-28 with Chilton County's Plott voting for the measure. This will cut back poll tax penalty to two years, but cannot be instituted even though the Senate passes the measure and the Governor signs it. It will only pave the way for a state-wide referendum, giving the people a chance to say whether or not they wish this penalty cut to two years. This is necessary because the poll tax law is written into our Constitution.

Recently the Women's Clubs of the State have made a big fight against the poll tax and various other organizations have taken up the fight.

We hope the Senate and the Governor sees fit to finish the job started by the House of Representatives Tuesday.

STATE WITHHOLDING TAX

A State Withholding Tax bill was introduced in the House of Representatives on the first day of the present session of the State Legislature.

This law would require employers to withhold tax from the salaries of their employees patterned after the federal tax we presume. In this case we feel that at the same time the legislature should pass a bill giving every small businessman a bookkeeper to aid him in taking care of the many tax forms, etc., that he has to make out.

Recently we read where they would attempt to raise their salary from twenty dollars per day to twenty-five dollars per day. They could junk this bill and apply that amount to the bookkeeper's salary they are going to send us.

LETTER to the EDITOR

Editor Chilton County News:

We have just returned from the Southern Baptist Convention which was held at Houston, Texas. Our group suggested that we give the News a brief sketch of messengers who attended the convention from Chilton County and the lot fell upon me to do it. However, the writer was a messenger from the Bibb Association in Bibb County, it was his privilege to accompany a group of messengers from Chilton County.

Our group consisted of Revs. J. L. Adams, William A. Carter, G. H. Ham and myself. Rev. Adams is pastor of the Refuge and Prospect Baptist churches. Rev. Carter is pastor of the New Salem and Mt. Carmel Baptist churches and the Rev. Ham is pastor of Pates Chapel and Mt. Pleasant Baptist churches. Of course, the writer represented the Randolph and Shady Grove Baptist churches in the Bibb Association.

We traveled in Rev. Adam's car and went through Meridian, Vicksburg and Shreveport, but returned via Beaumont, New Orleans, Mobile and Selma.

Others attending the convention from Chilton County were: Rev. and Mrs. R. E. Wilkins and little daughter, Rebecca, from the West End Baptist Church, Clanton; Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Jones, also of the West End Church. Rev. Hyman Atcheson and Mr. Archie Mac Taylor from the Chestnut Creek Baptist Church, Cooper; Rev. A. L. Dennis of the Verbena Baptist Church; Rev. Amos Hughes, pastor of the White City and Union Grove Baptist Churches; Rev. L. E. Daniel, pastor of the Thorsby Baptist Church and Dr. J. Gilbert Hutchinson of the First Baptist Church, Clanton. It is possible that others may have attended the convention from Chilton County that the writer failed to get, but we do not know of others.

It was probably one of the greatest conventions ever held. The people of Texas left no stones unturned in preparation for the great August Body of Baptists that represents more than 28,000 churches in the Southern Baptist Convention which comprises more than seven million members. We do not have the figures on the amount of all attending the convention, but a headline of one of the leading Houston papers stated as follows: "Forty - Five Thousand Baptists Due." The leaders of the convention predicted that twenty-five or thirty thousand people would be expected to attend.

There were about two thousand more messengers registered than ever in the history of the convention. There were eleven thousand and twenty-five messengers attending at the Miami Convention last year which was a record-breaker. The last figures that the writer received just before leaving the convention was 12,926.

A fine lady of another faith recently said to one of our Missionaries while traveling along on a bus: "I marvel how you Baptists move along with such great achievements with no one to tell you what to do." Well, the Lord Jesus is our High Priest and we do not have to depend upon some one to peep through a knot-hole and measure out rules and regulations for us to follow. The New Testament is our guide and the Lord Jesus is the Captain of our salvation.

Those attending from the Bibb Association were as follows: Rev. and Mrs. Forest Hicks of the Centreville Baptist Church; Rev. and Mrs. Thomas H. Brock of West Blocton; Rev. and Mrs. Wilkins Winn and baby from the Brent Baptist Church; Mrs. Cada Yarn, W.M.U. President; Rev. and Mrs. P. H. Bamburg, Associational Missionaries and the writer.

The next session of the convention meets at St. Louis, Mo. Begin now to make preparation for your pastor to attend.

CONGRESSIONAL Quiz

1. Q—Who is the new Republican National Chairman?
   A—Leonard W. Hall of New York, a former U.S. Representative, is the new GOP National Chairman. He succeeded C. Wesley Roberts, who resigned March 27. Roberts was elected National Chairman Jan. 17 after Arthur E. Summerfield was nominated for the Postmaster General post he now holds. Summerfield became National Chairman after the GOP nominated Dwight D. Eisenhower in July, 1952. Summerfield's predecessor, Guy G. Gabrielson, had supported Sen. Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) for the Presidential nomination.
2. Q—How many special assistants does President Eisenhower have?
3. Q—Can a foreign-born person become a Member of the U. S. Congress?
   A—Yes, but a person must be a citizen of the U. S. for at least seven years to qualify as a Member of the House and nine years to be eligible for election to the Senate.
4. Q—The Senate seems to be meeting more frequently recently and holding longer sessions. Why?
   A—The new Senate usually met three times a week until April 7. Then it began meeting daily as Majority Leader Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) called for a drive to complete action on the controversial "tidelands" issue—the topic most debated, on the Senate floor, this year.
5. Q—How many measures have been introduced in Congress this year?
   A—There were 6,876 measures of all kinds, public and private, introduced in the 83rd Congress through April 13—1,813 in the Senate and 5,063 in the House. These include Senate and House bills, resolutions, joint resolution and concurrent resolutions. Only 21 public laws were enacted through April 13.

Scanning the News

AMERICANS during the past week listened to the stories of sick and wounded Allied prisoners returned by the Communist in Korea and were angered as they have not been since the days of World War II. Death marches, disease and hunger killed at least 867 Americans and South Koreans in Red captivity, incomplete tabulations reveal.

One soldier told of a 300-mile forced march that began with 700 men and ended with only 289 alive. Other prisoners told of at least three other marches in which 156 Americans and 200 South Koreans died. A Turkish prisoner revealed that 100 Americans died of starvation in his camp alone.

These stories have created an anger in the American people that will be slow to die.

Meanwhile, in Washington Congressmen have demanded a full report on alleged mistreatment of prisoners and demand that Communist prison camps be opened to international inspection.

● Also, in Washington last week President Eisenhower warned that America and her Allies must not relax their rearming because of the Russian peace campaign. "Until the condition for genuine peace have been firmly established, it would be foolhardy for us to delude ourselves about the dangers confronting us," he said.

"Until we can see genuine evidence of change in long-range (Russian) intentions, there can be no justifications for relaxing our buildup," he added.

This buildup of power which the President says must continue, received a boost and a blow during the week. The boost was in the form of a $885,000,000 budget voted by North Atlantic Treaty Council to build airports, a radar warning system, and other installations. The blow came when West Germany's upper house voted to demand high-court approval of the European-army treaty before going any further with ratification. That could stall radification for months, observers reported.

● General Douglas MacArthur who has been strangely silent for several weeks has whipped up new debate with his declaration last week that the Korean War and all other global issues could be settled promptly by notifying the Chinese Reds that their bases and supply lines would be destroyed.

At least one Congressman agreed with MacArthur and demanded atomic bombing of strategic targets in North China and Manchuria. In general, however, MacArthur's suggestion was received rather coolly in Washington.

Said General MacArthur: "We still possess the potential to destroy Red China's flimsy industrial base and sever her tenuous supply lines from the Soviet. This would deny her the resources to support modern war and sustain large military forces in the fields. This, in turn, would greatly weaken the Communist government of China and threaten the Soviet's present hold upon Asia."

The White House would make no comment on MacArthur's statement.

Another Congressman did make this comment: "If MacArthur is wrong, it would mean World War III, which would cost the lives of millions of Americans if it failed."

THAT STRAWBERRY PATCH

After strawberry harvest is finished, the plants should be thinned if the patch is to be kept for another year. To thin the plants, bar off each side of the row or run a scooter down the row's center. Then chop out plants to the width of a hoe. Apply 6-8-4 fertilizer at the rate of 500 pounds per acre and work the soil back to the row.

DALE CARNEGIE

CARNEGIE

EVERN DAWDY, 11122 University Avenue, Edmonton, Alberta, was attending public school in the sixth grade when he met a fellow student named Vern Gillespie.

One day at school he had a bad attack and was taken home. The doctor was called and told Vern he couldn't possibly live more than six months and then that would only be if he were very careful and did not become excited or even move quickly. Also he would have to spend most of the time in bed or walk very slowly to the front porch and sit in a chair.

Vern used to visit with him quite often. One day the semi-invalid said, "If I am only going to live six months, then I am going to LIVE it. Let's go." He got up and started down the street. From then on, he went back to school, played ball, skated, danced and did everything any normal boy would do, even was elected president of the Kappa Kappa Tan school club and was its most active member.

Instead of dying in six months, he lived six years, and probably would have lived longer only one day the class went beyond the city limits, picking flowers for the biology class. A terrific rain storm came up and all were drenched to the skin. Vern caught a bad cold which ran into pneumonia and took his life. But his death was not caused by his heart condition—which proves that, to live in "day-tight compartments" and not worry about yesterday or tomorrow will give us all longer and happier lives.

Chilton County Boasts Most Beautiful Drive-In Theatre In The Southland

You can talk to motorists North, East, South or West, and you won't find anyone, anywhere, who will admit there is a Drive-In Theatre more beautiful than the Clanton Drive-In Theatre.

Located just three miles north of Clanton it covers fifteen acres that has been transformed by the owners into a veritable fairyland of flowers and shrubs.

Just for instance within a few short steps from the "office" to the admittance window at the gate you will see gladiolous, roses of many kinds and colors, lilacs, thrift, verbena, petunias, California tree roses, poppies and others too numerous to mention. Trees by the thousands have been set out on and around the Drive-In. Among them are pines, magnolia, mimosia, oaks, weeping willow, arbevidas, dogwood, and redbuds with a good many fruit trees thrown in.

Joe Jackson is the man behind the production at Clanton Drive-In Theatre and Mrs. Myrtle Wilson is treasurer and we might add the brains behind the brains. Both work long and hard hours to make their property "tops" in it's field and in this they have succeeded well. It's beauty stands out along the 2000 feet front along U. S. Highway beauty that is concealed by shrubbery and the like along the high fences.

And what does it take to keep a fifteen acre flower garden looking pretty? Surely you are familiar with the story of the boy who always admired the pretty ships maintained by the Navy. Then he became old enough to join the services and he joined the Navy and was put aboard one of the nice, pretty, clean ships. He immediately wrote to his mother telling her now he knew what kept the ships so clean. That is the same store here. This organization owns enough tools to stock two or three farms—plus a tractor, three mowing machines, a pick-up truck and a well equipped repair shop. They maintain their own paint shop and work rooms.

At the concession booth, which incidently is without doubt the most beautiful and cleanest found anywhere; "modern" is the word for every department. They have consistently maintained an average of 100 percent on their inspection charts by the State Health Department. This is seldom seen anywhere.

For the summertime when a car gets a bit warm for some, the management has constructed "bleachers" down in front of the huge screen that will easily seat three hundred people. A large loud speaker is set in front of the bleachers to provide the sound.

Near these bleachers and a bit right, and in front, is a place for the kiddies to play who are not interested in what is going on in the movies. There are swings, slides, and sand boxes.

In the projection booth is the largest and finest machines available with every modern improvement to bring to the Clanton Drive-In customers the very best in entertainment.

The beauty and conveniences at the Drive-In didn't just happen. It is the work and determination of two very likable and progressive people that made it what it is today.

You can visit them at any time and you will marvel at what has been accomplished by the proprietors.

Rains Bring Troubles For Some Pond Owners

Auburn, Ala. — Alabama farmers were advised this week to hold off fertilizing their farm ponds until the heavy spring rains are over.

Earl Kennamer, API Extension fish and wildlife specialist, explained that surplus water running through the ponds is washing out the fertilizer before it has a chance to increase the microscopic plant growth in the pond water.

The specialist also said the recent heavy rains have proved the necessity for good dam construction and ample spillways. Moreover, the rains have brought to light the fact that too many ponds have watershed areas too large for them. Kennamer said the correct ratio of watershed area to pond area is about 15 acres of pasture or 30 acres of woodland to one acre of pond.

On top of all these troubles the rains have brought pond owners, those ponds through which too much surplus water has flowed have had fish washed out of them.

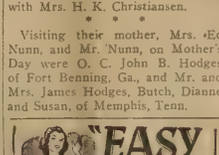
LAFF OF THE WEEK

"... and you'd better bring some cash with you, dear—he's not as gullible as we thought!"



LIGHTER cakes result when you fold egg whites into the batter, using an up and down over motion. Do not work the egg whites in too thoroughly.

It's easy to get cakes to bake perfectly flat on top if you spread the batter around the sides of the pan first, and then let the batter fill the middle.

Never wash the flour sifter in soapy water. The soap sticks to the meshes and is difficult to remove. Use baking soda in the washing water and a utility or vegetable brush.

Never shake flour into a cup when measuring it. Sift the flour before measuring then spoon lightly into a cup and level off the top with a knife or spatula.

For a welcome change in your next custard pie, pour a layer of maple syrup into the bottom of the pan over the unbaked pie crust before adding custard, then bake as usual.

Glazed sweet rolls are attractive. Add a little sugar to the egg white for glazing if you want a sweet and shiny topping.

To separate eggs, have them as cold as possible. This chills both the yolk and white and makes them easy to separate.

If you have egg yolks to save, cover them with cold water and they will keep perfectly for several days.

To cut very fresh cake or bread in thin slices, place the knife which you're going to use in very hot water for several minutes, then dry and use at once.

Raisins, dates and other dried fruits will not stick to the food chopper so readily if you dip the chopper in hot water before using.

THIS WEEK'S RECIPE
Vegetable Casserole
(Serves 4-6)

4 cups sliced, cooked carrots
½ cup top milk
4 tablespoons melted butter
½ cup chopped ripe olives
½ cup chopped green sweet pepper
¼ cup chopped onion
Salt and pepper
½ cup grated American cheese

Combine carrots, milk, butter, olives, green pepper, onion, salt and pepper to taste in a baking dish. Sprinkle cheese over top. Bake in a hot (400°) oven for 10 to 15 minutes or until vegetables are heated through and cheese is melted.

Mother's Day Program Presented By Better Speech Club May 8th

The members of the Better Speech Club entertained their mothers and friends with most interesting and enjoyable Mother's Day program Friday, May 8th, at 10:30 a.m.

Sandra Ellison was hostess for this occasion. She greeted the mothers and visitors as they entered the room and presented them with a program and a book mark made by the members of the class. Each student pinned a corsage on his mother.

Ophelia Wyatt, president of the club, gave the opening remarks. The Scripture was given by a group of students, followed by a beautiful prayer given by Fred Wilson.

Piano selections were rendered by Bonnie Sue Burnette and Jane Teel.

Sandra Ellison told how Mother's Day originated.

Tributes to mother were given by a group and then Kenneth Devaughan, Billy Miller, Joseph Knight, Howard Pitts, Wayne Cleckler, Wayne Little, Ervin Dailey and Bonnie Smith recited poems about mother.

The entire class participated in a folk dance to the song, "Come Let Us Be Joyful."

Duets by Denny Wood and Bobby Littleton, Sandra Ellison and Avoline Eiland, were enjoyed by all.

Original poems written by 22 of the students were recited. Some of these were quite humorous and others serious. One could easily tell that a lot of time was spent on composing as well as memorizing the poems.

Last, but most impressive was the ritual. The table was beautifully arranged with red roses, centered with a candelabra holding six red tapers. A candle was lighted by each speaker as he recited his part of the ritual. The speakers were Avoline Eiland, Bonnie Sue Burnette, Billy Miller, Denny Wood, Eddie Mack Setliff and Larry Culpepper.

Janis Teel, on behalf of the class, presented Mrs. Curry Thomas, their teacher, with a Life Membership to the P.-T.A. This came as a complete surprise to Mrs. Thomas, as the class had worked secretly in making arrangements for this gift.

After enjoying such an impressive program, each mother and visitor was invited to have lunch with the class.

I am sure that each mother thoroughly enjoyed this program, and too, could see the effect that another year of excellent training and teaching has had on her child.

Lutheran Church News—

The Service 11:00; Sunday School 9:00. Visitors welcome.

Amidst the uncertainties of life, we have the unchangeable Gospel of Christ. Many times the question is asked, "Can a person be absolutely sure of salvation?" The answer to that question is a most emphatic yes. The Gospel is not a vague fabrication of ideas, but it is the definite, assured plan of God to redeem sinners.

Again sometimes people ask, "Must not one have an experience that he is saved?" We must answer that question with a big "no." Undoubtedly some people do have a "Damascus road experience" similar to the Apostle Paul, but that does not mean that everyone must have a similar conversion. Sometimes I feel that revivalism tends to convey this impression by compelling would be converts to give "testimonies" of their conversions. Personally, I would be totally unable to give the exact date, place and time of my conversion; yet, I know Christ as my Saviour and I am trusting Him for my salvation.

Remember, friends, Christianity is not some vague, superficial feeling that you "have the spirit," but it is a dynamic, abiding faith and trust in our resurrected Lord Jesus Christ. To Paul, Christianity was not such a faith because in his second epistle to Timothy, he said, "for I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that He is able to keep that which I have committed unto Him against that day."

Sex Misinformation—A Major Cause Of Mental Illness—

(By William R. Morgan)

In discussing this subject I am well aware of the fact that I am handling a "hot pan," but in dealing with emotional problems, it is a subject that cannot be ignored or bypassed. Erroneous attitudes about sex are responsible for so many marital disharmonies as well as personality disturbances.

From time immemorial until now, fertility and reproduction have been surrounded by an atmosphere of mystery and awe. In ancient Babylon and Greece, fertility was incarnated into the form of goddesses; Ashtar in Babylon and Aphrodite in Greece. Ceremonies to these goddesses were often accompanied with unbridled lewdness and passion. Some Bible scholars think that Belshazzar's feast, recorded in the fifth chapter of Daniel, was a feast to Ashtar with its accompanying sexual license; when the mysterious handwriting appeared on the wall foretelling the destruction of Babylon.

My purpose in this article is to dispel some of this unhealthy mystery by exposing some widely held, but completely erroneous attitudes about sex.

1. Sex is sinful and wrong.

This false idea is widely held either consciously or sub-consciously by countless multitudes today. Psychiatrists tell us that most instances of impotence in men and frigidity in women originate in this belief.

Let's look at it sensibly however. That is God's method of procreation of the race; therefore, would God be the author of anything sinful? Not hardly, since He is the Creator of us all and knows more about us than we know ourselves for truly, "It is He that hath made us, and not we ourselves."

Sex, far from being sinful or "dirty," is sacred and holy when utilized within the bonds of matrimony. Nothing that God has made is ever sinful. It is man's abuse of it that causes trouble.

2. Sex is entirely a physical experience.

This is another currently accepted falsehood that has wrecked many lives. Sexual experience involves the entire personality as well as (and I would say more than) the body. It is an experience that leaves an indelible mark on the souls of both partners for either good or evil. To me this is an air tight argument for chastity before marriage.

Young people should be taught this fact in unmistakably clear language. Let them realize that a happy marriage and home life should not be jeopardized for a momentary thrill." The sex impulse is strong to be sure; but it can be, and must be directed into the proper channel (marriage) for the good of the individual and society.

3. Marriage is a cure for personality disturbances.

Again, another completely false idea. Marriage is not a "miracle drug" for immaturity. Matrimony has never cured a neurotic and never will.

Common sense alone should tell us that habit patterns, which have been built up since childhood, cannot be changed overnight; if at all. Those who marry with the idea of 'reforming" the spouse usually end up in the divorce court, bitter and disillusioned. I would never advise marriage to anyone who shows any symptoms of immaturity, alcoholism, irresponsibility, or a domineering personality. Such a union might conceivably work out, but the odds are very heavy against it.

My counsel on this point to those contemplating matrimony is this: If you cannot accept your intended partner as he (or she) is, then for the sake of you both call off your marriage. If you don't you are making a desperate and maybe disastrous gamble with your happiness.

In concluding this article let me say that if the public was educated to a sensible and correct attitude toward sex and reproduction, mental illness, divorce, marital discord and sex crimes could be drastically reduced and our most sacred institution, the home, would be secure and safe.

Hot Weather Calls For Cooled Eggs, Is Advice

With hot weather just around the corner, egg quality will drop unless poultrymen take the necessary steps to cool their eggs and keep them cool.

A good underground storage pit will hold eggs at a satisfactory temperature for a few days, points out John Weeks, API Extension poultryman. This pit is very good to use with small flocks of from 300 to 500 hens. On larger poultry farms a mechanically refrigerated room is better.

CIVIL WAR VET, 107

Austin, Texas, — Thomas E. Riddle, one of Texas' two living Confederate veterans, celebrated his 107th birthday on April 16th, with appropriate ceremonies — a three-layer cake and gifts from friends. Texas's other Confederate veteran, 106-year-old Walter Williams, of Franklin, is the nation's oldest surviving veteran of the Civil War.

FENCE POSTS

Posts to be used for fences will dry better in summer than in fall or winter. Also they will absorb the preservative treatment better. That's why early spring and summer are the best periods in which to cut fence posts.

EVERY MAN, WOMAN, AND CHILD IN ALABAMA has a stake in the present battle in the legislature between medical doctors and chiropractors. Even though you may never have been to a chiropractor, and may never go, they are defending your right to use the doctor of your choice and the healing system you have confidence in.

The men who boss the medical monopoly tell you that all they want is to control the chiropractors. Privately they admit they want to run chiropractors out of the state. If they succeed in getting control, you should have no doubt about what will happen.

They openly claim they have a "right" to regulate anyone practicing the healing arts "by any system whatsoever," whether it is by medicine or something altogether different.

In the past they tried to grab control over the dentists, the optometrists and others. They failed, but now they are at it again, and it is the chiropractors they are after.

It's up to the public, through our representatives in Montgomery, to tell these ambitious men that they should stick to their medicine and quit trying to be little gods determined to dictate to another profession also engaged in getting sick people well — and doing very well at it without their help.

Don't blame your family physician. He is no more responsible for what his political leaders do than you are for what is done by some of the politicians you help elect.

Alabama Highlights

Dallas County was established in 1818 with Cahaba chosen as the County seat as well as the State capitol. In 1826, the capitol was moved to Tuscaloosa and later to Montgomery. In 1865, the County seat was moved to Selma.

Dallas County was named in honor of Alexander J. Dallas, of Pennsylvania, Vice-President of the United States, 1845-49.

Among the famous men to call Dallas County their home were Senator Edmund Winston Pettus and Senator and Confederate General John Tyler Morgan; Vice-President William Rufus King, John Phillip Weaver antebellum industrialist and Nathaniel H. R. Dawson, Confederate officer and United States Commissioner of Education.

During the summer of 1540, De-Soto's expedition passed through Dallas County on it's way to Mauvilla. One of the places visited by the expedition was on the Alabama River, just below the mount of Cedar Creek, a site known as Kaxa and described as "a wretched village on the river banks."

On the west side of Mulberry Creek near its junction with the Alabama River was a fort, Nitahaurits, an Alibamo town signifying "bear fort." The Great Bear Creek swamp of today, probably got its name from that town.

Folks and Things ABOUT TOWN

—By Ben

One of our prominent merchants works a small red-headed boy with a wide grin and a million dollar personality. He helps around the store on Saturday and has learned to wait on the trade. Last Saturday afternoon a lady was giving her grocery order and the small red-head was filling it. The housewife asked, "Do you have any horse-radish?" Quick as a flash the boy returned, "Lady, if we haven't we'll kill a horse and make some."

N. C. Petersen, new agent at the L. & N. Railroad, was up to see us the past week. He tells us that the lightning situation around the depot has been much improved. That is good news as there was much room for improvement there. We wish Mr. Petersen well in his new assignment and offer our cooperation at all times. Mr. Petersen, whose home is in Thorsby, was transferred here from Sylacauga.

T-Sgt. Emile M. Jorgensen was here to see how many recruits he could get for the United States Marines the other day. He works out of Montgomery and hits Clanton about every second Thursday afternoon. Sgt. Jorgensen says about himself: "I was born in Idaho, reared some in Utah, and grew up in the Marines in California. A veteran of World II, served in the Marshall Islands, Saipan, Tinian, and Iwo Jima campaigns. Had a look at China and Japan and have just returned from a year in Korea where I spent the easiest year since in service." The Sgt. says he is destined to stay in the Marines until Mother Nature retires him, however, we think Uncle Sam will have more to say about the matter than does Mother Nature. He says he has been bit by the Mason & Dixon Line (whatever that is) and claims that when he has retired he will settle close to the black eyed peas and grits. At present he's practicing ways to make hush puppies, that is when he's not hunting recruits for Uncle Sam's Marines. His office is 316 New Post Office Building, Montgomery, but he's here every second and fourth Thursdays. You'll probably find him around the Pure Oil Company Office across from the Courthouse. He'll be glad to answer your questions. Look him up.

A lady was given an alligator as a present and didn't know what to do with it for the present, so she put it in the bath tub. Remembering an appointment she rushed down town. When she returned home she found this note from her maid: "Sorry. Ise quit. I doan want to work in a house where they's a alligator. I'd a tole you, but I didn't think the question would ever come up."

There was a safety sign in front of the school which said in bold print: "Don't Kill A Child." Under it in a childish scraml was another line: "Wait For A Teacher."

Lions Present ---

"On Stage America" Next Thursday Night

"America's On Stage Tonight," is the song that will get the local talent show "On Stage, America," sponsored by the Lions Club, going on Thursday night, May 21st. The minstrel group will enter in colorful costumes and with tambourines, led by the two end men, Amos and Andy, being played by Alvin Davis and Charlie Tucker. These two gentlemen will be wearing red and green satin costumes with bow ties and black curly wigs.

The show will be divided into two parts and in Part I all of the Amateur Contestants will perform in between the minstrel groups, jokes and chorus girls routine dance. Each one in the audience with adult tickets will be asked to cast a vote for the favorite contestant during intermission. The voting is done by placing the contestant's number on the back of the ticket where Troy Maddox's ad appears on line mraked "Vote Here," and placing the ticket in the ballot box found in the back of the auditorium. After intermission these votes will be counted and on Thursday night the show comes to a climax when the Interlocutor, being played by Pete Goodwin in purple and gold satin costumes, announces the winners for the evening. However, on Friday night the votes will be added to these cast on Thursday night and the three with the greatest number of votes for the two nights' performances will be presented with gift certificates given through the courtesy of local merchants. The first place winner will receive a $15 gift certificate; the second place, a $10.00 gift certificate given by Clanton Jewelry Company; and third place, a $5.00 gift certificate given by Levine's. There will be dancers, musicians and singers to compete for these prizes.

The Minstrel Belles in white dresses trimmed in red and white-check, topped with red and white-check bandanas in Aunt Jemima style, you will find to be a very lady-like group. Those taking part in this group are Troy Maddox, B. L. Adams, Don Sumerall, Jeff Miller and Lewis (Pig) Headley. The Minstrel Beaux; Kingfish, Brother Crawford and Rochester, played by H. T. Salter, Jr., W. D. Hocutt, Curtis Baker and Ray Brock, complete the circle and will entertain you with their jokes and antics.

You will enjoy the dances of the chorus girls to the songs of Alexander's Rag Time Band, Hotsy Totsy, My Old Kentucky Home and Dark Town Strutter's Ball. It is a variety show you must see. Get out to vote for your top talent acts. The dates are Thursday and Friday nights, May 21 and 22.

Those at the dinner will meet Mrs. Mary Kelly of New York, organization director and representative of the nation-wide Community Concert Service. Mrs. Kelly will be in Clanton throughout the week assisting with details of the campaign, with headquarters at the Willingham Hotel. Call Information for telephone number. Memberships may be called or turned in each day from 10:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

Mrs. Bea Bryan, Association Secretary, made a special point of the fact that no box-office-admissions, except to strangers, will be sold, since the artists who appear in the series are selected according to the number of memberships obtained during the drive.

The budget will govern the final selection of artists. Chilton County has an excellent chance to secure top-billed artists. Everyone is requested to get in their membership early, and to try to get another new membership. Be Community Concert minded. Those who value music in their own lives, for the schools for the young people who need the worthwhile, and for its importance in a well-rounded life for a Community's culture will be happy in joining in this undertaking for another successful Concert season.

Health Dept. Reports 123 Hospitals Meet Health Standards

Alabama now has 123 general hospitals which have met the standards set up by the State Health Department's Hospital Planning Division.

This announcement was made today by Dr. D. G. Gill, State Health Officer, in observance of National Hospital Week. The observance began May 10 and will continue until May 16.

In addition to those 123 general hospitals, this state also has eight approved tuberculosis hospitals, 70 approved nursing homes for the aged, 26 approved clinic-hospitals, two approved maternity homes, two approved maternity hospitals, an approved orthopedic hospital and an approved phychiatric hospital, Dr. Gill said. He added that these totals do not include hospitals owned by the Federal Government and mental institutions operated by the State of Alabama.

"Alabama has benefitted greatly from the Hill-Burton Act," he said. "Thanks to the hospitals that have come into being as a result of the generous financial assistance provided by that Act, this state is in a better position to celebrate Hospital Week than ever before in its history. However, we need still more hospitals. Numerous applications for new hospitals are on file with the Health Department to be built whenever Federal funds become available."

Moves Made To Curb VE Disease

Auburn, Ala.—Market hog production has become a multi-million dollar farm enterprise in Alabama. But as livestock numbers increase, disease problems multiply.

One example of the disease problems is vesticular exanthema, which is a foot and mouth disease of swine. VE was practically unknown in America except in California until a year ago. Since then it has spread to 40 states.

There has been no outbreak on any farm in the state. There were, however, three or four outbreaks in stockyards and in garbage feeding pens. Even so, because of embargoes on shipment of our hogs to other states for slaughter, this disease has cost the state's farmers several million dollars.

Veterinary authorities say that the disease is spread by feeding raw and uncooked meat scraps. Usually these are obtained from Army camps, hotels, and resturants. Few, if any, farmers in most counties feed such waste materials. But the one-half of one per cent of the nation's hogs that are garbage fed are jeopardizing the value of the other 99½ per cent.

Some weeks ago a group of swine growers called on officials of the Alabama Farm Bureau to help prepare and present legislation to the Legislature to require that all garbage fed to swine be cooked at least 30 minutes at 212 degrees F. This committee and these farm leaders prepared the legislation.

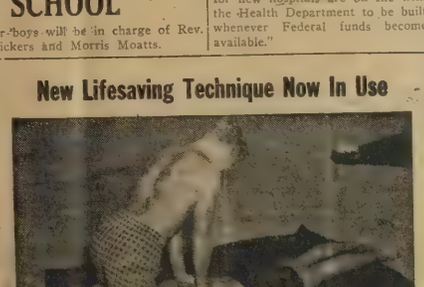
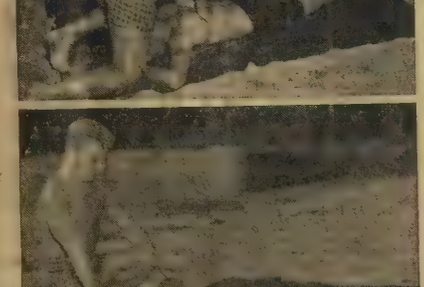
New Lifesaving Technique Now In Use





NEW ARTIFICIAL RESPIRATION TECHNIQUE, the Nielsen "back-pressure arm-lift" method, which has now been adopted as standard by the American Red Cross, the Armed Forces and the National Safety Council, is demonstrated in these scenes from a new motion picture, "Seconds Count," produced by the Ætna Casualty and Surety Company. The 10-minute movie, which portrays a step-by-step demonstration of the Nielsen method, may be obtained without charge for showings by contacting local Ætna representatives or through the company's public education department at Hartford, Conn. The "back-pressure arm-lift" method increases chances of revival since it pulls fresh air into lungs as well as expelling air from them. In administering it, rescuer rocks forward exerting pressure on victim's back (top photo) and then rocks backwards grasping victim's arms (bottom photo), repeating cycle 10 to 12 times a minute.

Celebrating Silver Anniversary

FFA CONVENTION TO BE HELD AT AUBURN JUNE 4-6

Dates and plans for this year's annual FFA Convention to be held at Auburn, have been announced by T. L. Faulkner, executive secretary of the Alabama FFA Association. Future Farmers will arrive on the API campus Thursday morning, June 4th, and will wind up their three-day session by noon Saturday, June 6th.

It will be three days crammed full of activities for the FFA'ers. State winners will be selected in the various contests, state officers elected for next year, awards to those Future Farmers with outstanding accomplishments, entertainment, and other events will keep their time filled.

"Added emphasis is being placed on this year's convention," said Faulkner, "as Alabama's over 12,000 FFA members are cooperating with the National organization of the Future Farmers of America in celebrating the Silver Anniversary of FFA."

Coming to Auburn will be the advisers of the 252 FFA chapters in the state, a delegate from each chapter, all winners in the district contests who will compete for state honors, state winners who are now being judged in several FFA contests, and a number of specially talented Future Farmers who will put on a FFA talent program.

Mr. Faulkner also said that arrangements have been made to have Jimmy Dillon, National FFA president from Jones, Louisiana, address the convention at the first general session on Thursday night, June 4th.

A FFA talent program has been added to this year's convention. It will feature FFA members from over the state who possess talent of an entertaining nature. "This is the first time a talent contest has been held at a state FFA convention in Alabama," said Faulkner.

J. C. Cannon, State FFA Adviser, had this to say about the convention: "The FFA members in Alabama are determined to make this the biggest and best State Convention they ever had as FFA is passing the quarter-century mark of the world's largest farm boy organization, the Future Farmers of America."

Points On Control Of Cotton Insects

Farmers who follow these three points will do the best job of controlling cotton insects:

1. Do not start poisoning too early. Apply control measures only on those fields where damage is being done, and do not begin fighting boll weevils until cotton is fruiting freely.

2. When needed, apply boll weevil poison every five days until top crop of bolls is grown.

3. Do not stop poisoning too soon.

MORE GRAIN SORGHUM NEEDED

Although the acreage planted to grain sorghum has dropped during the past several years, the fact remains that the crop paid off well in the last two dry summers. Most livestock producers need grain sorghum. June is the month to plant it.

CONGRATULATIONS, COUNCILMEN

We understand the Mayor and Council of the City of Clanton and the management at the H-W Chair Company have come to an agreement as to the water conditions at the factory. For this we are proud. We are glad to see that harmony reigns between the two as we believe that the H-W Chair Company means much to the City of Clanton and we are sure the City of Clanton means much to the H-W Chair Company as the management is composed of local citizens and each has the well being of the City at heart.

May this harmony continue.

Tiny Sure Got "Alarmed"

Tiny Jackson, the patrolman, caused quite a stir last night—but let him tell you about it:

"I was making my regular eleven o'clock rounds—trying all the doors on Main Street. I came to Johnson's Jewelry Store—tried their door and it seemed a bit loose. So I shook it harder.

"So to make doubly sure I shook it doubly hard. Then everything happened at once — bells started clanging, crowds collecting, the Chief driving up with the siren going full blast. When he saw it was me who set the burglar alarm off, he put his revolver away—but what confusion!"

From where I sit, Tiny really should be praised for taking extra precautions. After all, you can't be too careful. The beer retailers feel that way, too. They work voluntarily with the Brewing Industry's Self-Regulation program — protecting their investment by keeping their places clean and orderly. They aim to "ring the bell" with the public.

Boys State To Open At The University On May 30th

SUPERVISION OF INSTRUCTION AT COUNTY AND CITY LEVEL

In working with the local supervisors, it is found that much time is needed in helping them plan their work, as well as to evaluate specific situations. School visitation, faculty meetings, conferences with teachers, principals, and superintendents are important in working with the supervisor.

Three two-day workships were held during the school year. The problems studied in these workshops were selected by the supervisors of the State as the most important this year. The workshops were held in three different parts of the State and each supervisor attended one or more of them. The following problems were studied:

1. Child Study. The case of Mickey Murphy was used for evaluating the supervisor's understanding of child growth and development. The experience was planned for the purpose of finding out how problems pertaining to the adjustment of an individual pupil are thought through and how objective this thinking is. The technique was evaluated as a possible way of helping teachers in their understanding of children.

2. Reading in the Total School Program. The purpose of this conference was to assist supervisors to find ways of (1) helping teachers understand and accept the philosophy of developmental reading; (2) helping teachers in selecting and developing materials; and (3) helping teachers to develop specific skills in teaching reading. Many junior and senior high school teachers are accepting their responsibilities in teaching reading. The teaching of reading should not be restricted to the first six grades, but is a responsibility of teachers through senior high school.

3. The Supervisor's Job. The participants at this workshop had an opportunity to study materials and information on the work of the supervisors which had been gathered by a special committee. The workshop was planned and organized to help supervisors work more effectively in the 12-year school program; contribute to an interpretation of the supervisor's job to the lay public; and develop criteria for evaluating specific supervisory programs.

The 16th annual session of Alabama Boys State, sponsored by The American Legion, will open on the main campus of the University of Alabama on May 30, it was announced here today by the Legion's state Director of Americanism David M. Vess. Slated to run through June 6, the 1953 version of Boys State will again be attended by outstanding Alabama high school juniors.

Designed as a citizenship training program by the Legion, Boys State officials have arranged an unusually interesting program for the week. Opening day, May 30, will see the registration of boys, room assignments and some acquaintance-making. The evening program has a slate of prominent Alabama speakers, including Dr. John M. Gallalee, President of the University; John E. Drinkard, Department Commander of The American Legion; Dr. O. E. Carmichael, president-designate of the University; Dr. York Willbern, Head of the University's Department of Public Administration; and Cliff Harper, executive director of the Alabama High School Athletic Association.

The feature attraction of Sunday afternoon, after church, will be a competitive swimming meet.

The week of learning government by doing will be climaxed on June 4th, when Boys Staters take over Montgomery and the state government for a day. The Boys State Governor and Legislature will convene, assisted by the regularly elected governmental officials of the State of Alabama.

Boys State Chairman Dr. York Willbern and Boys State Director Cliff Harper expressed appreciation for the fine way in which high schools, civic clubs and Legion Posts are cooperating in sponsoring boys for the 1953 session.

All Boys State officials have evidenced high optimism for a remarkable program, in view of the new physical facilities available for the State this year. The 1953 Boys Staters will be housed in regular University dormitories for the first time and will enjoy meeting in the newly air-conditioned Morgan Hall auditorium. The hearty eating youngsters will be fed well, too, eating the same fare that is regularly served to the mighty Crimson Tide.

Tractor Helps With Electric Fencing

Auburn, Ala.—The electric fence, combined with tractor power, can help the livestock farmer manage his pastures for the most profitable meat and milk production.

Since many plants do better when grazing is rotated, subdividing a pasture into smaller areas is often an excellent practice. Use of the electric fence makes this practice easier and less expensive than with permanent type of fencing.

The hydraulic control on the tractor can be used to force posts into the ground. With single action hydraulic cylinders this is done by mounting a crossbeam so that the lift pushes one end up while the other end forces the post down. After the fence has served its purpose, the posts are readily pulled up by using the tractor lift directly with a grab chain.

Now while the ground is soft and before pressure of spring work gets too heavy the time is right to attend to temporary fencing problems.

ACROSS the DESK
ideas from other editors

From The Independent, Fuquay Spring, N. C.: The American Press magazine recently polled a representative group of country editors on the subject of what the current Congress should do. Almost 500 of these editors responded—and the general tenor of their opinion, the magazine reports, is "that Congress should get rid of laws rather than make new ones; that government should interfere as little as possible with the freedom of the people; and that government should not enter into competition with private business . . ."

In other words, these grass roots editors want less government domination of our lives, not more—and cheaper government instead of more expensive government. It's a good bet that the majority of the American people feel exactly the same way.

From The Lincoln Times, Lincolnton, N. C.: The old illusion that the cost of government isn't too important to the average family because it can be paid by soaking the rich dies hard.

Today, the rich pay extremely heavy taxes—the federal personal income tax alone reaches a top of 92 per cent. Even so, their tax contributions meet only a small part of the total cost of government, for the plain reason that there aren't enough of them.

According to the Tax Foundation, last year a family with $3,500 a year paid $1,097—almost a third —in direct and hidden taxes. It's the people of moderate and small means who pay most of the cost of government and who have the most to lose from wasteful government and the most to gain from economical government

From the Shamokin Citizen, Shamokin, Pa.: There was a time in our history that "Yankee trader" meant a shrewd bargainer, an alert fellow who always could be expected to take good care of himself in any deal. The disuse into which the term has fallen suggests that "Yankees" have lost much of their ability to drive a hard bargain with the international traders.

In the midst of the cheering over the release of the wounded and sick UN prisoners of war there are misgivings that we were not so successful in this trade . . . After the first 100 UN soldiers had been freed, it became evident that the Reds were not acting in good faith in their selection of the sick . . .

The ability that won the Yankee trader the grudging respect of international dealers seems lacking in the UN negotiators who seldom have had any surety from the Communists that a bargain once made would be fulfilled.

Poultrymen, Check Your Laying House

Pullets hatched around the first of the year will soon be ready for the laying house.

But before moving in, cautious growers will check the house for nest space, ventilation, and watering facilities. The pullets need plenty of all three.

Another reminder is that the yearling hens moved out of the laying house the pullets will use should be profitable for the next several months. Move these hens to range shelters or other temporary quarters when pullets are ready for the house. Cull the hens closely when they are moved. Then use all-night lights on them. One 15-watt bulb for each 40 hens is best. Suspend the lights to shine on the roosting area. Remove the hens as they molt and go out of production.

State Legislature Asks For Funds To Fight Boll Worm

Alabama legislators have been asked to put up $15,000 a year for research on the pink bollworm, a relatively new insect that menaces the State's $140,000,000 cotton crop.

A bill to finance the research program has been introduced in both houses by farm section legislators who warned that the new pest, described as potentially more destructive than the boll weevil, is moving toward Alabama from areas already infested in Texas and Louisiana.

In the House the measure bore the names of Representatives W. W. Garrett, Monroe; Walter Givhan and W. P. Molette, Dallas; R. G. Kendall, Conecuh; Bob Langdon, Pickens; R. R. Faulk, Geneva; Emory Solomon, Henry; and Sam Engelhardt, Macon. The Senate bill is sponsored by Sam High, St. Clair; Carl Farmer, Henry; George Quarles, Dallas; and Tom Phillips, Shelby.

Pointing to the steady progress of the destructive pest, Mr. Garrett, who is chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, declared that "this leaves the Alabama cotton industry in an unpleasant position."

"On the one hand, it seems likely that the pink bollworm will invade this state before long" he added. "On the other, we see clear evidence that if the worm does get here, we don't have any practical means of fighting it."

Mr. Garrett urged the $15,000 annual appropriation as a means of "learning how to fight the pest before it gets here." The measure has the strong endorsement of the Alabama Farm Bureau, representing the producers, and leaders in other phases of the cotton industry, Alabama's No. 1 cash crop.

Pink bollworm has been found in the U. S. since 1917. But until recent years, buildup of the pest had not been great enough to cause great commercial damage to cotton.

Losses in foreign areas has been huge, however. In the Laguna area of Mexico, growers had lost about 25 per cent of their crop to the pink bollworm. In Puerto Rico and Hawaii, many growers were forced completely out of cotton production.

Comparable damage occurred this year in South Texas, where the pink bollworm had built up to an almost uncontrollable degree. In many fields, cotton was so badly damaged it wasn't even picked. Total damage to lint and seed, in a small area, amounted to over $22 million.

Insect experts now visualize similar damage for much of the cotton belt unless research discloses effective means of controlling pink bollworm, which spread to more than 40 new cotton counties in 1952.

Commenting on the "popular notion" that the pink bollworm can never make it to Alabama, Mr. Garrett, himself a cotton farmer, pointed out; "You may be surprised to learn that the pink bollworm has already been very close to Alabama. Back in 1933, in Berrien County, Fla., a light infestation was definitely spotted. Fortunately, by cleaning up the area and putting a non-cotton zone around it, all the worms apparently were killed off. But the pink bollworm is still nearby. It thrives in wild cotton in the Florida Keys."

MOTHER OF YEAR . . . Mrs. Ethlyn Wisegarver Bott, 57, of Belleville, Ill., was chosen American Mother of 1953. Stepmother of four children, she appears with step-granddaughters Karen and Peggy Bott.

The Agriculture Committee chairman said Alabama's proposed $15,000 appropriation would be a part of an overall pink bollworm research program costing at least $250,000 annually. The additional money is to be supplied by other Cotton Belt states, the federal government, and the cotton industry.

The over-all research program was conceived last year by a belt-wide pink bollworm committee made up of insect experts, farm leaders, and others from across the Cotton Belt.

POINTER FOR BEEF PRODUCERS

Heifer beef calves and their mothers should be removed from the herd and placed in a bull-tight pasture as soon as the heifers are six months old.

YOUR Health

"Your Health" is presented by your physician as a health service of The Medical Association of the State of Alabama.

AIRSICKNESS

As in other illnesses caused by motion, airsickness is a source of great discomfort to its victims. Airsickness is characterized by nausea, vertigo or dizziness, or vomiting. There seem to be many contributing factors. The person who is inclined toward nervousness and tension, for instance, is a chief sufferer. Again, failure of certain parts of the body to adapt themselves to speed, rough-motion or high altitude seem involved.

The eyes, ears and nervous system, which ordinarily cooperate to preserve body balance or equilibrium, react strangely to accelerated motion and account for the stomach upsets that rack the victim.

The condition may be apparent only when flying is rough, such as the rise and fall of a plane which runs into updrafts or downdrafts. Other factors are often psychic or emotional. Fear of falling from high places, fumes, odors or poor ventilation, the low air pressure of high altitudes, or the sight of others in distress may bring on the condition. At first, the feeling may be one of mild nausea, but it may steadily progress to retching and vomiting.

A person who boards a plane with his stomach empty is just as susceptible as persons who have eaten heavy meals. Indeed, it has been recommended that a light, bland meal should be taken in preference to either extreme. Alcoholic hangovers and bad colds are factors in airsickness and persons suffering from either should postpone flight.

Aviation has progressed to the point where few persons need hesitate to use airplanes because of physical disability. Those with serious heart trouble, tuberculosis, anemia, sinusitis or ear disorders, however, should consult a physician before making an airplane flight.

Problems of the Christian Conscience (Temperance)

Lesson for May 24: I Corinthians 8: 7-13; 6: 18-20

Golden Text: I Corinthians 8: 13

The matter of which Paul writes was that of eating meat that had been offered unto idols. It had been offered unto idols and then taken away and placed on the market. The question was whether it was right or not for Christians to eat such meat. Was it contaminated by the fact that it had been employed in heathen worship? Some of the Corinthians Christians did not believe that eating such meat was wrong.

But there were some among the Christians in Corinth who did not believe they should use eat that had been offered unto idols. Among these Christians were some who had once been pagans and who had offered unto false gods, and it was possible that these would be badly influenced by something that might appear to them as a compromise with heathenism. They could not see how meat offered to idols could be eaten by Christians without placing approval upon idolatry.

There was something to be said for each side. But Paul saw there was still another thing to be reckoned with—the influence a man might have upon others in eating meats offered to idols. And the principle he laid down would solve many difficulties. He wrote that if meat should make his brother to offend, he would eat no more meat as long as the world should stand. If you could justify to yourself moderate drinking, should you exercise the right you claim if your example hurts others?

MT. NEBO CHURCH

Bro. and Mrs. J. C. Brown were with us Sunday for his last time before he goes to Conference. We have enjoyed very much having known this fine couple, and being allowed to work with them in their first work. We do wish for them the very best wherever they might be sent.

Bro. Brown installed our W.S.C.S. Officers Sunday night. The ceremony was very impressive being held by candlelight before the altar which had been covered with greenery and flowers. Officers installed were: President, Mrs. Morris Williams; vice-president, Mrs. Leon Williams; secretary of promotion, recording and treasurer, Mrs. W. W. Culp; secretary of social relations and local church activities, Mrs. Alice Durbin; secretary of Missionary Education and service, Mrs. Alton Culp; secretary of children's work, Mrs. V. C. McKee; secretary of youth work, Mrs. Edith Mims; secretary of status of women, Mrs. John M. Culp; publicity chairman, Judeen Culp.

The W.S.C.S. will hold their next meeting Wednesday night, May 20th, at 7 o'clock in the church. We would like to invite all the ladies in our community to come and be with us in our new society. We need your help in carrying on the work of the church.

Bro. Brown will be at the church Wednesday night to receive a new member into the church. We especially invite the entire membership of the church to be with us at this service. The service will follow immediately after the W.S.C.S. meeting. The public is also invited to meet with us at this time.

In view of all the international hasseling, maybe what this world needs is a better mouth trap.

Folks and Things ABOUT TOWN —By Ben

R. C. Williams, Superintendent of the Church School of the Clanton Methodist Church and chairman of the Board of Stewards for next year, has taken the members of the Junior Board of Stewards for their annual trip to Florida. For five consecutive years R. C. has given a week of his time (not to mention the dollars) to these boys who look forward to this retreat. There are some who would not get a vacation if it were not for Mr. Williams. These boys are all fine, upright teen-agers, who are our future leaders of the town and community. They gather up scrap iron each year and sell it to help pay their expenses. Members of the Junior Board who are on the trip this week are: Michael Haywood, Bobby Kenney, Rusty Shelton, Burton Mullins, Jack Hunter, Howell Glenn, Donald White, Dean White, Louie Reynolds, Kenneth Messer, Bobby Tucker and Bob Robertson. R. C. Williams is to be greatly commended by the parents, church and city, for his contribution to these youths, and for the responsibility he assumes.

When the new highway comes through, or around, Clanton, Seventh Street will be available for parking on both sides. This should make a lot of business men happy.

At one of our eating places the other Saturday a small boy with his parents came in to dine. A waitress came over to the table and asked the boy what he wanted to eat. "A piece of pie," was the answer. "All right, what kind of pie do you want? We have coconut and lemon ice box pie," answered the waitress. "Aw," said the small boy, "You're kidding me, there ain't no kind 'cept 'tater.' "

Over in a corner near the fireplace, Uncle Ezry had been working industriously with a stub pencil and a piece of paper. Suddenly he looked up and smiled. "Doggone!" he exclaimed. "If I ain't learned to write." Maw got up and looked over his shoulder at the lines scrawled across the paper. "What do it say?" she asked. "I don't know," said Uncle Ezry, puzzled, "I ain't learned to read yet."

Enjoyed a short visit from our very good friend and kinsman, Dr. H. M. Nix, this week. Doctor is looking and feeling fine, although he says he doesn't get around as often as he once did. Dr. Harvey Nix has built an enviable reputation in Chilton County and Central Alabama and we admire him greatly. A visit is always appreciated.

Durwood Minor is coming back to Clanton as manager of the Goodyear Service Store. He replaces Jim Brasseit, who has managed the store for the past two years, and has made many friends in Chilton County. Durwood, of course, is a home-town boy and is well known and well liked by all who know him. We welcome him back home and offer our full cooperation in making his work here pleasant and profitable.

"Ba" Tucker has lost her little parakeet. It flew the coop Thursday morning while they were cleaning the cage. Anyone finding the little bird, please let us know. You can't miss knowing it the minute you listen to it's beautiful singing voice. It sounded just like a wagon wheel that needed axle grease bad. And confidentially the longer it howled the worse the wagon wheel needed greasing. It was a wonderful pet though. You could take it out of it's cage and lose the end of a finger any time. Boy, that thing could bite. Now, don't get the idea we were responsible for the thing being gone, because we were at the office when it all happened. You notice we keep calling the bird a "it." Well, we never did know whether it was a "his" or "hers." Please, though, if you see a little blue-speckled bird with a red band on the leg that wants to start a fight every time you look at him flying around your house, give "Ba" Tucker a call. She'll appreciate it, anyway.

CEMETERY CLEANING

Will By-Pass Clanton

New Four Lane Highway Will Be Constructed East Of Town

The new four-lane highway that has been talked of for years will soon be under construction just east of the city. State highway surveyors have already surveyed the route the new highway will take. It will leave the present highway at the south boundary of the Clanton Country Club and will go around the business district coming back into the present route just north of the Clanton Chilco Quick Freeze Plant in North Clanton.

Probate Judge M. D. Tingle showed the writer a letter written by the Greenville Chamber of Commerce recently in regards to the growth of the city since that little city was by-passed by U. S. 31. Contents of the letter follows:

April 6, 1953

Acknowledgement is made of your letter concerning the by-passing of towns and cities by main highways.

A number of people operating small stores and service stations on the old highway and streets through which it passed in Greenville were very much opposed to the new by-pass of Highway 31. However, I feel that it was a most intelligent thing to do.

When the old highway ran through town it brought hundreds of heavy cargo trucks racing along our streets night and day creating traffic hazards and a lot of all-night noise. Very few of these through trucks stopped in or near Greenville for any purpose.

As for automobiles, most of those using the highway were just passing through at high speed. Very few stopped here except for gasoline though some did stop to patronize the down town restaurants.

Most of the service stations along the old highway have either closed down or reduced their operating expenses to the decreased volume of business. But I find that the oil companies have located new stations on the new highway and that the business is even better than before.

I do not believe that the locating of the highway east of town has had any appreciable bearing one way or the other on business generally done by the several kinds of stores located within the city limits.

Like Greenville, most towns have streets very inadequate for local traffic and parking and I feel that all main heavy duty highways should by-pass towns and cities to the fullest extent.

With kind regards, I am

Sincerely,

(s) BOB

Several other paving projects planned and under construction would indicate that Chilton County will get its full quota of paved and black topped roads under the present governing body. The road from Jemison to Mars Hill Church is being black topped.

Five miles of roads is being paved in and around Thorsby.

Bids have been received on the Kincheon Road paving project and plans are for this road to be completed this summer.

The paving project that will lay a paved road from Pep LeCroy's Store to Sardis Church will be let on June 12th.

The paved road from Maplesville to Randolph will be completed this summer.

The underpass at the University Highway and the Selma Road just beyond Maplesville is already under construction.

Bids were received on May 15th for a four-lane highway from Cooper to Mt. Creek.

Paving, grading and draining are going on in all parts of the county on our roads. Slowly, but surely, Chilton County is being pulled out of the mud.

KEEP AHEAD OF THEM

Too often a farmer lets weeds and bushes get along start in the permanent pasture before he begins fighting them. Early control of these pests is easiest, and gives the pasture plants a chance to make their grower the most money.

ALFALFA OVERLOOKED

Too many Alabama farmers overlooked the value of alfalfa as a grazing and hay crop. Farmers can afford to grow it even if they can hold a stand for only two or three years.

WATCH FOR SCREWWORMS

There have been unconfirmed reports of screwworms south of Highway 80 already this spring. Every livestockman should keep on hand some form of EQ335 to use at the first sight of these pests.

RECORD HIGHWAY DEATHS IN 1953?

The National Safety Council recently revealed that highway fatalities in the first three months of 1953 were occurring at a near record rate. In the first quarter of this year, 8,310 fell victim to highway and traffic accidents.

The record number of highway and traffic deaths occurred in 1941, when some 39,969 lives were wiped off the books in the United States. Considering the fact that the first quarter of the year is not the period when accidents are most frequent, the 1953 toll may set a new record. If other quarters are in their usual proportion in the first quarter, a toll of about 38,000 deaths is indicated.

If the rate increases, then the toll may well equal the 39,969 record figure. Automobile deaths are always higher in the summer months, and December is quite often the record month of the year. Whether or not a new record is established this year, it is almost certain that deaths will average between 500 and 1,000 a week for the year, which is a lot of manpower going down the drain needlessly.

MEMORIAL DAY, 1953

Host of the states of the Union observe May 30th, as Memorial Day and the observance has long since come to be one of solidarity between the states.

The passing years have softened the differences between the states and it has gradually become the custom to pay a memorial tribute to the dead of all the wars on May 30th. Annually, flowers are placed on the graves of those sons and daughters of this nation who gave their lives that it might remain free and victorious over its enemies.

The boys who died in the Revolutionary War, winning this country's freedom from England, and those who have died in the Asian hills of Korea, and all those who have given their lives in wars of this country in the intervening years, will be remembered on the thirtieth of this month.

Many thoughts are appropriate on Memorial Day, but one seems to predominate over all others, except those which are personal in nature. That is the thought that the nation's best men are consumed by war. It is the patriotic, courageous flower of the nation which is removed by wars. Those who would not serve, or who are too busy accumulating financial rewards, or who would shirk their duty for any reason, are frequently spared the supreme price some of us must pay for our freedom.

The finest Americans are those who have given their lives for their country. The nation should not forget their sacrifice, nor should the people fail to remember that sacrifice every Memorial Day. Those who lost their lives defending this country are our greatest heroes, and without their sacrifice, no American would today be free. That is something worth remembering—and to be thankful for.

THE biggest step toward economy made by the Eisenhower administration to date was the recently announced decision to cut ex-President Truman's defense budget by $8.5 billion.

President Eisenhower said his proposed cut in appropriations would not reduce the effective military strength this country has planned for itself and its Allies in 1954.

And it is important to note that he does not expect the cut to completely balance the budget for the year beginning July 1. But he declared that his administration is making progress in that direction—and thus toward cutting taxes—every day.

● Everyone has heard the expression: "There's more ways of skinning a cat than one." United Nations delegates at Panmunjon last week applied that thought to their talks with Communists for peace in Korea.

The Allies warned the Reds they might take a short cut through the snarled prisoner exchange problem by simply releasing 32,000 North Koreans who don't want to go home. Allied negotiators said such action would follow a pattern created by the Reds themselves.

Lt. Gen. William K. Harrison told the Reds turning the prisoners free would only be following their policy of liberating prisoners at the front. "Your side already has shown us the way," he said. "It would seem quite appropriate that these Koreans whom we still are holding as prisoners . . . should be released without further delay."

It was obvious, observers at the scene reported, that the Reds were not overjoyed with the prospect. These 32,000 North Koreans want to live in South Korea and would become material for the South Korean army.

At this writing the truce talks remain deadlocked over the selection of a neutral country to handle war prisoners. The Allies suggest Switzerland as a neutral. The Reds rejected the proposal, but refuse to name their selection.

Unless some important break occurs within a few days it now appears that the truce talks may come to an abrupt end with the Allies walking out. The sessions have, at the moment, reached the name-calling stage where they were broken off last October 9.

● Expenditure cuts in Washington are being extended these days beyond the federal government. Congressional Quarterly reports that lobby spending last year dropped to the lowest point since passage of the Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act of 1946.

According to the CQ report, 257 groups reported spending $4,823,981 in 1952, compared with $8,771,096 that 295 organizations reported in 1951.

Peak spending by lobby groups on record is $10,303,204 paid out by 340 organizations in 1950, while the lowest previously reported was $5,191,856 in 1947, the first full year of operation under the Act.

Topping all those reporting was the National Association of Electric Company, which shot up from fourth place in 1951. The American Medical Association, which led the pack in 1949, and again in 1950, was second last year. In third place with the Association of American Railroads.

ACROSS the DESK

ideas from other editors

From the Carlinville Enquirer, Carlinville, Illinois: Heaven only knows how many politicians, dancing masters and cigar makers have told me how to run a newspaper. Indeed, I believe that newspaper publishing is one business that every man, woman and child in America considers himself capable of doing—and doing well.

I consider that day lost when I do not get a letter from a teenage youngster offering to do my job—or a contribution from a housewife saying she has been writing a column (in secret) for years and now has decided she wants to break into print.

Doctors, lawyers, merchants, auto dealers and dogcatchers stumble all over themselves trying to set me straight on how to run a publishing business.

I can't get mad at this because I'm always doing that same sort of thing. The other night I spent most of an evening telling a baseball player how to improve his pitching—and I've made only one base hit in my life.

Also, once I explained to an admiral a cute little fleet maneuver I'd figured out. I explained that I, too, had served in the navy, during World War I. He came back by telling me that he knew the printing business pretty well, having carried papers when he was a youngster. See what I mean?

From the Madison Press, London, Ohio: An editorial which is an editorial should make the die-hards mad and the true thinkers cheer.

From the Catskill Mountain Star, Saugerties, N. Y.: Mothers of G.I.'s missing in action in the air war over Korea have become prime targets of the Red propaganda machine.

Pleasant letters, reassuring the safety of the missing men, are being delivered to next-of-kin in smaller towns around the United States. Though written in precise English, the letters are authored by the Chinese Reds.

These solicitous letters offer to do anything possible for the captured G. I. They also refer to the war as "senseless aggression," and offer effusive hopes for "peace."

Since the Reds do not allow the Red Cross or other legitimate agencies to bear information that might exist about downed U.N. fliers, this first word is naturally received with overwhelming joy by relatives.

The parents show the letter to friends. It appears in the local paper (that's why smaller cities are selected). A letter-writing campaign may start, to induce the congressmen to "end this senseless war."

That, naturally, is exactly what the Reds want to happen. They know it is not hard to sell peace, but remember that peace on their terms is not peace at all.

If you should receive such a letter, don't let it be turned into a propaganda weapon which can undo the value of the sacrifices your man has made.

Look Before You Leap Into Livestock Business

When farmers jump in and out of livestock production, they are almost always out when they should be in, and in when they should be out.

Hogs are a good illustration of this. Some farmers jumped out—sold their sows—last year because of a squeeze on prices. Others, because of the feed failure, very wisely reduced hog numbers to fit their feed supply. Today this latter group of producers can take advantage of the better pork prices—while those who are out, should be in.

There will be two services daily, one at 7:00 a.m. and one at 7:30 p.m. We are urging all working people to come to the early morning service dressed for work. If you are a farmer, come right on in your work clothes. The morning service will be a 45-minute service, closing at 7:45. Coffee and doughnuts will be served in the dining hall in the church basement each morning. We are expecting these services to prove a great blessing to all those who attend.

Brother Barnes and Brother and Sister Stone will be heard on the Glad Tidings Broadcast Sunday, May 31st.

Lutheran Church News—

The Service 11:00; Sunday School 10:00. Visitors welcome.

Many years ago a Roman governor named Pontius Pilate stood before a jeering mob and asked, "What shall I do with this man called, Christ?" We know the mob's cry — "Crucify Him!"

That question asked by Pilate many years ago is still a question that all who come under the sound of the gospel must answer. There are only two alternatives; accept Him, or reject Him. If you reject Him, you are only crucifying Him afresh and perhaps condemning your own soul.

The Bible is very explicit about the fact that salvation must be wrought in this earthly life, or not at all. Such ideas that there is a second chance after death (i.e. the purgatory tale of Catholicism) have absolutely no Biblical basis whatever. The apostle Paul, speaking by the Holy Spirit said, "Behold, now is the day of salvation, now is the accepted time."

Dear friend, if you do not know Christ as your personal Saviour, I implore you to get your Bible and read the following Scripture passages prayerfully: John 3:16-18; Acts 16:26-32, noting especially verse 31; Romans 3:23-24; and Romans 5:1-2. Ask the Holy Spirit to guide you in this important matter, and call upon some minister of the Gospel for further guidance. Don't put it off; it could very easily be the turning point in your life.

Alcoholism — Its Causes And Cure—
(By William R. Morgan)

A few weeks ago I saw a little quotation in one of our county papers which read, "Some people don't have glowing personalities unless they are all lit up." I think that this little cryptic quote adequately introduces our subject—alcoholism—because it contains more truth than one would realize.

Alcoholism is rapidly becoming our number one social problem because of the ever increasing number who are becoming addicted. This scourge shatters homes, wrecks lives, and breeds delinquency and crime. Let us turn to the question, "Why do people drink?"

In answering this question it is well to remember that no two people become alcoholic for exactly the same reasons. Generally, however, we might list three major reasons why they drink. People drink because (1) there is a certain amount of social pleasure (i.e. "I drink because the crowd does and I hate to be different"); (2) alcohol temporarily alleviates tension and worry by shutting out the world of reality; and (3), it enables the individual to adjust to a real life situation such as, for example, the office clerk who has to have alcoholic encouragement before asking his boss for a raise. We can see therefore, that an alcoholic is always one who has made a defective adjustment to life.

The cure for alcoholism, esp. in the chronic stages, is not simple. Most authorities agree that the basic causes of alcoholism are psychological rather than psysiological; hence, any corrective treatment must be aimed at the personality disturbance itself rather than merely treating the symptoms.

The reason that so many "cures" fail is because they fail to take these psychological factors into consideration. About the best type of therapy is patient, persistent, and sympathetic counselling on the part of the pastor or friend. The alcoholic needs encouragement in his endeavor to overcome the "habit" and also restore his self-respect. I am persuaded that the reason for so many failures of pastors and self-appointed reformers to help the alcoholic is that this sympathetic attitude is almost totally lacking and the alcoholic is approached in an atmosphere of contempt and disgust. Such an attitude as that automatically dooms the "counsellor" to failure before he (or she) begins the first sentence. Alcoholism is not a habit that can be cast aside at any time the individual so chooses but rather it has actually become so much a part of the individual's behavior pattern that he is bound body and soul. In fact, in its chronic stages, only the power of God can restore the individual to sanity along this line.

The following is a program that I have always found useful in combatting the problem of alcoholism. It is far from perfect in all details, but many of its principles have proven helpful.

1. Counsel young people against "social drinking" in any form. Many alcoholics have been made by these so-called "innocent party drinks."

2. Give sympathetic understanding guidance to those caught in the clutches of alcohol. Our guide here should be to "love the sinner yet hate the sin."

3. Encourage the enactment of local, state, and federal legislation to put a curb on alcoholic beverage advertisements. Most of these ads are abominably misrepresenting and deceiving. Gullible young people are the main victims of these lush displays.

4. Promote wholesome recreation for the community and discourage (by police action if necessary) the infiltration of the drunken rowdies.

This is a problem that is so close to all of us that it should be given very serious consideration. Only the concerted action of Christian people can bring us anywhere close to a solution; because, this is a menace that knows no race, color or creed.

Tales About Insects

When DDT first appeared it seemed that the annoying and dangerous fly was doomed. Now the pest is almost completely immune to the chemical. Now on the market is another poison, a bait containing lindane, TEPP, molasses, and water. It is effective in killing flies, but if not used very carefully it is deadly to people and pets.

This leaves the fly swatter and sanitation high on the list as war measures in the battle between man and the fly.

Winning this battle is very important to the life and health of man, for the fly and its cousin, the mosquito, spread many human diseases. The house fly spreads cholera, typhoid fever, and infantile paralysis; the tsetse fly carries sleeping sickness, and the mosquito brings malaria and yellow fever.

These insects are closely associated with humans because they like the environment in which man lives. Flies have a keen sense of smell and are attracted by the odors of ammonia gas, acetic acid, alcohol, and carbon dioxide. Alcohol given off by baking bread or cooking of food containing vinegar will attract flies from quite some distance.

Because the first step in fly control is to keep the pest from breeding, regular weekly disposal of garbage is important. On the farms, manure should be spread on fields weekly. Undoubtedly, incorrectly handled garbage and manure account for a very high percentage of our flies.

The female house fly lays her several hundred eggs in fresh manure and all kinds of decaying vegetable material. The legless, almost transparent maggots hatch from the eggs within eight to twenty-four hours. The larvae, full grown within four or five days, are shining yellowish white in color and about one-half inch long. When mature the maggots begin to shrink and the skin turns into a reddish brown capsule, called a puparium. Adults emerge from the puparium within four or five days after it is formed

BY

ARMISTEAD SELDEN

Congressman, Sixth District

At our most recent Veterans Affairs Committee meeting, we had the opportunity of witnessing the results of many years research in the field of prosthetics or artificial limbs. A demonstration of the use of several types of artificial limbs was presented before the Committee by the Advisory Committee on Artificial Limbs, a division of the National Academy of Sciences, in cooperation with the Veterans Administration.

Each year Congress ear-marks a million dollar appropriation for the VA to use solely for research in methods of rehabilitating disabled veterans. The VA sets up the research projects it deems most desirable and sends its recommendations to the Advisory Committee which administers the research program.

Besides the annual million dollars spent for research, the VA uses a large part of its regular funds to bear the expenses of buying and fitting artificial limbs and other equipment for handicapped veterans. In fiscal year 1952 the VA paid out a total of almost six million dollars for 4,872 artificial legs which are the most costly prosthetic items, and about $776,000 for 6,000 hearing aids, another expensive appliance.

This total of nearly six million dollars spent by the VA in 1952 also included expenses for artificial arms, hands and feet, batteries for hearing aids, orthopedic braces and shoes, wheel chairs, glasses, and aids for the blind.

mputees Self-Sufficient—

Nine American veterans who have enefitted from the extensive research in the field of prosthetics luntarily appeared before our ommittee to show how they have en rehabilitated after losing an m or leg. Eight of the veterans w service in World War II and e was wounded during World ar I.

Under the direction of two physicians who are members of the dvisory Committee, the veterans monstrated the use of their artificial limbs. One amputee showed w he used what is probably the west development in artificial mbs. His artificial arm is electically-powered and operated by a all battery attached to his shoulder. All the artificial limbs are made ieflly of a celluloid type material r light weight.

All nine of the veterans to whom e were introduced are self-sufficient and are employed as technicians, statisticians, salesmen, therapists and chemists. One of them still rves in the Army on limited duty ith a technical service Unit.

Besides the American veterans, e met a former member of the outh African Air Force who demstrated what 'modern medical research has made possible for a man ho has lost both arms and both gs. Eric Schultz, who lives near

Johannesburg, South Africa, lost all four major limbs as the result of a train accident. Because the United States has been more successful in artificial limb research than any other country in the world, Schultz decided to appeal to this country for help in rehabilitation. He wrote a number of letters to commercial limb shops, asking if they could fit him with arms and legs. One of the letters was delivered to a termite control office in Los Angeles which was occupying the former site of an artificial limb shop. A secretary opened the letter by mistake and was so impressed with its contents she was determined to answer the plea of Eric Schultz. She contacted the Advisory Committee on Artificial Limbs which has its main headquarters at the University of California in Los Angeles. Physicians there agreed to take Eric Schultz as a case study, and he was sent to U.C.L.A. shortly afterward by the Johannesburg Rotary Club. Although he is a quadrilateral amputee, Schultz has been fitted with four artificial limbs and is as active as any normal man.

I asked Eric Schultz how he had managed before he came to the United States. He said he saw picture of what American scientists had perfected in artificial limbs and tried to have wooden limbs made to resemble the pictures. "It didn't work out so well, though," he said, "but now I feel wonderful—you can't imagine how wonderful."

Future Progress Seen—

Commenting on the amazing progress made in limb research during the past ten years, Gen. F. S. Strong, Jr., Director of the Advisory Committee, said that the "near miracles" we saw demonstrated would soon be standard equipment for all veteran and civilian amputees. He pointed out that the greatest difficulties in development of artificial limbs had been overcome and that more improvements would come rapidly now.

So that they can receive the best possible training, the VA sends its therapists and surgeons to schools which are under supervision of the Advisory Committee on Artificial Limbs. VA records show that approximately 250,000 disabled veterans of all wars have been fitted with artificial limbs through the VA's out-patient treatment program. There are eight VA hospitals now equipped to care for Korean amputees.

Although it is heart-breaking to hear of our Americans losing an arm or a leg, there is some consolation in knowing that they will receive the best possible treatment modern science has made available.

As one disabled veteran said, "I am inconvenienced but thank God, I am not incapacitated."

MR. THOMAS E. WILLIAMSON

Mr. Thomas Edward Williamson, age 74, of Clanton Route 5, died suddenly at the Central Alabama Hospital Saturday, May 16th. Funeral services were held from Macedonia Church at 3:00 p.m., Sunday, May 17th, conducted by Revs. Robert Cost and Jadie Ellison. Interment in Macedonia cemetery.

He is survived by the wife, Mrs. Emma Wilson Williamson; five daughters, Mrs. Lonnie Martin of Atlanta, Ga., Mrs. Sam Cleckler of Clanton, Mrs. Orville Burnett of Clanton, Mrs. M. T. Bradley of Clanton, and Mrs. John Will Owens, also of Clanton; three sons, J. O. of Ensley, John Dudley of Duren, Ga., and Thomas Earl of Birmihgham; one brother, George Williamson of Birmingham; 14 grandchildren; four sisters, Mrs. Rube Jones and Mrs. William Headley of Clanton, Mrs. Anna Wilks of Birmingham, and Mrs. Adell Brown of Florida.

Martin Funeral Home in charge.

Charles T. Cox, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe T. Cox, of Clanton, is now back with the TCI at Birmingham.

In January, 1951, Mr. Cox was of the opinion that Uncle Sam needed some assistance, so he entered the armed services. He served with the 511th Airborne Signal Company of the 11th Airborne Division, at Fort Campbell, Kentucky. During his stay he made twenty-seven parachute jumps. It is interesting to note that he did not find it any easier making the twenty-seventh jump than he did the first. At any rate, he didn't fancy a career as a parachute jumper.

However, he did fancy a career as a married man, and he successfully wooed Miss Hope Caldwell, of Montevallo, Ala., and they were married May 3, 1952. Miss Caldwell is a music major graduate of Alabama College.

After receiving his honorary discharge in January, 1953, Mr. Cox returned immediately to TCI, and put on his working togs again. This under control, he then enrolled in Birmingham Southern College, Birmingham, Ala., where he is carrying a full semester's work, intending to major in Electronics.

Our opinion is that being a newly married man, filling a Wireman's position eight hours a day and taking a full engineering course, Mr. Charles Cox is still jumping.

Community Concert Dinner Tuesday

The Chilton County Community Concert Association entertained at a delightful membership campaign dinner at the Dixie Cafe on Tuesday evening at 6:30. Through the Community Concert's retiring president, Mr. A. R. Knight, who presided, the dinner got off to a good start, as Mr. Knight imparted interest, enthusiams and Community Concert vision to those present. The Concert Series has enjoyed wide success under Mr. Knight's capable direction. At no time has he been caught napping, and he well deserved the tributes paid to his undaunted efforts and fine leadership. Following the President's greeting Mrs. Mary Kelly, a nation-wide Community Concert representative and guest speaker of the evening was introduced.

Mrs. Kelly held the rapt attention of those present, as she went up and down the gamut of Community Concert artists available, pointing out their salient characteristics. A versatile speaker, Mrs. Kelly was a great inspiration to the membership canvassers, as she captured their interest with her charm and wide knowledge of Community Concert affairs. She also dwelt on the enthusiastic reception of the Community Concert Campaign, in places previously booked this year, and remarked on their large increase in membership over last year's campaign. It was confidently hoped to enroll a marked increase of concert memberships for Chilton County, in the week's campaign outlined at this dinner.

The executive board was very reluctant to accept Mr. Knight's resignation, he has served so faithfully and well. Mrs. W. H. Klinner succeeded Mr. Knight as president. The Chilton County Community Concert Association feels very fortunate in securing Mrs. Klinner as its president. She is well adapted to fill this important office. Serving with Mrs. Klinner will be Mr. Raymond P. Mims, vice-president; Mrs. Bea Bryan, recording secretary; Mr. G. O. Willingham, corresponding secretary; Mr. James Duke Heflin, treasurer; Mrs. Raymond P. Mims, general chairman; Mrs. W. A. Willis, Mrs. Charles Moore and Mrs. J. H. Boddep, co-chairmen; Mrs. Hugh Jones, publicity chairman. Mrs. Mims asks that everyone make the work of the volunteers as easy as possible, by getting in their membership early, and obtaining another new membership along with it.

The concerts this year will be held at the newly decorated Courthouse Auditorium. This will be of interest to the general public. Owing to our dire need for an auditorium, and the lack of any suitable place, for concert performance, both the Baptist and Methodist ministers have generously offered the use of their churches, and for this gracious courtesy the officers of the Chilton County Community Concert Association, wish to publicly express their deep gratitude. Those responsible for the new arrangement felt that further use of the churches would be an inexcusable imposition.

A check-up meeting will be held at the Willingham Hotel, Community Concert Headquarters at 5:00 p.m. Thursday. Telephone Number 837. Don't hesitate to use the telephone to call in your membership.

J. W. (Woody) Blalock and Joe Elliott of Centreville went frog gigging the other night. Their sum total was six frogs and five snakes. Blalock said every time they found a frog they found a snake after him. We guess those snakes been reading about the Republicans being in office again. The only reason they didn't get the sixth snake when they got the frog was that they missed him and he got away. One time when Joe brought a big moccasin over the boat for the kill the snake dropped off the gig before Woody could bash his head in. Then things really begin to happen. Anybody who has ever been in a boat knows that there just isn't room for a snake and a person in the same boat, somebody has to get out and usually it's the person. But they killed the snake without having to leave the boat and everything turned out all right. Now for the snake story. One of the snakes, the longest, was 49 inches long and that's pretty long for a water moccasin. The next was 32 inches, the next 29 inches and so no down to a couple of feet. Woody says they're going again this week, but hopes to find more frogs and fewer snakes.

Our correspondent at Maplesville, Mrs. Katherine Goff, who is incidently doing a very fine job, wrote a paragraph in her column last week about the prizes given at the Maplesville High School. Instead of the $10.00 prize to the best citizen in the Senior Class being donated by the President of the First National Bank as stated, it was by the President of the Peoples Savings Bank. This was called to our attention by the bank, and we are glad to make this correction. Now, don't get excited, Mrs. Goff, we make 'em every week!

A salesman seeking advertisements for a weekly newspaper called at the local grocery store. After asking for advertising he was surprised when the gray-haired proprietor answered: "Nothing doing. I've been here for 50 years and never advertised." "Excuse me, sir, but what is that building on the hill over there?" asked the salesman. "The village church," said the grocer. "Been there long?" asked the other. "About three hundred years." "Well," was the reply, "they still ring the bell."

PROTEIN WITH HOGGING CORN

A good protein supplement for hogs on early hogging corn is equal parts of 50 per cent tankage, cottonseed meal, and peanut or soybean meal. Self feed this supplement with a low-cost mineral mixture such as equal parts of ground limestone, steamed bone meal, and common salt.

MAKE THIS RESOLUTION

Plan right now to lay-by your corn early. Don't cut yields by plowing too much, too late, or too deep. Most high yields have been made from corn that was cultivated only two or three times.

U. S. Leads World In Eating Of Pork

Last year a total of 11.6 billion pounds of pork was produced in the U. S.

Pork was consumed on the nation's tables at the average rate of about 72 pounds per person, reports Dorothy Overbey of the API Extension Service. In the past 10 years, about 49½ per cent of all meat produced was pork. The consumer education specialist says more pork is consumed per person in the U. S. than in any other country of the world.

Warning Given To Look For Suffocating Fish, Pond Owners

Auburn, Ala. — Pond owners should be on the lookout for dead or dying fish during periods of drouth, low water levels, and long cloudy spells, says Earl Kennamer, API Extension fish specialist. The fish may be dying from lack of oxygen or due to a heavy concentration of carbon dioxide.

"One sign of suffocation is the concentration of fish in shallow water near the surface," explains Kennamer. "The fish appear to be grasping for air.

"When such signs are noted or the fish are actually dying, the pond owner should stir the pond with one or more outboard motors. Adjust the motors so that the propellers will throw the water into sheets of spray or droplets and churn the surface water. This action aids the water in absorbing oxygen from the air.

"After stirring the water for several hours, distribute 18 to 20 per cent superphosphate at the rate of 25 to 100 pounds per acre of water. Break the bags partly open and deposit them in water two to three feet deep around the pond so that waves will help to dissolve the fertilizer. Superphosphate is recommended because many cases of fish death reveal a lack of phosphate in the water."

Graduates Are Eligible For API Scholarships

Four freshman scholarships in forestry at the Alabama Polytechnic Institute are available to qualified graduates of Alabama high schools, according to an announcement by Dean E. V. Smith, School of Agriculture.

The scholarships, made possible by a grant from the Gulf States Paper Corporation of Tuscaloosa, are available for the school year beginning with the fall quarter and will be awarded by September 1, 1953. Each scholarship is a gift of $250 that is divided into three payments and these are made the first of each quarter. To be eligible for one of the scholarships, applicants must (1) have an acceptable scholastic record, (2) be eligible to enter the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, and (3) have expressed an interest in professional forestry. Application forms are available from your vocational agriculture teacher. Applications must be mailed to Dr. E. V. Smith, Dean, School of Agriculture, Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn, Alabama, not later than July 15th.

More Than Good Prices Needed For Hog Profit

For example, market hog growers are delighted over the present good prices for hogs. But, warns G. B. Phillips, API Extension animal industry specialist, many of these same growers give too little thought to their cost of production.

"They forget that as individuals they can have little, if anything, to do with the selling price of hogs," says Phillips. "On the other hand, they can have much to do with production costs. Therefore, growers should concentrate on producing market hogs at the least cost per pound."

Good prices at the stockyard are fine, but they don't always bring the producer a profit, Phillip says. "Good breeding, feeding, and management must accompany good prices for the grower to get a profit from his hogs."

For Acreage Allotments

Chilton County Wheat Growers Are Urged To Supply Data

Wheat growers were urged today to come to the County Production and Marketing Administration office at their earliest convenience. Their help is urgently needed to bring farm-program records up to date, in preparation for possible acreage allotments and marketing quotas on the 1954 wheat crop.

This appeal follows a recent announcement by Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson that the U. S. Department of Agriculture would immediately start the preliminary work necessary in case production and marketing controls are required for the next wheat-crop.

According to Eddie Owen, Chairman of the County PMA Committee, certain information from farmers is absolutely necessary in order to do a sound administrative job of setting equitable acreage allotments for individual farms. Farm allotments will be determined by the County PMA Committee, with the assistance of the community committees.

Data needed includes the farm's wheat acreage and production data for the 3 years 1951, 1952, and 1953; the legal description of the farm and other pertinent information. If the farmer operates a rented farm, he should be able to supply such additional information as the name and address of the owner.

Mr. Owen emphasizes that the final decision has not yet been made as to whether acreage allotments or marketing quotas will be used for the 1954 crop of wheat. That decision will be made later, when more is known about the supply and prospective demand situation. However, the indicated wheat supply is such that production controls will probably be necessary, as directed by law.

Proclamation of a national wheat acreage allotment is mandatory unless dispensed with by the Secretary because of a national emergency or a material increase in exports. Proclamation of quotas is mandatory when supplies reach a certain point specified in the legislation, except under emergency conditions.

An early start on the necessary advance work is particularly urgent, Mr. Owen explained, because the decision and proclamation must be made not later than July 1 for marketing quotas and July 15 for acreage allotments without quotas. If quotas are proclaimed, a national referendum among growers must be held by July 25.

In requesting farmer's cooperation in supplying the needed information, Mr. Owen said that the county office should have all the data by May 29, if at all possible.

Chilton County has an estimated 100 farms growing wheat. There are an estimated 2.1 million wheat farms in the United States.

Acreage allotments were last used for the 1951 crop of wheat, but were discontinued before the end of the marketing year. Wheat marketing quotas have been used only twice, for the 1941 and 1942 crops.

SPARKMAN MAKES PLEA FOR ALABAMA VOCATIONAL EDUCATION PROGRAMS

In testimony before the Senate Appropriations Committee, Senator John Sparkman, Alabama, stated that the proposed cuts in vocational education would destroy the program in many Alabama schools and communities, and would seriously cripple its effectiveness everywhere.

He said that the proposed budget figures would reduce the amount for Alabama by about 30½—from $513,344 for the present school year to about $350,588 for the coming school year.

He stated that about 70,000 Alabama high school students and adults are enrolled in the program, and that any reductions in funds would result in a corresponding reduction in enrollment.

"Among other adverse effects," he said, "this would greatly reduce the number of Alabama boys and girls that participate in Future Farmers of America, and Future Homemakers of America—two of the finest programs rural America has ever had."

Sparkman strongly urged that Congress allow an amount for vocational education this year at least equal to that of the past year. Stressing that most of the funds were used to train boys and girls not able to go to college, the Senator said:

"Though I am interested in economizing and shall do everything I consider reasonable to help reduce federal spending, I am not yet willing to take it out of the hides of the youth of our land who need help most."

"To a great extent," he continued, "these programs make up for lack of college training. They provide for rural families the technical training and know-how necessary to a self-sufficient and strong citizenry."

The Senator also stressed that Alabama sends out to wealthier states many of its young people. He said that he wanted these programs continued so that Alabama young men and women would be able to compete on fairly even terms with the young people of the states to which they go.

The Vocational Education Program consists of four parts:

1. Vocational Agriculture.
2. Home Economics.
3. Trade and Industrial Education.
4. Distributive Education.

Lambert Attends Dealers Meeting

L. A. Lambert, owner of Lambert Motor Co., Chrysler-Plymouth dealer in Clanton, today returned from Detroit where he was one of more than 100 Atlanta Region dealers who visited the Chrysler plants and were guests at a dinner given by Chrysler Division.

Mr. Lambert was one of several thousand operating heads of Chrysler dealerships who are scheduled to visit the factory, meet with executives and drive new cars back home this spring and summer under a long-range program designed to develop the most efficient operation between dealers and factory people.

"These meetings with Chrysler executives not only help us to get acquainted, but give Chrysler a chance to keep us informed as to future plans in Chrysler's drive to gain a greater share of the automotive market than ever before in Chrysler history," Mr. Lambert said.

He invited the people of Clanton to visit his dealership and see the Chryslers for 1953 which feature entirely new and beautiful body styling with long, low lines which emphasize the length and width of the cars.

The new, sleek Chrysler bodies in combination with proven engineering advances such as the revolutionary 180 - horsepower V-8 Chrysles FirePower engine, full-time power steering, Fluid Torque Drive, power brakes and Oriflow shock absorbers make these the finest, most luxurious cars Chrysler has ever produced, he said.

They are offered in six models with a total of twenty-one body styles. The lines this year are the Windsor, Windsor DeLuxe, New Yorker, New Yorker DeLuxe, all on an 125½-inch wheelbase; Custom Imperial with a wheelbase of 133¼ inches and the Crown Imperial line with a wheelbase of 145½ inches.

Mulch For Vegetables Ups Yields, Cuts Work

Auburn, Ala. — Mulch on vegetable crops in the home garden brings higher production — and makes the gardener's work lighter. First, explains John Bagby, API Extension horticulturist, a mulch helps hold moisture and keeps the soil temperature down in extremely hot weather.

Second, mulch adds organic matter to the soil. This, in turn, improves the physical condition, or tilth, of the soil and enables it to absorb and hold moisture.

Third, a mulch helps prevent erosion, says Bagby. The force of falling rain is broken by the mulch. The soil is not as tightly packed by hard rains, thus lessening the chance of forming a crust on the soil. The material also slows down run-off water.

Fourth, a mulch helps keep down grass and weeds. This reduces the amount of work needed for cultivating the garden.

Bagby says almost any material that will cover the ground may be used for mulch. Cheap straw, moldy hay, corn stalks, sawdust, or even cardboard may be used. Grass clippings or weeds cut along roadsides are sometimes used if the weeds have not matured seed.

LEGION SUPPORTS IMMIGRATION LAW

The American Legion's National Executive Committee recently announced its support of the McCarran-Walter Act and pledged its efforts to fight all proposals to repeal it. The Executive Committee of the veterans' organization also criticized recent attacks on the law.

The official Legion body praised the Immigration Act from several standpoints. It praised the system of selective immigration, which utilizes the national origins quota system, commended the thorough screening of security risks which was set up under the law, and said the new law strengthens machinery designed to discover subversives and other undesirables.

This latest announcement of the Legion's position comes at a time when hopes of those who would repeal the law are already ebbing. Considering the slow pace in Congress, thus far, this pronouncement is another of several indications that the McCarran-Walter Immigration Act will probably remain the official immigration law for a while, at least.

WHY THE IRON CURTAIN?

Three staff sergeants of the Yugoslav Air Force recently answered the question why the Communists maintain the Iron Curtain at the borders of all Communist countries. The three Yugoslav sergeants, who had been training in the United States, learning to fly jet fighter planes, deserted to seek U. S. citizenship.

Their reason was the belief that citizens had no rights in their Communist country. Each of the three had just completed a six-months' course under a training program designed to teach the Yugoslav Air Force to fly and service American jet planes.

It will be recalled that Marshal Tito was extremely reluctant to permit many American instructors and other military personnel into Yugoslavia when this program was discussed in its initial stages. The Yugoslavs, attempting to desert, have obviously discovered the falsehoods repeatedly voiced by the Communist Government in Yugoslavia. They are, no doubt, only a few of the Yugoslav trainees who would like to desert but who have been compelled to abandon any such idea by personal or family ties in Yugoslavia.

We think the action of the three Yugoslav sergeants one of the best examples seen recently in answer to the question why the Communists always habitate behind an Iron Curtain. The curtain hides weakness, poverty, backwardness and false propaganda. That holds true in every Communist country, and the elimination of the Iron Curtain would spread dissatisfaction into every corner of Communist countries, especially those nearer the democratic powers and who have had intimate relations with the West during, or prior to, World War II. Behind the Iron Curtain there is considerable military strength and a well-concealed state of poverty and primitiveness. Concealing this latter condition is the main purpose of the Iron Curtain.

The average length of life among American wage earners and their families is now 68.5 years. This is a gain of slightly more than four years since 1942 and of about 22 years in the past four decades.

YOUR Health

"Your Health" is presented by your physician, as a health service of The Medical Association of the State of Alabama.

THE EXPECTANT FATHER

People generally are inclined to take the expectant father for granted; but actually he, as well as the expectant mother, should be prepared for the addition of a new member of the family in the home.

Good prenatal care of the mother is essential to the proper development of the baby. Good prenatal care also contributes extensively to the health of the mother as well as to the emotional happiness of the father. A new father should be encouraged to understand just what is taking place within the mother's body and be ready to help overcome the very natural changes and occurrences that may arise.

Fathers need to be helped in many ways, not only to take over the responsibilities of fatherhood but to help the mother during her pregnancy. A father should accompany his wife to her physician to understand the physical and emotional changes and the need for adjustment should this be necessary. The father must also be taught to attune himself to changes of disposition and to abrupt "turn about" attitudes toward domestic habits and situations, which very often occur.

In preparing for his role of fatherhood, the young man can be taught the numerous things about the care of the baby which the mother must also lear, although the process is more or less instinctive to her. He will learn that the complete joy of being a father is not just possession of the baby but in fulfillment through participation.

Keeping the prospective mother happy with little gifts and small attentions and a show of interest and understanding in arranging accommodations for the new baby are all necessary for the role of the new father. He participates too by learning to prepare the baby's bath and the proper way to hold his child so that it won't slip from his hands. Every father should delight in making his own son or daughter clean and comfortable, even to adjusting the diapers so that pins will not prick the tiny body. Father should also take joy in preparing formulas and feeding baby.

Now all this doesn't mean that father is to take over the responsibilities of mother, but the knowledge will enable him to be ready and willing when occasion demands or to participate for the very special joy of it.

Report from Washington

BY

ARMISTEAD SELDEN

Congressman, Sixth District

This month is high school graduation time for about 1300 young women and men in the eight counties of the 6th Congressional District.

I have felt particularly close to the high school seniors this year. At various times during the past two months I have signed copies of The American's Creed by William Tyler Page for the seniors whose names I have received. As a small means of expressing my congratulations to and my faith in these graduates, I have tried to see that each one is presented a copy of this inspirational message which was written by a descendant of one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence.

Although I feel the Creed's message will do its part to impress upon the graduates their duties and obligations as American citizens, the thought occurred that some of them might not be familiar with the full story of how The American's Creed came to be written. With this thought in mind, and to satisfy in part my desire to speak to each individual student, I dedicate this column to the high school graduates—to the men and women who are destined to be our leaders of tomorrow.

First, it is interesting to note the historical derivation of the principles of the Creed. Beginning with the first clause, "I believe in the United States of America," which is from the preamble to the Constitution, each clause of The American's Creed is derived from some great document, including the Declaration of Independence, the Great Seal, Lincoln's Gettysburg Address and others.

Contest Selects Creed—

When the entire world lay in fear of chaos and destruction back in 1917 and the rights and privileges of American citizenship appeared to be at stake, there was a general feeling that true patriotism in the hearts and minds of Americans everywhere was needed more than ever before. Among those who shared this feeling was Henry Sterling Chapin of New York. He conceived the idea of promoting a country-wide contest for the writing of a National Creed. He felt the Creed should be the briefest possible summary of American political faith and yet be founded upon the fundamental things most distinctive in American history and tradition.

A contest to select the best creed was announced, and it promptly received the backing of the American press which publicized it widely. The idea was informally supported by the President, and also received encouragement from Congress. A number of prizes were offered for the winning creed, and the City of Baltimore volunteered to contribute an award of $1,000.

A committee was set up to judge the many entries. Committee members were to make their selection without knowing who had written the creeds. "Nuber 384" became the Committee's choice, and when a sealed envelope containing the author's name was opened, it revealed the prize winner to be William Tyler Page who lived in a suburban section of Washington and was the descendant of Carter Braxton whose name appeared on the Declaration of Independence.

It was a remarkable coincidence when discovered that Mr. Page was born in Frederick, Maryland, the birthplace of Francis Scott Key, and that he had received his education in the public schools of Baltimore, in whose harbor Key wrote Star-Spangled Banner in 1814.

It is also coincidental that the award for the best Creed was presented to William Tyler Page on April 3, 1918, at the House Office Building in which my office is located.

A few days after he received the Baltimore check for $1,000, Page stood on the steps of the Capitol and purchased a $1,000 bond, referred to at that time as a Liberty Loan Bond.

Creed Widely Used—

Within a week after publication of the Creed, the 90,000 children in Baltimore public schools were reciting it. Soon the Creed was used in schools throughout the United States. Congressmen who visited Europe in August of 1918 found the Creed posted on trees and trenches at the front. The French, in a free republic inspired by the American example, showed exceptional interest in their own translation, while in America the Department of Interior translated the Creed into the languages of our foreign-born citizens.

Starting as a clerk's page, William Tyler Page served in various clerk positions in the House of Representatives for about a half century. From his school boy days until his death in October of 1942, his life was filled with patriotic deeds.

And there is no doubt that the simple but powerful message he gave the American people will live forever:

"I believe in the United States of America as a government of the people, by the people, for the people; whose just powers are derived from the consent of the governed; a democracy in a Republic; a sovereign Nation of many sovereign States; a perfect Union, one and inseparable; established upon those principles of freedom, equality, justice and humanity for which American patriots sacrificed their lives and fortunes.

"I therefore believe it is my duty to my Country to love it; to support its Constitution; to obey its laws; to respect its flag; and to defend it against all enemies."

THERE is still hope for peace in Korea many observers believe, although the Allies have not at the moment accepted the Communist eight-point compromise proposal on exchanging prisoners of war. The Allies didn't accept it, but neither did they reject it.

The Red proposal suggests a five-nation neutral repatriation commission to handle the 48,500 Reds held by the Allies who do not want to go home. Why, the United Nations wants to know, should the question of the prisoners of war be referred to a political conference for solution once it has presumably been resolved by these delegations on the basis of the principle of turning the prisoners over to a neutral state for disposition?

This and a number of other questions have been hurled at the Reds by the U. N. delegate in Korea.

A number of authorities who seem to know the way the Chinese mind works, believe that the five-nation commission plan is as far as China will go. If, these authorities suggest, the U. N. turns down this plan then the entire Far Eastern situation is likely to remain stalemated indefinitely.

● What is to become of federal lands in the west?

This question has been raised by critics of the Eisenhower administration. They ask it because of the administration's efforts to turn over to the states the rich offshore oil reserves. They suggest that this action is the first step in a "give-away" of the country's public-land wealth.

These critics point out that once the states gain control of the seaward reserves they will immediately turn their attention to the mountains and the forests that belong to the federal government. Many industrial interests have long eyed the tremendous reserves of timber, minerals, water and other resources of these federal lands.

In the western states, the federal government owns tracts ranging from 35 per cent of the total area in Washington to nearly 85 per cent in Nevada. These lands have returned the federal government large amounts of money and, at the same time, the government has practiced a policy of conservation.

If turned over to the states, critics of the administration say, these lands would become subject to immediate "grab" by industrial interests who have an eye on profit and are unconcerned about conservation.

The administration has said it has no intention of letting go of the public wealth. But at the same time, there is a trend at work in Congress toward revising grazing rights on public lands as well as the harvesting of timber and production of minerals and oil.

The problem is now in its initial stage, but it is one that the American public should begin to give serious consideration.

● A test is shaping up that will be of interest to watch. Wage talks between the nation's steel workers and the industry are scheduled to get underway soon. It will be the first test of the administration's new labor pattern.

The question is: can the White House keep out of labor disputes? That is the White House policy under the new administration. Under the Truman administration that was impossible.

Many inquiries relative to standards and programs for kindergartens, nursery schools and pre-school centers come to this office. These inquiries come from school officials, teachers, and parents and are handled by letter or conference. Teachers and parents ask for help on the problems of children and make requests for materials of instruction dealing with the young child. In many instances it is necessary to counsel with the parents before specific suggestions are made and materials are provided. There is a great need for the State Department of Education to assume responsibility for working more closely with these schools and certifying the teachers in them. It is important to safeguard children from exploitation as well as to safeguard our educational program. All persons concerned with the schools of the state should be aware of the significance of education for children under six and a study should be made to determine the kind of program most practical for Alabama.

SUNDAY'S SERMON

Rev. Robert H. Harper

The Way of Christian Love.
Lesson for May 31: I Corinthians 13.
Golden Text: I Corinthians 13: 13.

There is no more familiar chapter in the New Testament than the thirteenth of I Corinthians. In the chapter Paul writes of the greatest thing in the world—love. By a series of comparisons he illustrates the supremacy of love, proves its worth by showing what it will enable a man to do, and closes with the eternity of love.

Though a man should speak with the eloquence of angels, should have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, he would be nothing without love. Though he should reach all benevolence, and even give his body to be burned, it would profit him nothing without love.

Love will enable a man to bear all things and to do all good things, and inspire him with a hope that nothing can take away. And love will never fail, though the boasted knowledge of men shall pass and all their achievements perish.

Love is an illuminating experience and some day all the mysteries of life will be known when redeemed men through love see things as they are. When that which is perfect is come, when hope shall be no longer because it is realized in heaven and when faith shall be no longer because men shall see God face to face, love will be the atmosphere of heaven and the theme of the angels' lay. If you know what love is, the book tells us that God is love. When you come to know God through faith in Christ, the love of which the apostle writes will be your daily portion and experience.

Soil Testing Needed In Pasture Planting

Farmers who plan to seed grazing and soil building crops in summer and early fall should have their soil tested now.

J. C. Lowery, API Extension agronomist, says this will allow farmers to know exactly how much lime and fertilizer to use for best results. County agents have instructions on sending soil samples to the soils laboratory at Alabama Polytechnic Institute.

Pat Hamiltn has been manager of the E. L. Klinner Furniture Company here for the past 13 years, and has never been away from the store for more than four days at a time until the other week. He and Mrs. Hamilton visited at Delane, Fla., and at Orlando where Mrs. Hamilton's grandson and family live—the Jimmy Giddens. Also the beautiful Julian Evans' home where they were dinner guests. Pat didn't say anything about fishing but we know he didn't go to Florida without a fishing trip, so we guess we'll hear the fish story later.

Little Billy Wilkins will grow up to be a Broker. The signs have already started showing. The other afternoon dark came at Bill's house and he didn't come home. By the time his parents had started fretting about him he showed up with a handful of candy, a comic book and some chewing gum. After much probing the truth came out. He had been down the street supervising the cutting of a lawn that he had contracted for. He found the job for a negro man and in turn the negro man was to give him a fee for finding the job. Well, to protect his interest he sat with the negro until nearly eight o'clock, and kept him in ice water, until the job was finished. Whereupon he took his commission and rushed to the drug store and bought the candy, funny book and chewing gum. He reached home after an afternoon of hard work with exactly one penny.

I think that I shall never see,
Along the road an unscraped tree,
With bark intact, and painted white,
That no car ever hit at night.
For every tree that's near the road
Has caused some auto to be towed.
Sideswiping trees is done a lot
By drivers when they git half shot.
God gave them eyes that they might see,
Still lots of fools still hit a tree.

Family To Get Helping Hand

Alvin Campbell Get Last Wish, To See Family Before Death

Everyone in Chilton County hoped and prayed that Alvin Campbell would soon return home again.

It was only about a month ago that the folks of Chilton County were getting up funds for Alvin and his wife to make a very important journey. . . a journey it was hoped would bring Alvin Campbell back to Chilton County a well man again. For Alvin Campbell was suffering from the dread disease multiple sclerosis. In practically no time Alvin Campbell had wasted away from a big strapping, hard-working citizen of the county to a helpless invalid who had to be waited on hand and foot. And his wife and fine little daughters also tried to keep their little household together by working their farm.

Finally, through the efforts of the Clanton Lions Club, Dr. Marshall A. Ware, the Red Cross, and many others the necessary money was gathered together and Campbell and his wife were on their way. He was taken to Birmingham in the Martin Funéral Home ambulance to board a fast train to a clinic and a specialist that it was hoped would cure the ailing Chilton County man.

But the efforts of the folks of Chilton County were to no avail, because a few days ago the doctors told Alvin Campbell they had done all they could and there was no use in doing anything more. Alvin's only wish was that he might be spared long enough to return to Chilton County to see his five daughters once more before the end.

A telephone call was made once again to the Martin Funeral Home to pick up Alvin Campbell in Birmingham when he arrived by train on Wednesday, May 20th.

Completely helpless Alvin was rushed to the home of Martin Gray, a brother-in-law, who resides on the Billingsley Highway, where he died at 9 o'clock last Saturday night. But Alvin had received his last wish for his five daughters were at the station in Birmingham when he was removed from the train and placed in the ambulance.

And Monday morning the little home of Martin Gray on the Enterprise Road was crowded with mourners and as the funeral procession moved toward Bethany Church another crowd of mourners awaited as the body and the immediate family entered the little church.

The funeral service was conducted by Reverend George Dickerson and Reverend Morris Hull amid a bank of flowers that nearly covered the altar of the little church.

Pallbearers included: J. T. Webb, Amos Hughes, Dothan Traywick, Alton Moore, Toby Litcher, James A. Parson. Flower ladies included Mrs. Lucille Bice, and Mrs. Lonella Parson, and the Misses Nacy Smith, Johnny Faye Farley, Annette Campbell, Dean Dennis, Jeanette Gray and Audrey Webb. The body was laid to rest in the adjoining cemetery.

And now what about the little family that is left? Mrs. Campbell and all the rest have spent every cent they had in an effort to help her husband. Did the good people of Chilton County give up? Here is your answer. Not only have they not given up, but they have enlisted the help of others in the State. The Enterprise School has been obtained for Saturday night and through the generosity of Joe Rumore, Rebe and Rabe, and a host of others, a huge program of entertainment will be presented to help the bereaved family of Alvin Campbell. Every penny of the revenue from this program will be turned over to the Alvin Campbell family. The entertainers will pay for their own transportation to the school and all money received from the concessions will also be turned over to the fund. Everyone from everywhere is invited to come out to the Enterprise School at 7:30 Saturday night to help those who would help others who cannot help themselves.

Too many of the world's people care nothing of how, or whether, their fellowman lives or dies.

We know not which is the most dangerous to society: The man who knows it all, or the man who knows nothing at all.

Some people give so much time attending to the business of others that they forget their own.

BERRIES, BERRIES, BERRIES

Chilton County berry growers are at the height of the season now, and berries are pouring into the berry shed at Thorsby by the tons.

It is prophesied that this year's berry crop will reach $200,000. That is a lot of money and puts berries up with cotton, corn, fresh produce, and peaches as one of the county's top crops. Thousands of pickers are used to harvest this vast crop of berries and the young industry in Chilton County is just beginning to grow.

Visit the shed at Thorsby and see what they are doing. The management there is handling the crop well and bringing money into our county that is sorely needed at this time when no other principal crop is ready for harvest.

U. S. CRITICISM ABROAD

The United States has come in for its share of criticism from Europe, and other quarters, in recent weeks. The speeches of such leaders as Clement Attlee, of the Labor Party in Great Britain, have aroused a storm of public indignation in this country and caused many officials to reply in kind.

There is one thing to keep in mind about this criticism. As long as it comes from private individuals, and not the government themselves, it is only an exercise of the right of free individuals to speak their minds. Had the British Government said what Clement Attlee said, the occasion would have indeed been a serious one and grave consequences would have ensued.

However, Clement Attlee is, at the moment, out of power and speaks only for himself and members of the Labor Party, who are not the government of Great Britain. Since they are not in responsible positions, they have a tendency to speak more freely and, of course, Mr. Attlee is now battling to retain control of his own party. In this battle, he is threatened by a Left-winger, who has won many supporters by his attacks on the United States, and therefore, Mr. Attlee is perhaps doing a bit of demagoging to win back some of his strength.

All of which is a deplorable situation, but one which is sometimes practiced in this country. There are always those who are ready to criticize anything foreign, especially in certain sections of this country where criticism of certain other countries is popular.

In looking at the over-all picture, the main point to be kept in mind is that the United States is now the world's foremost leader and, therefore, sounds the keynote in Western policy-making. As the world leader, this country will naturally be the target of all those politicians who would transform an issue into personal political gain.

We might just as well get accustomed to this sort of thing, since it will continue just as long as this country remains the leader of the free world.

CONGRESSIONAL Quiz

1. Q—What has been the yield of the gambling tax law enacted by Congress in 1951 and recently upheld by the Supreme Court?
   A—The yield from July 1, 1951, through Jan. 31, 1953, was $1,193,225.11 from the $50 tax stamps gamblers are required to buy and $10,443,531.05 from the 10 per cent excise tax on gambling, for a total of $11,636,756.16. These figures came from the Bureau of Internal Revenue.
2. Q—What is the "Buy American" Act?
   A—Basically, it is a 1933 law requiring the government to buy from American producers and manufacturers when purchasing supplies and equipment for public use in the U.S., unless the cost is "unreasonable." The government usually "buys American" unless the domestic goods are more than 25 per cent higher than the delivered price of foreign goods. Rep. Frank E. Smith (D., Miss.) has introduced a bill to repeal the Act.
3. Q—How long has Hawaii, which the House recently voted to grant statehood, been a territory?
   A—Hawaii became a territory of the U.S. in 1900 and was incorporated the same year. Alaska was given a territorial form of government in 1884, but was not incorporated until 1912.
4. Q—Can the Congressional representatives from Alaska and Hawaii cast any votes in Congress?
   A—No. Representatives from territories, who are called Delegates, may serve on House Committees, engage in floor debate and make motions, except the motion to reconsider a previous action. But they may not vote. Present Delegates are Joseph R. Farrington (R., Hawaii) and E. L. Bartlett (D., Alaska). A. Fernos-Isern (Pop.-Dem.) Resident Commissioner from the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, has the same status. If Hawaii wins statehood, she will have two Senators and one or two Representatives (depending on the final form of the bill) who will have full voting rights.

DRAPERIES which do not need much cleaning will probably be brightened with a dry cleaning Use a large paper bag and place in it a mixture of two parts corn meal and one part flour. Place the drapery material in this and shake vigorously. Then remove the drapery and shake out thoroughly

Washable shades are best cleaned with a soft cloth dipped in suds and wrung out very dry Rinse with a cloth dipped in clear water, then wrung dry Hang at full length on the windows to dry

Alcohol rings from varnished surfaces can be removed by rubbing with a cloth dipped in linseed oil Then polish with furniture wax to a fine gloss.

Paint on windows will usually yield to rubbing with a cloth dipped in heated vinegar. Stubborn spots will often come off readily when peeled with a razor blade.

Spots on linoleum can be treated with a cork dipped in gasoline. Rub the cork on the spots until they disappear.

Spots on hearth tiles will frequently yield to the cork rubbing treatment. In this case, dip the cork in melted paraffin.

White marble which has become stained or spotted should be bleached gently. To do this, wrap a lemon in a cloth, dip in tepid water, then into borax and rub vigorously over the stains.

From the Bassett and Henry County Journal, Bassett, Va.: We are in receipt of a letter from Sen. Joseph McCarthy of Wisconsin . . . The letter is signed "Joe McCarthy" and the inclosure sets forth that he is answering questions which have been posed to the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations — of which he is chairman . . .

Here is Senator McCarthy's letter sent. It is to be supposed, to every weekly and daily newspaper in the country. We paid particular attention to the last sentence: "This column will be available to you at no cost if you care to use it."

Dear Editor:

As you know, many members of Congress send out weekly newsletters and news columns.

An increasingly large number of people have been wiring and writing my office requesting that I send out a weekly news letter with special emphasis upon the various Congressional investigations.

I have, therefore, decided tentatively to send out weekly question and answer copy to those papers which might find such a column of interest. This column will be available to you at no cost if you care to use it.

Sincerely yours,
Joe McCarthy

Well, Senator, we do not care to use your column. We are not interested in foisting upon our readers three-quarters of a column of type concerning the subject you cover in your inclosure—yourself.

We don't have the time or the space to devote to defending an individual who spends our money to mail self-justification folders on the taxpayer's time and pocketbook.

If you figure the cost of the stationery and envelope, the cost of the time of the typist, the mimeographer, the folding and mailing department and the mail delivery itself, you come out to something like 15 cents per pop-off.

It ain't worth it, Senator, and we want you to stop it.

As one writer states, it all seems kinda cockeyed. There must be something pretty good with our way of life if it produces the prosperity which can dish out billions to the hard-up nations whose economic systems we are asked to mimic.

With the coming of the "good old summer time," there is often a tendecy to relax and let things take care of themselves as best they can. Church attendance and offerings are often sluggish in hot weathr. Remember, God is just as real and we need Him as much in the summer as we do any other time of the year. This is no time to become weary in well doing."

Christianity And Peace Of Mind—

(By William R. Morgan)

In concluding the short series of articles on the general subject of mental health, I would like to point out that the Christian religion is the greatest emotionally stablizing force on earth. In no other religion or philosophy is there such concern manifested for the welfare of the individual man.

Aside from divisive doctrinal considerations, there are some basic pricipals enumerated in the Gospel that give man something to live for. They are:

1. Man is created in the image of God. Although that image has been marred by sin, man nevertheless represents the highest order of creation. Because we are created in the Divine image, we are endowed with immortal souls. That is what separates man from the beasts of the field and the birds of the air.

2. Each and every human soul is infinitely precious in God's sight, and He will move heaven and earth to reclaim that soul. The parable of the "ninety and nine" illustrates this precious truth most vividly.

3. Jesus Christ, through His sacrificial death and triumphant resurrection, has paid the full penalty for the sins of mankind and redeemed man from the shackles of sin. To make this sacrifice a reality, all that is required is simple faith and trust in Him as personal Saviour. To the believer there is definite assurance of everlasting life for both time and eternity.

My PET PEEVE
By W. Scott Boyd

I DON'T particularly like cats. Especially, John Alden, the big Persian that the boys own and who rules the house. I just leave him strictly alone.

Miss Fannie, our nosey neighbor, doesn't like cats either, but she's not so smart. She didn't have sense enough to ignore him. For years she has been running him out of her yard. The other day she added her brother's dog to her campaign.

I'm watching through the hedge as she brings out this big dog on a leash. She sees the cat and sics the dog on him. John Alden went up a tree. When the dog got beneath him he leaped on the dog's back and went to work. The dog fled dragging Miss Fannie.

In a few minutes John Alden came strutting back. He spies Miss Fannie picking herself up and rubbing her bruised knees. John arched his back and started stalking her. Miss Fannie fled. This time she went up the tree.

For ten minutes she hung on without a murmur while John Alden sat looking up at her. Every time she started down he would arch his back and howl. Up she would go again.

Finally she let out a scream for help and I poked my head through the hedge.

"Take this beast away," she screams. "Now he starts attacking people."

"What did you do to him?" says I.

"Nothing," says she.

"Good-bye," says I and went into the house.

At supper time John Alden came home with a satisfied look on his face. I fed him hamburger instead of canned dog food. When he finished I got up and gave him my easy chair.

I'm beginning to like that animal.

WHEN I walked into the house the thing was in a cage on the coffee table.

"What's that?" said I.

"A parakeet, stupid," says the wife.

"It leaves this house before nightfall," thunders I.

The wife objects and pouts and the boys burst into tears. And (as you suspect) I surrender.

Then, an hour later John Alden was let into the house for his evening meal. He sees the cage and springs a full ten feet. It crashes to the floor. The bird escapes to the top of the living room drapes. John tries to climb them and the drapes fall. The bird escapes to the chandelier. John Alden breaks one of the wife's best vases and sits.

During this uproar I remained calm, huddled in a corner.

When finally the wife captures John Alden and pushes him out the back door, rehangs the drapes, sweeps up the broken vase, captures the bird and generally restores order, I come out of hiding.

"Thank you, dear," says I.

"Yes," she sighs. "I suppose two cats, three kittens, a puppy, two turtles, five goldfish, and a snake down the bathroom drain is enough."

I had won my first home victory in nearly five years!

FAMILY PHOTOGRAPH

By Bessie Heck

I SUPPOSE the reason Mom let the six of us eat early that evening was so we'd feel good inside and give the photographer less trouble. She didn't eat with us, said she'd wait and eat with Dad afterwards.

We kids had come to accept this getting scrubbed and polished as sort of a Thursday evening ritual. For every Thursday evening, ever since Mom hit the telephone jackpot and won the coupon for a free family group photograph, she'd seen to it that we got dressed up for that purpose. Thursdays were the only evenings the studio was open. She made sure the bathroom was clear early so Dad wouldn't have any excuse for not getting ready as soon as he got in—if indeed he'd ever get in in time.

Mom looked swell in her black suit and white blouse with the lace collar. She smiled on us and tried to keep us in a good humor, and she looked at the mantel clock real often. Alice, the youngest, ran her fingers through her blond curls and pulled her blue ribbon out.

"Oh, Alice," Mom begged. "Please stay pretty." She went over and recombed Alice's hair.

"How much longer do we have to do this?" Alice demanded, pouting.

"This is the last time, darling," Mom said. "We just have to get that picture this time. The coupon expires today."

"Wouldn't you know Daddy would have to go out of town today?" Joyce griped.

"Now, Joyce," Mom said pleasantly, "your father has to make a living for us, you know. He'll make it," Mom continued. "He left town two hours early this morning just to make sure he'd get back in time."

"You know the lady at the studio said if we didn't get there by six-fifteen we didn't need to come," David said.

"Yes, I know," Mom agreed, looking at the clock. Five-thirty came, five-forty, five-forty-five, but not Dad. Every five minutes by that clock seemed like an hour to me. We lived so far out that we'd need nearly fifteen minutes to drive down town.

Mom got so fidgity that she twisted her lace handkerchief. I couldn't ever remember seeing her do a thing like that.

I picked up the desk calendar and began idly counting. For thirteen Thursday evenings straight we'd had to bathe and dress and sit here and twiddle our thumbs. My tongue felt sort of funny and I guess I stuck it out to get some air because Alice yelled, "Mother, make George stop making faces!" Mom had to quiet us down after that. Then she recombed my cowlick and set my Boy Scout pin at a

Mom looked at the clock again. "Oh dear," she sighed, clinching her fists. "He promised me faithfully he'd be here in plenty of time. Something must have happened."

At five-fifty-five she put her hat on the piano and told Alice she could change to her blue jeans and go ride her bike. I never saw a seven year old girl get around quite as fast as Alice did. She was gone like greased lightning. I reckon the rest of us were like Mom; too disappointed to stir.

At exactly five-fifty-nine—I happened to be looking at the clock—Dad bounded in.

"Hurry!" he shouted. "We've barely got time to make it."

We all jumped and simply could not believe our eyes. Dad had washed up at the plant, gone by the department store and dressed himself up in new clothes from head to foot.

"You can depend on me to do a thing right if I do it at all, Jane," he said to Mom. "How do I look?" He clicked his heels and spun around. "I decided I'd do you up proud with our first family group picture." He paused and seemed to really see Mom for the first time. She hadn't said a word. "What's the matter?" he asked. "Why don't we get going?"

I could have told him why: Alice was missing!

A Sign Your Life is in DANGER

You're driving on a dark-surfaced highway. The sky becomes overcast. It begins to rain. Traffic bunches up. You strain to see. "Slippery" warnings keep you tense. Then—suddenly you pass onto light-colored concrete. What a relief! Traffic moves out. No "slippery" signs. You know you're on a safer pavement.

Yes, the difference between a sickening swerve and a safe, quick stop often is the pavement. Concrete grips tires—helps you avoid accidents. Wet or dry, its gritty texture provides uniformly high skid resistance.

Remember, no driver expects trouble but if it comes your chances are much better on concrete pavement.

Fishing prospects on the Coosa-Tallapoosa Lakes for the coming week will be excellent for some anglers and pretty punk for others, and that is a good general forecast right on through the middle of June. You may be of the opinion that this is foolish chit-chat, but actually no truer prediction was ever made. Last week end several Birmingham fishermen complained of their poor luck while others reeled in the fish like mad. It happens the same way every week. Invariably there are two reasons given. Because we have [illegible] fishing there we live but [illegible] and we're not [illegible] to come up here anyway. The second reason is occasioned because they were enjoying the recreation and scenery. While there were having lunch an old-timer came paddling in and proudly displayed his string of whoppers that he had caught in about two hours fishing time. So, like they say, "the best time to go fishing is when you get a chance." One never knows when we will luck up on that wonderful combination of having the right bait at the right place at the right time.

The Alabama Power Company Fishing Contest is still going strong and whoppers are being entered from the Lakes. There are only a few days left in the month of May, so be sure and let your boat dock operator weigh your best catch. You may win a valuable prize.

Last week reports are as follows:

LAKE MARTIN — Fred Wilder, Southside Standard Service Station, Dadeville, reports: Carl Foster, Pepperell, fished Blue Creek with worms and strung a 13-ounce Shellcracker, along with several other nice ones.

LAKE LAY—Ed Hardiman, Manager, Riverview Fishing Camp, near Carlton, reports: W. C. Brown, 2- Princeton Avenue, Birmingham, used a Broker-Back Pike and Paint Creek to creel a string of beauties. Bub's best catch was a 4-pound, 11-ounce Smallmouth Bass.

Harry Driver and C. F. Brown, 1109 Monarch Avenue, Birmingham, boated nine Smallmouth Bass that weighed 16 pounds. Their largest was 3 pounds, 14 ounces.

Paul Burton's Shell Service Station, Shelby, reports: Ben Fortner, 1216 Waverly Street, Tarrant City, hung into a 4-pound, 13-ounce Smallmouth Bass with a Merlury Minnow on Waxahatchee Creek. Ben sure has laught 'em this spring. He caught the creel limit again this week. His 10 Bass weighed 21 pounds.

L. K. MITCHELL — Powell's River Road Store, near Clanton, reports: Jessie Lewis, Clanton, used live minnows near the mouth of Walnut Creek and caught a string of Crappie. Jessie's best catch weighed 1 pound 5 ounces.

O. E. Oglesby, Mims Ferry Fishing Camp, near Lay Dam, reports: John Wyatt, Clanton, fished with Thealon Howlett, John Sargent and Houston Baker, Quintown, about the headwaters of Mitchell Lake. The group took 21 Stripes, 1 Drum and 2 Catfish, all very nice fish. John Wyatt caught the largest Stripe, 1 pound, 13½ ounces.

Mary Alice and Calvin Cost, Calera, fished about an hour and a half with willow grub for bait and took home a large string of Bass, Bream and Drum.

Sam Avery, Jr., Jemison, used river minnows to catch his 14-ounce Shellcracker. Sam also had a nice assorted string of Bream and Stripes.

LAKE JORDAN — Sears' Boat Dock, Swayback Bridge, Sofkahatchee Creek, reports: Allen L. Stephens, 2314 Windsor Avenue, Montgomery, fly fished with a popping bug and creeled a 4-pound, 12-ounce Largemouth Bass along with several other lunkers.

JOSEPH R. MARGUGLIO, 6368 Burchfield Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, jotted down and sent me the following list of worries and the outcome, which it will interest you to read.

1. When I was young I used to fear darkness, particularly when alone and in a darkened area. Darkness has never yet harmed me.
2. As a college freshman I was still only five feet tall and I worried constantly for fear that I would never grow taller. I did.
3. At age twenty I began worrying about the loss of my hair. I used to feel that the loss of my hair would wreck me physically, mentally, socially, and perhaps financially. It didn't.
4. Later I worried about getting the right kind of job. I got it.
5. When I was sent overseas I worried about whether I would ever again return home to see my wife and family. Here I am.
6. Once while in the army I violated an army regulation and for a while I worried about being busted to a private again and disgraced in the eyes of my wife. I never was.
7. Today my worries are chiefly financial security, health, and remotely world peace, but since I know that 90 per cent of the things we worry about never actually happen I have practically ceased to worry.

HOME DEMONSTRATION LEADERSHIP SCHOOL

Clothing leaders of the Home Demonstration Clubs of Chilton County attended a leadership school in Clanton at the City Hall Friday, May 15th. Miss Kathline Thompson, clothing specialist from Auburn, conducted the demonstration on "The Sleeve That Fits."

Putting sleeves in a garment is often one of the most difficult parts of sewing so it is hoped that after having this demonstration in the Home Demonstration Clubs the members will have less trouble along this line. This demonstration will be given in each Club in June.

Miss Thompson illustrated how a sleeve can be put in a garment without having any fullness in the sleeve. A sleeve may be pinned in and then stitched—basting is not necessary. Suggestions were given for altering sleeve patterns so that they will fit better. Information on fashion outlooks, patterns and styles were also given.

Ten Home Demonstration Clubs were represented by eighteen ladies. The clubs were: Baker, Poplar Springs, Cane Creek, Thorsby, Fairview, Bethsalem, Thomas Jr., Mineral Springs, Alabama Mills and Cedar Grove.

NO BALANCED BUDGET

The Eisenhower Administration has come to the reluctant conclusion that there is no hope of balancing the Federal budget in the new fiscal year which begins on July 1. Expenditures for national defense and for foreign military and economic aid are the key factors which prevent a balanced budget this year.

4-H GIRLS NEIGHBOR-AIDE TRAINING MEETINGS

Training meetings for 4-H Neighbor-aide Leaders is being held this week. The purpose of these meetings is to train the leaders to have group meetings during the summer and carry on the 4-H work.

In each Club the girls have selected a 4-H'er and an adult to be the leaders for each community represented in their Club. These leaders are to work together and have summer meetings for the girls in their community. It is necessary to have training meetings to train these leaders if we have good summer meetings. They will be given material for the demonstrations and suggestions for conducting the neighbor-aide meetings. The demonstration for June is "First Aid For 4-H'ers" and for July it is "Making Peach Jam."

It is hoped that each of the leaders will make aa special effort to attend the training meeting nearest them.

The meeting for Friday (today) is Stanton School, 9:00 a.m. and Vermont School, 2:00 p.m.

BIG BUSINESS

Billion-dollar businesses are growing — both in size and in number, according to a recent economic report. There are 29 such businesses in this country, with assets of $1,000,000,000 or more. Before World War II there were 12. The 28 included industrials, utilities and railroads and to these could be added 18 commercial banks, 14 insurance companies and 2 finance companies, but their assets are of a different type than those of manufacturing or service companies.

Rep. Selden Urges More Hospital Funds

Washington, D.C. — The House of Representatives has failed by only six votes to restore the original hospital construction request for fiscal year 1954 of $75 million. This was done in spite of stirring requests by Rep. Armistead I. Selden, Jr., and several other Congressmen for an appropriation of $75 million rather than the $50 million recommended by the House Appropriations Committee.

As passed by the House, the appropriations bill allocates only $50 million for the Hill-Burton Hospital construction program next year. Rep. Selden urged the House to adopt an amendment to restore $25 million to the funds.

Regardless of the set-back in the House, Selden hopes the Senate will bring the funds back up to $75 million and that both chambers will then agree to at least a portion more than the $50 million recommended by the House. Since the amendment to increase funds only needed six more votes to pass the House, he believes House members might approve additional funds if the Senate votes to increase the $50 million.

It has been estimated that even the full $75 million appropriation would not be enough to keep the hospital construction up to par. In past years the program has operated on annual appropriations of $75 million to $150 million. Original budget estimates for fiscal year 1954 included $75 million for federal aid to the hospital program. The revised budget estimates had cut this amount to $60 million. The House Appropriations Committee slashed the funds to $50 million before the bill was sent to the House.

In a speech before the House on May 25 in support of more funds for the hospital program, Selden said he was very conscious of the urgent need for balancing the budget at the earliest possible moment and that he had always voted to economize whenever he thought it advisable. But he said he could not vote for the reduction to $50 million for hospital construction.

"The hospital construction program has been recognized by Republicans and Democrats alike as one that assists every state in the Union in securing critically needed medical facilities," he said.

He pointed out that the assistance given to the states by the federal government for the hospital program is on a matching basis. Various communities raise local funds which are matched by the national government. No federal funds are provided for maintenance operation.

"And most important," he said, "no federal supervision or authority exists in any way upon completion of the medical facilities. So, we can readily see that the federal government's role in the hospital construction program is one of assistance and not of control."

Selden then told House members that 59 percent of the medical facilities built under the Hill-Burton program are in communities of 5,000 or less. About 430 communities have hospitals for the first time. But he stated that the program also designates funds for large medical centers and university hospital centers which train doctors who will eventually staff the smaller hospitals.

"The Alabama Congressional District which I represent is predominantly a rural district. Many rural communities have found themselves without hospitals and even without doctors. Most young doctors have been reluctant to go into communities where adequate facilities were not available for the practice of the type medicine they studied. This is understandable, of course. A number of communities in my district and throughout the state and nation have built the kind of facilities young specialized doctors require through the hospital construction program. Other communities are anxious to participate in this program if adequate funds are made available.

"Although a great part of the funds are being used by rural communities, we must remember that these rural facilities could serve well as evacuation points for urban areas if war or other chaos should come to this country."

733,000 Beds Needed—

Referring to public health reports, Selden stated that there is a deficiency of 733,000 hospital beds in the United States.

"To me, such a deficiency is alarming," he said, "and in my opinion, it would be unwise to reduce funds for this program below the $75 million mark for fiscal year 1954. I do not feel this request is unreasonable since the hospital program law permits an annual appropriation of up to $150 million."

Rep. Selden said he believes the chances of beginning construction on the proposed hospital for the City of Clanton at an early date will be greatly improved if the House and Senate agree on appropriation of more than $50 million.

FOOD PRICES

Retail food costs dropped to the lowest level since December, 1950, largely reflecting lower farm prices, according to an Agriculture Department report issued during the first weeks of May. A fixed quantity of food that cost an average of $735 in 1952 could be bought for $701 last month, but would have cost $755 in July of last year.

BUDGET CUTS

Budget-cutters were recently informed by the House Appropriations Committee that the committee could trim only 3.5 per cent from the 1954 funds for the Treasury and Post Office departments. This was the smallest percentage reduction made by the committee on any appropriation bill sent to the House floor this year. The Treasury department would receive $611,895,000 and the Post Office $2,832,250,000 under the bill.

My PET PEEVE

By W. Scott Boyd

A FEW days ago I took the wife to the races. I had a wonderful time, but more than that—I think I've taught her a lesson.

In the fifth race there was a nag by the name of Third Copy. The odds 45 to 1. That's a natural for a newspaperman. Besides the form said he had four legs.

So I says to her, say I, "That's for me."

"What? At 45 to 1. Why that nag will be running tomorrow. Give me that form sheet."

She yanks it out of my hand and does a quick job of doping.

"This is it," says she, and puts her finger on one Miss Pettycoat. "It's a natural. Hand over our two dollars."

"But, honey."

"No buts about it," says she and grabs the two bucks and marches off.

While she's gone I slipped around to the $5 win window and put a fiver on Third Copy.

That animal named Miss Pettycoat was still on the back stretch when Third Copy hit the wire, a winner by a nose.

"Well," says I, "Where's our horse?"

"I'm sorry, dear," says she. "And your horse paid $98.60 to win. Someday, honey, Im gonna learn to keep my mouth shut."

"How much will you take to keep that promise?" says I.

She looked real hurt.

"O. K. Forget it. Now lets go collect that $246.50," says I rather smugly.

Darn it! She hasn't spoken to me for two days.

SALARY BOOST

While many Congressmen think the proposed $10,000 salary boost for members of Congress is justified, most of them admit that, in view of the economy-minded Administration in power, "it hasn't got a chance now." The bill, recently approved by the Senate Judiciary Committee, would give senators and representatives a $25,000 annual salary. They now get $12,500 and a $2,500 expense allowance which are lumped together as $15,000 of taxable compensation. Up to $3,000 may be deducted for income tax purposes as Washington living expenses.

Your Child's Future IN HIS HANDS

Your child's health, success, and happiness depend upon the kind of school you provide for him. Upon your child's future depends Alabama's development and welfare. Upon your child's future depends democracy itself.

As a thinking citizen, you recognize the urgent needs of our schools. The man in the picture is your legislator. He represents you in the Legislature. You have given him the responsibility of providing the kind of school your child should have. For one thing, this means that your child should have the best teachers available. Does he? Let's see how we pay our teachers as compared with our neighboring states

(All instructional staff; classroom teachers $2,487)

Georgia's average salary is $2,604	$67 more than Alabama's
Louisiana's average salary is $2,700	$163 more than Alabama's
North Carolina's average salary is $3,250	$713 more than Alabama's
Texas' average salary is $3,347	$810 more than Alabama's
Florida's average salary is $3,461	$924 more than Alabama's

High salaries in other states attract many of our best teachers away from Alabama schools.

Your child's teacher must be college educated. Yet this teacher is asked to begin his career at about $2,100. This is less than most other beginning workers make, many of whom are not required to invest in a college education. When college training is required, many young people turn from education to other fields that pay better salaries. (Graduates in engineering are beginning work this year in Alabama at salaries ranging from $4,000 to $4,500.)

This loss of teachers to other states and other jobs means over-crowded classrooms and half-day sessions for many of our children.

WHAT CAN YOUR LEGISLATOR DO ABOUT THIS?

Your representative will have to vote on a bill to increase salaries of public school teachers by 10 percent. This bill is supported and urged by:

State Superintendent of Education
Alabama Congress of Parents and Teachers (P-TA)
Alabama Education Association

To increase public school teachers' salaries by 10 percent and to provide for increased enrollments and improved training will require approximately $7,000,000 a year.

To increase the salaries of college instructors, including employees of the extension services, will require approximately $1,400,000.

Low salary schedules are likewise robbing the state colleges of many of our more capable and better trained instructors. This, at a time when Alabama's social and economic development depends upon people highly trained in the technical and professional fields. These trained leaders should come from Alabama colleges. Your representative will have to vote on a 10 percent increase for college instructors. Urge him to vote for it.

STOP RAIDS ON SCHOOL FUND

The Educational Trust Fund was intended for education—for public schools and colleges. Exemptions from Alabama's sales tax now take more than $33 million a year from schools. Certain bills pending in the Legislature would use the Trust Fund for other purposes and weaken its support by new exemptions.

WHAT YOU CAN DO

Urge your legislator to represent YOU and YOUR child by:

1. Opposing all bills that would spend for other purposes the funds assigned to public education.

2. Opposing all bills that exempt special groups from the payment of the sales tax which was intended for support of education.

3. Voting for bills that would equalize the tax burden and at the same time provide additional funds for your child's education.

4. Voting for a bill authorizing a constitutional amendment that would permit the qualified voters of a particular county or city to say whether they wish to increase local taxes for schools.

11 CARS WRECKED ON CURVE

Williamsport, Md. — Eleven cars were wrecked in ten days on a sharp turn in U. S. highway 11, from Maryland into West Virginia. The chain of accidents began early the morning of April 26, when two cars smashed up, injuring four persons, one seriously. Most of the wrecks involve cars failing to make the nearly 90-degree turn and sliding off the highway.

"I REMEMBER" BY THE OLD TIMERS

From Mrs. Stanley Narbert, Lumberport, W. Va.: I remember my grandmother's "spare" room. The floor was covered with straw matting, so cool and peaceful looking. Also, Grandmother's treasured "toilet set," consisting of a large water pitcher, decorated with immense red and yellow roses, and a wash bowl to match.

From Mr. Leland Ross, Columbus, O.: I remember back in 1901 when my father and mother moved from Wayne County, West Virginia, in wagons. We arrived at Branchland which was the end of the wagon trail. From there we loaded the furniture on a push boat and moved up-river to Midkiff, W. Va., which, at that time, was called the mouth of Nine-Mile Creek. The next seven miles to our home we moved by horseback.

From Mrs. N. D. Parker, Hughes Springs: I remember when women had to beat dirt from clothes when they washed. We had a "battling block" and a smooth battling stick. Children came in handy for this chore. Neighbors for almost a mile around always knew when it was washday. We used home-made soap made from meat scraps.

From Mrs. Sarah DeLong, Cincinnati, O: I remember when I was 14 years old, Sam Jones, a great evangelist of the time, held meetings near our home. Many people were converted. At one of them a lady asked to see him in private and he consented. When he walked into the room he picked up a coat and put it across her shoulders. She was amazed. Then he explained that before they started to talk he didn't want any temptations. The lady was wearing a "plunging" neckline dress. Today's styles are not so new after all.

—By Ben

W. C. Lecroy of Maplesville Rt. 1 brought us a cow and calf story this week. Seems one of Mr. Lecroy's cows was missing and he couldn't find her. That is, not until he saw some buzzards flying a ways off from his house. The cow was about ready to come in fresh and he was afraid about losing that calf. Well, he found the old Jersey cow dead all right, so he says goodbye to the new calf. The story didn't quit there though. Four days after the old cow died the little calf came gobbling up to the farm home with the other cows when they came in last night. The calf is still o.k. and you can ask W. C. Lecroy about it. It's a little heifer calf and how it got by from Sunday until Wednesday afternoon none but the calf knows and unlike most females she won't talk.

This was handed us by our "Girl Friday" and confidentially we don't think we like all we think it implies: "That chair," a salesman told a client, "is worth $5,000." "How would a chair like that be worth $5,000?" scoffed the client. "That's what it cost me last year," the salesman explained. "Sitting in it instead of going out after business."

Judge J. O. Middleton visited the Methodist Conference at Huntingdon College several times while it was in session last week. While there on one of his visits he met W. B. (Jack) Atkinson, now of Mobile, but who was pastor here for one year. He asked Judge Middleton: "How's the pot-bellied barbers in Clanton getting along?"

See where the school teacher from the city was questioning her small farm nephew to see how his country school education was progressing. "If a farmer had 5,000 bushels of corn," she asked, "and corn is selling at 40 cents a bushel, what will he get?" "A government loan!" promptly replied the nephew.

Want to thank Dr. and Mrs. John Kincaid for calling us about "Ba" Tucker's bird the other day. Just goes to show you the power of advertising. Anyway, it was mighty nice of them to take the trouble to call and all that sort of thing. We appreciate it very much. "Ba" drove over to Maplesville one day last week end and they gave her the bird.

State Supreme Court Upholds Old Blue Laws

Montgomery, Ala. The Alabama Supreme Court has upheld the legality of the state's old Sunday Blue Law, and the right of Mobile's police chief to enforce it.

The High Court held that the legislature had the authority to pass such laws for the preservation of health and promotion of public welfare.

The ruling was handed down on two cases appealed from Mobile where a number of merchants were arrested recently for Sunday operations.

The law written in 1886, has been revised several times to exclude several types of business. A bill now pending in the Alabama legislature would allow news stands, delicatessens, ice cream and fruit stands to operate on Sunday.

On Local Field At 7:45

Clanton Baesball Club Faces Selma Tonight

Albert H. Pyron, manager of the Clanton Baseball Club, has announced that either Johnson, Simpson or Lee will get the nod for the pitching assignment when the local team takes the field at 7:45 tonight in Clanton's City Park against Selma in a regularly scheduled game of the Autaugaville League.

Although Clanton made a poor showing in their last tilt against Prattville by losing by a score of 19 to 6, Manager Pyron is hopeful that his club will snap back into the winning column in tonight's contest.

Negro Shot After Argument Saturday

A family argument over grocery money last Saturday afternoon resulted in the shooting of one negro and the arrest of another who was charged with assault with intent to murder.

According to Chilton County Sheriff Luther Kendrick, Dave Fulford, 21-year-old negro, shot Addie Lou Fulford in the groin with a .22 calibre rifle. Fulford was an employee of the Clanton Fertilizer Company. The woman was treated by a local physician and then sent to a hospital where her condition was described as not serious. Fulford was removed to the Chilton County jail. Sheriff Kendrick signed the warrant Monday morning.

Welfare Department Caseload Is Off 224

Montgomery, Ala. — Director Dr. Bill Dorrough says that the caseload of the State Welfare Department was off 224 cases at the end of April from what it was in March.

Dorrough said the figure dropped from 98,042 at the end of March, compared to 97,788 at the close of April. The average monthly payment per case in April was $29.75, compared to $29.65 the previous month.

Total assistance payments by the department last month amounted to $2,909,649, compared to $1,868,026 for the previous month.

Nine Polio Cases Reported In Month

Montgomery, Ala. — The State Health Department says that nine poliomyelitis cases were reported last month, the largest weekly total since early last October.

It represented an increase of more than 100 per cent over the four cases reported the week before last. Of the total, Montgomery County had six, and Jefferson, Lowndes and Talladega one case each.

Alabama Director Reports Less Forest Fires

Montgomery, Ala. — Alabama's Director of Conservation, Earl M. McGowin, has announced that April forest fire records show that burn so far in the State this year is only a little more than half as large as for the first four months of 1952.

During January, February, March and April this year 0.63 per cent of the total forest area in the State burned. This compared favorably with 1.07 per cent burned during the same period of 1952.

Also, the average size of fires dropped from 36 acres last year during those months to 30.2 acres this year.

These figures present a sharp contrast to the extreme fire season of last fall and winter. During November, 1952, almost twice as much forest acreage burned as has been burned the first four months of 1953. The total area burned in November was 221,876 acres compared with 113,759 acres thus far this year.

The high incidence of burn at that time was caused by acute drouth conditions which have been alleviated by plentiful rains since the first of the year- McGowin said.

Alabama gets land grant

Addition to Cheaha Park—At a recent meeting of the board of directors of Coosa River Newsprint Company it was voted to give to the state of Alabama a tract of 40 acres of land owned by the company on the top of Cheaha Mountain in the State Park. This tract is on the top and side of the highest peak in Alabama, known as "Pulpit Rock." Cheaha, with a paved road leading to its peak, is one of the finest parks in the country. It is open to the public.

First Entry

MISS DONNA KLINNER

Miss Donna Klinner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Klinner of Clanton, is the first young lady to be entered in the Chilton County Peach Queen contest for this year's Peach Festival.

The name of Miss Klinner was entered by the members of the Clanton Junior Chamber of Commerce and it is the first name to be received by the Peach Queen committee, headed by Mrs. Erle Ellis.

Miss Klinner is a recent graduate of Chilton County High School, where she was a member of the Beta Club, selected as salutatorian of her class, class musician, and served as accompanist to the school Glee Club for two years.

In making the announcement of Miss Klinner's entry into the contest, Mrs. Ellis reported that she and her committee now have all of the necessary blanks for all future entrants. Mrs. Ellis said that the age limit for the entries would be from 16 to 22 years and unmarried. She also emphasized that there would be no special talent required of the contestants.

Mrs. Ellis also pointed out that the time is drawing short before the Peach Festival takes place July 8th. Plans are now being made for several days and nights of activities to honor the girls that are entered in the contest. A full announcement of the plans are expected to be made later this week.

Non-Farm Workers Increases Over '52

Montgomery, Ala. — Non-farm employment in Alabama industries, estimated at 680,200 for April, climbed 8,800 above the year ago total, according to Joe L. Coleman, director of the Department of Industrial Relations. All of this annual increase resulted from manufacturing gains since non-manufacturing industries decreased 100 in employment. The continued upward trend was evidenced by a 600 worker gain between March and April.

Factory employment generally remained rather static between the two months. Although one shipyard firm recovered from a strike, the 2,600 shipyard workers during April was fifty per cent below the year ago level.

There were gains in ordnance activities and electrical machinery, whereas the aircraft industry temporarily laid off 400 workers.

Except for the steel strike last summer, employment in the primary metals industry has been at high levels for several years. The present figure of 47,700 workers exceeds last year's figure by 2,500.

Trade employment showed a gain of 1,000 over the year. Contract construction gained seasonally but was somewhat lower than a year ago.

Federal employment was down 500 from the March figure, reflecting a decline in Defense Department payrolls as well as layoffs in other agencies. State and local government payrolls showed an increase of 1,700 over the year, and a 300 decrease for the month.

About 209,000 factory production workers earned an average of $55.75 per week in April. This was a gain of $5.31 since last year, but the average work week increased from 39.1 to 40.4 hours.

Holiday Week End Kills Hundreds-

No Highway Deaths In Chilton During First Five Months Of '53

Although traffic fatalities throughout the nation during the past holiday week end ran into the hundreds, Chilton County has passed through the past five months without one traffic accident that has resulted in a death

This announcement was made yesterday by the county's law enforcement officers including the members of the Chilton County Sheriff's office as well as the members of the Alabama Highway Patrol that are stationed in the county. The last fatal highway accident in Chilton County occurred on Highway 31, just north of Coopers about 4 o'clock in the morning on the last day of 1952.

In reminiscing with the Chilton County News reporter over the week end, Highway Patrolman Fred Stein and Chief Deputy Sheriff Reuben Gore were relating how the clean slate was nearly marred last Saturday night.

The two officers reported that they sighted a speeding automobile near Stanton headed towards Maplesville. They took out after the speeding car and were forced to drive their patrol car as fast as 95 miles per hour at times in an effort to apprehend the speeding motorist. The officers also related how the speeding vehicle swerved several times from one side of the road to another and at one time narrowly missed colliding with a Greyhound bus

Gore and Stein also said that if the speeding motorist had reached the railroad track in Maplesville two minutes before he had he would have collided with a railroad train.

The two officers were asked by your reporter to what did they attribuited the fact that Chilton County had such an enviable record. They replied that it was a combination of the efforts of all law enforcement officers in the county as well as the cooperation of the motorists that use our highways. They further stated that the constant patrolling by Sheriff Luther Kendrick's deputies as well as the two Highway Patrol cars that are assigned to this county have figured heavily in the record that our law enforcement officers are rightly proud of.

Five From Chilton Get Degrees At The University

Five young men and women from Chilton County will wear the Cap and Gown at the 122nd Commencement Exercises at the University of Alabama this morning.

The activities are expected to get underway at 10:00 a.m., and included in the some 575 students scheduled to receive their degrees will be Columbus Duncan Wells, Jr., Helen Floyd Hayes, Charles William Wade III, Mary Elizabeth Mullins, and Nellie Grace Walker.

John M. Gallalee, President of the University, assisted by the deans of each school, will confer the degrees.

Dr. T. A. Hayes To Report For Duty With Armed Forces

Dr. Thomas A. Hayes, a veterinarian in Chilton County for many years, will report to Gunter Air Force Base, Montgomery, for active military service June 29, 1953. Dr. Hayes made the announcement of his assignment yesterday after having received his orders several days ago.

Dr. Hayes will enter the Air Force as a Captain, and will be stationed at the Montgomery base during a seven weeks indoctrination course. He is assigned to the Medical Corps of the Air Force.

Dr. Hayes told a Chilton County News reporter yesterday that he is turning his veterinary practice over to Dr. Chester F. Gains, a widely-known Autauga County veterinarian. Dr. Gains has a host of friends in Chilton County and Dr. Hayes expressed satisfaction with the selection of Dr. Gaines to succeed him in his practice here. Dr Hayes said that he had no idea of how long he would serve in the military service.

Returned

REV. M. K. VICKERS

Reverend Marvin K. Vickers has been returned to the Clanton Methodist Church for another year. His appointment was made at the annual Alabama Methodist Conference by Presiding Bishop Clara Purcell. The conference was conducted in Montgomery last week. Other appointments in the Clanton District include Rev. James C. Brown for the Circuit, and for Deatsville, Rev. Don E. Montgomery.

MONEY ALLOWED TO MARK GRAVE OF FIRST GOVERNOR

Montgomery, Ala. — A House Committee has given favorable report on a bill to appropriate $500 to mark the grave of Alabama's first governor, William Wyatt Bibb

Bibb is buried at Coosada in Elmore County.

FOOD PRICES

Retail food costs dropped to the lowest level since December, 1950, largely reflecting lower farm prices, according to an Agriculture Department report issued during the first weeks of May. A fixed quantity of food that cost an average of $735 in 1952 could be bought for $701 last month, but would have cost $755 in July of last year.

Scanning the news-

BRITISH and American relations have been extremely amiable since before World War II. The recent speech, therefore, made by former Prime Minister Attlee in the House of Commons, in which he said there are elements in the United States who do not want a settlement of the Korean war, was startling and shocking to the average American. It was, to use a cliche, the unkindest cut of them all.

Adlai Stevenson, the defeated Democratic candidate for President of the United States, very well summed up the attitude of the American average citizen concerning that statement. He said, "if there's such an element I have never encountered it. I don't know where it resides. I would like to know the address."

In addition to this statement, the British do not understand our attitude of having little faith in top-level conference between the Russians, Britain, the United States and other major powers as suggested by Prime Minister Churchill.

Briefly this is the administration's attitude toward such a conference, and, the great majority of U. S. political leaders approve it:

The United States believes that the Soviet must show good faith by actions before such a conference should be held. The United States would consider settlement of the Korean war and a treaty for Austria acts of good faith.

This is not an arbitrary decision. The American people have been disappointed by past results of such conferences. If good-will and sincerity do not exist on both sides at such a conference nothing can be accomplished.

This is not an unreasonable attitude. It is the result of the American way of thinking, its distrust of European diplomacy, and its liking for straightforward, honest action.

A number of Americans have let off a great amount of steam in recent days which has hurt American-British relations. The tragedy of such action is that these men are doing exactly what the Communist world wants more than anything else at the present time. A split than can never be breached between the two great English speaking nations of the world would be a victory for Communism.

All of the blame, however, cannot be placed on the American doorstep. Mr. Attlee was anything but discrete in his remarks and did more in that one speech to promote isolation in this country than anyone in the last 20 years.

This much is certain, political observers are saying: The United States cannot stand alone against Communism; nor can Britain stand alone. It is to our mutual benefit that we be allies and friends. It is hoped that wise heads will prevail in the dispute and our differences settled.

● A number of farm organizations have gone on record as approving President Eisenhower's plan to reorganize the Department of Agriculture. The plan is opposed by a group of Democratic senators.

Approving the plan are the National Grange, the American Farm Bureau Federation and the National Milk Producers Federation.

The plan would transfer to the secretary of agriculture the authority to reorganize the department, consolidating or realigning its far-flung field agencies to eliminate duplication and overlapping.

The opposition is concerned because the plan does not specifically set out the steps the secretary shall follow.

NEW HOUSES AND BUILDING COSTS

Contrary to the opinion of many, the cost of building your own house today is higher than it was a year ago. Not only are building costs rising, but labor costs continue to move upward.

It is estimated that a house which cost $12,050 in 1952 would cost $12,300 to build today. Those who have been expecting building costs to drop may be in for further disappointment, since some building associations report that their members believe prices of new homes will rise in the next six months.

Another factor to consider is the higher interest rates which most prospective home owners must face in procuring a home. Whereas four or four and a half per cent money has been available in more recent years, the chances are that the home owner today will have to pay four and three quarters or five per cent for his mortgage. Most building groups expect building costs and the price of new homes to decline somewhat, eventually, but just when this process will occur is still a question mark, as it has been for several years.

YOUR FEET ARE KILLING YOU

Dr. Simon J. Wilker, a Baltimore chiropodist, says modern shoe design forces most of us to cram our feet into a space too small for them. Because the toes are cramped, the base of support for the body is not only reduced, but the body distorted to compensate for the fault, he says.

This, in turn, leads to a slanting pelvis, a slumped chest, and rounded shoulders, among many other things. This unnatural position places a stress on many body structures, which strains tissues, distorts muscles and jams bones together.

Dr. Wilker believes the end result is often cancer, rheumatic fever, arthritis, allergies, neurosis and other serious body breakdowns.

The best remedy, he says, is to go barefoot. The next best thing is to wear a shoes which allows your feet complete freedom. Women are advised to wear saddle oxfords and other low-heel shoes, providing plenty of foot room, and men are advised to wear more Indian moccasins. Men should also remove their shoes when they come home from work and put on slippers.

Men should also try playing golf barefoot, according to Dr. Wilker. And, if that is impossible, take your shoes off and run around for an hour or an hour and a half. If the running doesn't kill you, in this heat, your foot structure will probably be improved.

That's a question dairymen have asked down through the years.

Research conducted by Purdue University furnishes a part of the answer. Scientists at Purdue kept an accurate check of the amount of grass eaten by three Holsteins. The amount ranged from 196 to 225 pounds per cow daily during an 84-day period.

Since the average daily milk production of these cows was from 37 to 55 pounds during their stay on grass with no additional feed, the scientists concluded a cow should have about four and a half pounds of grass for each pound of milk produced.

Turnham cautions farmers that cows not on top quality pasture cannot eat enough grass for best production. Therefore, they should be fed a balanced grain ration to make up for the pasture shortage.

A guide to better grain feeding of dairy cows is now available at offices of all county agents.

IKE'S DIKE

By— R. L. SCOTT

As another month rolls around and the days get long and hot, so does the fishing cycle revolve into another phase of an anual pattern. The Coosa-Tallapoosa Lakes sport fish, just as other sport fish, behave differently from season, and in order to eliminate some of the guesswork from angling, it would be wise to check the finny tribes present attitude. Whopper Catchers that know local conditions well and catch fish the year round report the following tips for June fishing:

Largemouth and Smallmouth Bass take advantage of the cool depths during the hot weather and rise to feed during the late afternoon, thru the night and early morning. The weed beds near the store or around stumps or logs are good spots to drop a fly, chugger or live minnow.

Stripes are beginning to leave the deep waters and are scattering about the mouths of creeks. They seem to start making an appearance just above the dams, gradually working their way up to the shoals of creeks. Then they fan out in schools all over the lake. Best bait for trolling, spoons and spinners; best for casting, chuggers with a white, popping, weighted trailer.

Crappie have gone to the depths and can be caught best around old tree tops about 20 feet deep. Live minows are the best bait.

Bream are a delight to some of the fly casters. They can be found near the banks, but the ones usually fond in the shallows are not too large. The big bream are picked up with worms and willow grubs in fairly deep water.

All fish caught and entered in the Alabama Power Company Fishing Contest beginning to day are eligible for the June prize of the month which consists of $10.00 cash merchandise certificate, to be traded at your favorite Sporting Goods Store. May entries will be accepted until the 5t hof June, and all weigh in stations are urged to mail May entries as soon as possible.

Last weeks contest entries are as follows:

Lake Thurlow—

E. B. Ballard's Store, near Tallassee, reports: Sam McGarr, Tallassee, fished deep with red worms as bait and strung some dandy bluegills that ran up to 10 ounces each.

Lake Lay—

Blaylock's Fishing Camp, just above Lay Dam and near Clanton, reports: Red Jackson and Jim Pearson, Thorsby, did a bit of trolling about the mouth of Paint Creek with a spoon and trailer. The string of 13 stripes taken averaged 1¾ lbs. each.

H. C. Leigh's Fishing Camp, Waxahatchee Creek, near Shelby, reports: George S. Williamson, 1516 North 34th Avenue, Birmingham, used ea dry fly on Waxahatche Creek and creeled the limit of 10 Largemouth Bass and 25 Bluegills. The largest Bass weighed in at 5 pounds even, and the largest Bluegill pulled 15 ounces. Johnny Harris, 1123 North 23rd Street, and Louie Latham, 3946 North 47th Avenue, Birmingham, had their good luck using a candy stick colored wounded Spook and a Shad River Runt. They also fished Waxahatchee Creek and caught the creel limit on Largemouth Bass. The average weights of fish caught was 2½ pounds each.

G. O. Norred's General Store, Talladega Springs, reports: John A. Murphy, Sycamore, fished Rock Springs with a cane pole and red worms as bait and in two hours fishing time caught the creel limit on Bluegills. The largest was 10 ounces.

Lake Mitchell—

Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Ruby, Bessemer, had good luck on Walnut Creek by hooking 9 Largemouth Bass with a Popping Lulu Fly.

O. E. Oglesby, Mims Ferry Fishing Camp, near Clanton, reports: W. E. Bradley, Shannon, and James Amos, Siluria, brought in 92 Drum and Blue Catfish from the upper waters of Lake Mitchell. The bait used in making the catch was willow grubs.

Lake Jordan—

J. O. Miller's 5 & 10 Store, Clanton, reports: Bill Hayes, Clanton, used a Jeff's Catalpa Worm to lure a nice string of Bluegills. Bill's entry weighed 8¾ ounces.

CHIEF ALAPOCO SAYS: Never wear bright colored clothes when fishing! A white or bright colored shirt enables a fish to see you at a greater distance and often frightens them away.

Garden Probably Needs Additional Supply Of Fertilizer

Auburn, Ala.—The heavy rains of recent weeks probably have leached out a large part of the fertilizer applied when planting home gardens, especially those on light sandy soils.

Where this has happened, the plant food should be replaced by a side-dressing of a complete fertilizer. Use two or three quarts of any good cotton fertilizer to each 100 feet of row.

Even under ordinary conditions, it has been found that applying half of the fertilizer on vegetable crops before planting and half when the plants are up to a good stand gives better results than applying all before planting. Certainly this practice should pay off this year. As the plants reach their maximum size and begin to put on a crop of fruit they will need more plant food than when they are small. Unless a good supply of plant nutrients is present at this stage, the plants stop growing, may lose their good green color, and could fail to set a good crop of fruit.

Nitrogen is especially important at this period of growth to keep the plants in a thrifty condition. A side-dressing of one quart of nitrate of soda, or its equivalent, should be put on about three weeks after the second application of complete fertilizer. On long season crops such as okra and peppers two or more side-dressings of nitrate will give excellent results.

THE ADOLESCENT

Adolescence, or that period of "growing up," is frequently a fretful one for parents who fail to recognize and understand the physical and emotional changes in their offspring.

As the child enters the adolescent period his growing maturity takes on a new approach. Normally dependent on the security, love and confidence provided by his parents, the adolescent unconsciously seeks to break this pattern, so that his own independence can be established. The home, food and clothing are still accepted, but freedom is sought—freedom from parental influence, freedom from being told what and what not to do, freedom to enjoy the styles of his group even though they may be considered by adults, as often they are, entirely out of keeping with his youth.

The wise parent will accept these changes calmly. Children are great imitators, reacting strongly to the parental attitude in the home. If proper guidance has been effected in the early years, parental authority can be maintained wisely. Environmental factors influence extensively the growth pattern of the adolescent. Spontaneity in the youngster should be encouraged but controlled. Enthusiasm should not be curbed but directed unobtrusively.

Security must come from others and is given through protection, acceptance, guidance, authority and example. Self-confidence must be developed within the individual through self assertion, experiment, achievement, cooperation, service and leadership.

Security can be dampened, and even destroyed, by non-acceptance, lying, nagging, inconsistency, arguing, split authority and bad example, while self confidence may be impeded by over-protection, lack of appreciation of achievements, domination and suppression.

Life should not be too easy for a child. If every desire is anticipated and met, life is boring. Character develops through facing problems an dmastering them.

Report from Washington

BY

ARMISTEAD SELDEN

Congressman, Sixth District

The Department of Labor and the Department of Health, Welfare, and Education formerly Federal Security Agency, will be operating next year on approximately $275 million less than they did in fiscal year 1953 if the Senate goes along with the House's recommendations on funds for the two departments.

House members voted to appropriate almost two billion dollars for federal expenses in the field of labor, health, welfare, and education. This amount is a large reduction in former President Truman's budget request and considerably less than President Eisenhower's budget estimate.

When the House acted on this appropriation bill, I voted for amendments to restore funds for aid to vocational education, vocational rehabilitation, and hospital construction under the Hill-Burton Act which had been cut by the Appropriations Committee before the bill reached the House. The House voted in favor of restoring funds for vocational education and vocational rehabilitation, but it failed by only six votes to approve $25 million more for the hospital construction program.

To support my vote for sufficient funds for the hospital and medical center construction program, I made a speech before the House on May 25 to urge that the amount for 1954 be set at $75 million rather than the $50 million.

Even though I have consistently cast my votes for economy whenever I thought it advisable, I think it is unfortunate that the House slashed the appropriation for federal aid in the building of hospitals and medical centers. Since there is now a shortage of 733,000 hospital beds in this country, the House-approved $50 million will make it necessary for the program to operate on a greatly reduced basis.

Many Without Doctors—

In addressing the House, I called the members' attention to the fact that many rural communities are without hospitals and some without doctors. Most doctors are reluctant to go into rural areas where they do not have the facilities to practice the specialized medicine they were taught. A large part of the federal aid to hospitals is designated for communities of 5000 population or less, and this aid has made available to many doctors the facilities they require. Under the Hill-Burton Act, 430 communities have medical facilities for the first time. The program also earmarks sufficient funds for large medical institutions to train hospital personnel. Rural medical facilities built under the program render great services to their own localities, but they could also serve as evacuation centers for big-city areas if war or other catastrophe should strike this nation.

Since the law itself permits up to $150 million for the Hill-Burton program each year, I do not feel I was unreasonable in supporting an appropriation of $75 million for hospital construction next year. Although the House voted only $50 million, it is entirely possible the Senate will see fit to increase this sum. If it does, then a House and Senate Conference Committee will probably place the final appropriation somewhere between $50 and $75 million.

For federal aid to states in vocational education and vocational rehabilitation, the House restored funds of $2.6 million and $2.4 million respectively.

Despite the dire need for budget balancing, it would be false economy to eliminate funds for these two programs which, in the long run, boost our national economy by providing more people with jobs that enable them to stay off the relief rolls and give them opportunities to become productive and self-reliant.

Through the rehabilitation program, many crippled or blind adults are now making their own way and helping to support the high cost of national defense. By restoring the earning power of those so unfortunately handicapped, we not only contribute to our national economy, but we store self-respect to the afflicted. This is a program of assistance that simply cannot be neglected.

On the other hand, nothing is more important to our national economy than to train our healthy boys and girls to earn a living and make a home. The great vocational education program which is working so successfully today could not be possible without federal cooperation. The vocational program includes the teaching of agriculture, home economics, distributive education and trade and industrial education. Many of the subjects are taught at night for the benefit of working people.

Even with the increases in funds for vocational education and vocational rehabilitation, the budget approved by the House for federal labor, health, welfare, and educational activities is $117 million less than former President Truman's request. It is also $41 million below President Eisenhower's estimate.

House Approves Further Budget Cuts—

Acting on another appropriation bill last week, the House approved $412 million for civil functions, Department of the Army, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1954. This is about four million dollars less than the amount asked by the Appropriations Committee. It is $80 million less than the President's estimates and $168 million below

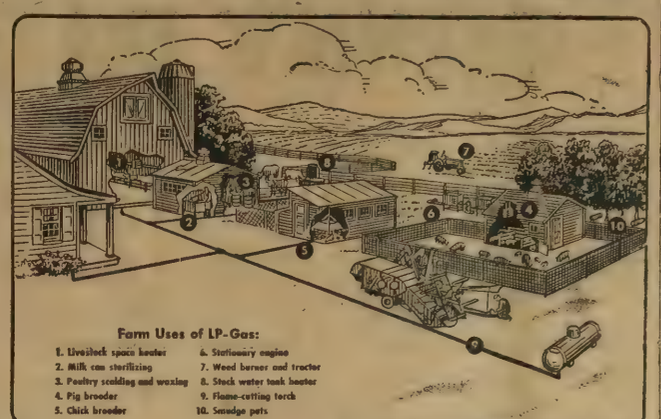
'Private Gas Well' Does Variety of Farm Jobs



Although most farms are located beyond city gas mains, they can now have their own "backyard gas well" to supply fuel for a wide variety of important jobs. Liquefied petroleum gas is delivered to the central supply system. Stored as a liquid, the fuel changes to its gaseous state when used. Large amounts of LP-Gas (butane, propane, bottled or tank gas) can be stocked because one volume of liquid expands to about 270 volumes of gas. The fuel is also used by millions of farm families to operate modern household appliances, including automatic ranges, water heaters, clothes dryers, incinerators, refrigerators and heating plants.

Principles of Christian Stewardship
Lesson for June 7: II Corinthians 9
Golden Text: II Corinthians 9:7.

Before setting forth the principles of Christian stewardship, Paul commends the Corinthians for their generosity previously shown, and he urged them to continue in their giving. Paul was engaged in securing an offering from different churches for the poor saints in Jerusalem, and he was anxious that the Corinthians should have their full share in that work of generosity.

Christian stewardship depends upon the recognition of the fact that all men have come from God and that it is committed to them as a sacred trust. Stewardship is a higher law than that of the tithe. For it requires that men shall give all that they can to God's service. They are to give all they can—in money, time, and talents. And every gift should be accompanied by thanksgiving to God for his goodness.

Paul lays down what may be termed principles of Christian stewardship and they may well be followed today. First of all, men should give liberally, that they may reap bountifully. And they should be cheerful givers, not "grudging," for God loves a cheerful giver. So let us give in such way that we shall find joy in the giving. And what we give will then minister unto our happiness while it supplies the needs of others.

By LYN CONNELLY

AUTHENTICITY has been the keynote of CBS Radio's "Gangbusters" since it made its debut on January 15, 1936 . . . Presented in cooperation with police and federal law enforcement departments throughout the United States, "Gangbusters" brings listeners real police case histories . . . It takes a lot of gruelling research to put on a program as this . . . Close working contact is maintained with newspaper editors, police reporters and officers and other law enforcement bureaus.

Once all available information is assembled on a specific case the actual material is turned over to writers . . . After that, the producers and members of the "Gangbusters" executive staff work closely together to weld an authentic air history of a case . . . The famed "clues" heard at the end of each broadcast are assembled just before air time . . . The number of criminals apprehended through the program runs into the hundreds . . . Small wonder then, that the show has won wide-spread recognition as an aid in preventing crime.

IDOL CHATTER

British Broadcasting Corporation cut "Sugarbush" from programs aired to factories . . . South African time features fancy handclapping and, English workers have been joining the patter . . . Results in weaving mills have been disastrous . . . Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis drew over a half million dollars into the box office on their tour of one-nighters . . . Rita Hayworth will play Sadie Thompson in the musical version of "Rain" . . . Sir Ralph Richardson is set to do the Reverend Davidson role . . . Esther Williams follows "Easy to Love" with "Easy to Wed" which makes sense.

Hollywood is really saving these days . . . One of the dance numbers Valerie Bettis did for "Love Song" was cut out of the pix but it will be fitted into another musical . . . Robert Alda will produce and star in the Broadway musical, "Herald Square" . . . First dramatic role for Gene Nelson will be in "Don't Cry, Baby."

Newly Harvested Seed Must Have Careful Attention

Each year Alabama farmers lose or damage a large part of their seed crop due to improper handling after harvest. Newly harvested seed are high in moisture and will heat if proper attention is not given them. Heating destroys or lowers seed germination, either making them worthless or low in quality

Make Plans Now For Summer's Extra Grazing

It isn't too early to make plans for grazing to use this summer in periods when the clover-grass permanent pasture may not be furnishing enough grazing.

A farmer who has enough sericea, alfalfa, kudzu, or Johnson grass will not have to worry about other supplementary grazing crops. Otherwise, the farmer needs to plant crops such as sudan grass or cattail millet. If the grazing is for hogs, soybeans are best.

NIGHTMARE AND REALITY

By Tony Grabo

JIM waited tensely, he was huddled in a corner of the small room. His eyes were large, and now, filled with fearful excitement. His nerves were taut, and he scarcely dared to breathe. Through the frame of the open window, the moon cast a pale, oblique patch of light onto the center of the floor. The ethereal luminescence made everything seem illusive, distorted.

Opposite him—on the other side of the patch of light—crouched a tiger! He was on his haunches, staring at him with unblinking, yellow-green eyes. The stripes on his body were jet-black with a velvety sheen to them, which contrasted sharply against the yellowish background of his coat.

His tail formed a half-loop behind him, while he crouched with his lithe body almost touching the floor. His shoulders were hunched and paws that were large, and thickly padded, were drawn up under him in a position ready to spring! His stance didn't change; he lurked there with eyes that reflected an iridescent light; staring—unblinking.

And there, just a few feet from him—stood a lion! Not preparing to do battle with the tiger, but staring—staring at him! Two savage animals—hereditary enemies—were now unmindful of each other, glaring at their common enemy—man.

The lion's tawny frame was planted solidly on stocky legs. The tufted fetlocks grew in profusion and almost covered his huge paws. His massive head was held high, allowing the darker mane to flow freely from it. He was the lord; undisputed king of the jungle! Fearless of man or beast!

His limpid eyes scarcely veiled the ferocity contained within him. The tip of his tail lay on the floor with the mane at the end seemingly unattached, resembling an outgrowth of vegetation. He stood there, eyes glowing ominously; foreboding, not moving.

Jim glanced briefly out the rectangular square of light. Now, the night sounds began to creep into the room. All the little noises associated with night were grossly exaggerated. The wind stirred the leaves gently as it passed through the trees, the clouds made patterns against the moon, and the chirping and cricketing of small insects filled the square of the window and ricocheted around from wall to wall.

He wished he had obeyed his mother and stayed in bed like she told him to. Maybe this never would have happened. Everything was out of control now, it had gone too far.

What was that? A noise—by the door. Slowly—ever so slowly, it began to open. The sliver of light from the other room gradually expanded until it silhouetted someone standing there.

"Danny!"

Gladness blotted out fantasy as he recognized his mother's voice and rushed into her arms, unmindful of the scolding he would get.

"How many times must I tell you not to play with those stuffed animals after you're put to bed? You know they'll cause you to have nightmares if you play with them in the dark!"

This civil functions bill includes approximately $5 million for the Demopolis Lock and Dam, an important link of the Warrior-Tombigbee Waterway system. No funds were included for new construction, but during the discussion of the bill, I made a statement to the members of the House in which I emphasized the necessity of an early start on the proposed Warrior Lock and Dam. This dam will replace Locks 8 and 9 which are reported by the Corps of Engineers to be in critical condition.

The two big appropriations bills just passed by the House—the one for labor, health, welfare and education and the one for civil functions—represent a substantial reduction in expenditures on the part of the House and are significant steps in the direction of economy in our federal government.

Side-Dressing Of Cotton Will Pay On Most Soils

Auburn, Ala.—A side-dressing of nitrogen will increase cotton yields on most Alabama soils.

An exception is the heavy, slow leaching soils that had sufficient nitrogen applied at planting or on which a good winter legume crop was turned in the spring.

Generally the fertilizer applied at planting plus side-dressing should amount to about 60 pounds of nitrogen per acre on most soils. Growers who used 500 pounds of 4-10-7 at planting, supplied only 20 pounds of nitrogen. Therefore, to supply the additional 40 pounds of nitrogen they can profitably side-dress with 250 pounds of nitrate of soda or 125 pounds of ammonium nitrate or equal nitrogen from other sources.

Side-dressing should be applied at the first plowing after chopping, or as soon as fields are relatively free of grass. It is best to plow side-dressing under so that the material will be in moist soil in case of dry weather. If heavy rain follows, less will be lost in run-off water.

If anhydrous ammonia is used, it should be applied five to six inches deep and the field left unplowed for at least three days.

For egg beaters or other kitchen utensils having moving parts, glycerin makes an excellent lubricant. Unlike oil, it will not spoil the taste of food if mixed with it by accident. The glycerin can be applied with a medicine dropper.

STATE OFFICIAL PREDICTS WIN FOR CHIROPRACTORS

Montgomery, Ala.—Chiropractors from Alabama and other Southern States returned to their homes this week after their annual convention in Montgomery, where they heard encouraging reports on the profession's progress.

Alabama Adjutant General Walter, J. ("Crack") Hanna told the doctors that the regimental combat team he commanded during World War II had the "best record of any such team in the American Army in suffering the fewest casualties and inflicting the most on the enemy," and attributed the record to the fact that one of the officers of the regiment was a chiropractor "who kept me in shape so I could really make soldiers out of my men." Hanna declared, "We are going to pass this law if it takes 99 years."

The military official was referring to House Bill 311, introduced by Rep. Henry Romine, Lauderdale County. The bill would legalize and license chiropractic in Alabama. At the present time Alabama is one of only five states which have no chiropractic licensing law.

During the three day combined convention of the Alabama State and all Southern Chiropractic Associations, the sessions were addressed by Dr. Vinton F. Logan, president of the Logan Basic College of Chiropractic; Dr. Herbert C. Hender, Dean of the Palmer School of Chiropractic; Dr. Theo Vladeff, president of the National Council of Roentgenologists, and other nationally recognized leaders.

Since very little water can be used in a double boiler, it sometimes boils away without warning. You can avoid this by placing a jar lid in the water compartment. When the water gets low, the lid will rattle.

Move Hens

Yearling hens should be profitable for the next several months. Move these hens to range shelters or other temporary quarters when pullets are ready for the laying house. Turn all night lights on the hens when they are moved. Use one 15-watt bulb per 40 hens. Suspend lights to shine on the roosting area. Cull hens closely when moved. Remove all birds as they molt and go out of production.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

If food supplies are low in the home freezer, now may be a good time to defrost and wash the freezer, take inventory and repack, placing the oldest foods on top to use up first.

Fight Insects

Now is the time to practically eliminate mosquitoes, horn flies, lice, and ticks in Alabama by spraying beef cattle herds and outbuildings. Spraying is more important than ever before because there are Texas fever ticks in Florida, and we are trucking many cattle from Florida to Alabama.

Don't Give Up

Alfalfa Is A Good Crop; Every Farmer Needs It

IF you're a farmer—large, small, or medium size—who raises dairy cows, beef cows, hogs, or poultry you need alfalfa.

It will help you get top production from your livestock. And, what's more, you probably have some land that will grow the crop.

If you have good well drained soil and follow methods of establishing and maintaining developed by the Experiment Station, chances are you'll have good luck with alfalfa, says D. R. Harbor, API Extension agronomist.

The soil should be fertile and well drained, both on the surface and underneath.

After selecting soil to which it is adapted, Harbor lists the points below as some of the most important production practices for alfalfa:

1. Prepare a good seedbed. Seedbed preparation for alfalfa should begin in late June or early July by breaking the land. The land should then be lightly disked often enough to completely control grass and weeds until time to plant.

2. Use plenty of lime. It is best to have a soil test made to determine accurate lime and fertilizer needs. Be sure to use plenty of lime evenly spread on the land a month or more ahead of planting.

3. Use a recommended variety. Varieties that have proved satisfactory for Alabama include Kansas, Texas, and Oklahoma common, Buffalo, Atlantic, Williamsburg, and Narragansett. Stick to these varieties. Be sure to use certified seed.

4. Fertilize according to recommendations. This means adequate use of phosphate, potash, and boron. Alfalfa's potash requirement is high.

5. Plant plenty of seed on time. On each acre, use 25 pounds of certified seed of 90 per cent germination. In North Alabama, seed between Aug. 15 and Sept. 15; in South Alabama, between Sept. 15 and Oct. 15.

6. Do a good job of planting. This means freshening the seedbed lightly with a section harrow ahead of planting. Broadcast or drill the seed and follow with a cultipacker or roller.

7. Do not graze alfalfa until after Jan. 1 following seeding, as overgrazing quickly destroys the stand.

Harbor advises you to contact your county agent for more details about the crop.

After strawberry harvest is completed if the patch is to be kept another year, thin the plants by barring off each side of the row or running a scooter down the center of the row. Then chop out plants to the width of a cotton chopping hoe. Apply 500 pounds of 6-8-4 fertilizer per acre and work the soil back to the row.

This Month Is Dairy Month

Milk, Nature's most perfect food, is plentiful and very healthful. That's why Alabama's 1600 dairymen are out to let folks know about it. They have proclaimed June as Dairy Month and are using their slogan, "Dairy foods, Nature's goodness at its best," to emphasize the importance of dairy foods in the human diet.

In each county throughout Alabama, a publicity chairman has been elected to help spread the good dairy news. This will be done by plastering automobile bumpers with stickers, giving silver dollars to cafe waitresses who suggest dairy foods as a tasty meal to certain dairy industry personnel, circulating two-dollar bills by producers which they received as payment for their milk in June, and releasing news items over press and radio. Through the highly publicized program dairymen hope to increase the consumption of milk in this state and over the nation.

Good Seed Care Means Extra Dollars

WILL you get the top dollar for your seed crop?

Ralph R. Jones, API Extension seed specialist, says many farmers have been losing a large part of their seed each year due to heating. He warns that newly harvested seed have lots of moisture in them and will spoil if not given proper attention. Heating causes germination to be lowered, thus reducing the quality of the seed.

The seed expert said to prevent heating, follow these steps: (1) Spread newly harvested seed in thin layers in a dry, well ventilated building and stir them several times each day until they are thoroughly dry, or (2) fill bags only half full of seed and leave them outside on a dry surface during clear, sunny weather, or (3) if large volumes of seed are to be dried, place them in bins and force air or heat through them to speed up the curing process.

Then, Jones says, don't store seed in bulk until the moisture content has been reduced to around 12 per cent.

Do not try to irrigate more acres than your system was designed to handle. By stretching your system, you do a half-way job of irrigating. You will get much better results by putting plenty of water on the acreage you irrigate.

JUST MIXING A SNACK — Cookie-baking is just as simple as one, two, three —after you've had some experience. At least that's the way Sue Watson of the Livingston 4-H Club feels about it. After five years of whipping up tasty dishes, she will be trying hard to win the Sumter County baking contest this year. Sue, who has worked with poultry and beef cattle, has also done well with these projects. She is the 14-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Watson of Geiger.

A Good Buy

Beef's Plentiful And Very Nutritious

NOW is a good time for homemakers to star pot roasts, Swiss steaks, and other savory beef dishes in their menus, says Mary Hulsey, API Extension food specialist.

Cuts of chuck, rump, round, and short ribs are suited to braising, which brings out the hearty flavor and gives a rich brown color to the meat and the drippings for gravy. The specialist offers the following suggestions for nutritious, appetizing beef dishes.

To braise: First brown the meat in a small amount of fat, then cook in a covered pan, with or without added liquid. For the best flavor, the quantity of added liquid should be kept to a minimum. Keep the heat low, either on top of the range, or in the oven. Cover the meat, and cook slowly until well done.

Select 4 to 5 pounds of beef—chuck, rump, or round. Rub the meat with salt and pepper, and flour if desired. Brown it on all sides in a little hot fat. Use a deep, heavy pan with a cover. Slip a low rack under the meat to keep it from sticking to the pan. Add one-half cup of water, and cover the pan closely.

Cook slowly (over low heat) until done—about 3 hours. Add more water as needed. Add vegetables—potatoes, onions, and whole carrots—near the end of cooking, from an hour to a half hour before the meat is done, depending on size of vegetable pieces. Make gravy with remaining liquid.

Here's a quick method for making gravy, suggested by the specialist: estimate the amount of fat and liquid in the cooking pan. (If drippings seem very fat, skim off some of the fat.) Add enough liquid to make the quantity of gravy desired. Measure 1 to 2 tablespoons flour for each cup of gravy. Blend flour with a little cold water. Stir slowly into the hot liquid and cook over very low heat, stirring constantly until thickened. Cook a little longer, stirring occasionally. Add salt and other desired seasoning.

Be sure to have some supplementary summer grazing crops. Sudan grass and cattail millet are good for this purpose. Johnson grass stands may also be fertilized for extra summer grazing. Thicken up partial stands by seeding.

Soybeans for oil are a promising crop in many areas. They are a big cash crop in Gulf Coast areas and Jackson County. Grow Ogden or a selection of Ogden. Plant on good land, preferably after winter grazing, winter legumes, or early truck crops.

FAST GROWING BUSINESS—W. J. Thompson of Aliceville, a market hog raiser for 20 years, is interested in a different angle to the swine business now since beginning his purebred program last year. He has 106 pigs that were farrowed from 13 sows this spring. They will be sold for breeding stock and used by him for herd replacements. Another 53 crossbred feeder pigs were raised and sold for market hogs this spring by Thompson. He has 100 acres of winter grazing crops that got his hogs off to an early start this spring and they'll be finished out on 40 acres of U. S. 13 hogging corn. Thompson also grows 250 acres of corn that is put in the crib and hand fed to his hogs during winter.

DIRECTOR, API EXTENSION SERVICE

ONE reason for writing this is to say that we men need to pay more attention to our food. We're too inclined to let the women do all the studying and worrying about our meals.

We are largely what we eat. And if the wrong kind of food is eaten, we impair our health and may become ill. Then it's also possible to cause trouble by eating too much or too little.

The average person eats his weight in food every 6 to 8 weeks, or about 7 times a year. Mary Hulsey, Extension specialist in foods and nutrition, thinks of the body as a marvelous machine. She adds: balanced food of the right kind is essential to keeping it running smoothly.

Miss Hulsey named seven basic rules to guide each person in supplying all food needs. They are:

1. Milk: 1 quart a day per child and 1 pint a day per adult.
2. Leafy, green, and yellow vegetables (such as turnip greens, mustard, kale, collards, cabbage, all other greens, green beans, asparagus, carrots, squash, rutabagas, yellow corn), one serving of at least one daily.
3. Tomatoes, orange or grapefruit, or raw cabbage: one serving of one daily.
4. Potatoes, other vegetables, fruits: two servings of one or two daily.
5. Meat, poultry, fish, eggs: one to two servings daily. (Dried beans and peas may be substituted at times for either of these.)
6. Bread and whole grain cereals: some each day.
7. Butter or margarine: some each day.

The average working man should eat about the following amounts per week: 3½-4 pounds of leafy, green, and yellow vegetables; 2½-3½ pounds of citrus fruits and tomatoes; 3-5 pounds of Irish potatoes or sweetpotatoes; 3-4 pounds of other vegetables and fruits; 5 quarts of milk, cheese, or ice cream; 3-3½ pounds of meat, poultry or fish; 6-7 eggs, and 4 ounces of dried beans, dried peas, or nuts.

The exact amount of food a person needs each day depends on his or her age and size and the type of activity in which he or she is engaged. For example, a man of average size who is a desk worker with no strenuous sport needs less food than a fast-growing and active teen-ager, either boy or girl.

At any age it's important for a person to eat these protective foods daily: milk, lean meats, eggs, fruits and vegetables.

As one passes middle age physical activity is usually slowed down and there is less need for high calorie foods such as cereals, breads, rich desserts and fats, including fried meats and gravies.

Overweight at this age can be an alarming health hazard. Ills such as high blood pressure and heart and kidney ailments are more common among overweights than they are in normal or underweight people.

Overweight people should avoid high calorie foods like the fat on meat, cooking fat, salad oil, fried foods, gravies, rich sauces, nuts, pastries, cakes, cookies, rich desserts, candies, jellies and jams.

When people eat a variety of foods, either raw or properly cooked, they are almost sure to get sufficient vitamins which is very important. If, however, additional vitamins are needed, they should be taken under a doctor's direction and not by advertising ballyhoo.

Working Together Farmers Solve Problem

FARMERS of the Blue Springs community in Covington County, about 30 families in all, have joined hands in a battle to wipe out their biggest swine killer—hog cholera.

War on this dreaded disease was declared at the club's April meeting when County Agent R. E. Martin and Dr. J. B. Taylor, assistant state veterinarian, met with the group to assist them in mapping plans for a cholera control program.

Dr. Taylor emphasized vaccination against the disease as being the most important step in having a cholera-free community. Then he went on to say that in case of an outbreak the disease should be properly and promptly diagnosed and all sick animals destroyed.

Club members will use the state's free serum program in vaccinating their pigs. The group elected Windham Weeks, a local farmer, as an administrator of the drug in Blue Springs. He will be trained by the state veterinarian. Assisting Weeks will be seven other farmers in the area, who will gather data on the number of hogs to be treated. They will then report their findings to Weeks, who can then order sufficient serum for carrying out the program.

George Sargent, API Extension community improvement specialist, who met with the group, was high in his praise for the farmers' efforts in solving a common community problem. He reminded them that only through cooperation could such problems be solved.

Sargent then recalled how the same group of people met and found an answer to a like problem 14 years ago—the organization of a one-variety cotton improvement program. They were rewarded by getting free cotton classing service available to all farmers in Covington County.

Experts at Iowa State Agricultural College —men who guess and get paid for it and who are connected with the Extension Service in the biggest hog growing state in the world—say that top market hogs should reach $22 to $24 per hundred weight at Chicago in July and August.

MANY HOURS HERE—To many people paintings on china may go unnoticed, but to Mrs. W. G. McLendon, president of the Helena Home Demonstration Club, it represents real skill and hours of work. The Shelby County housewife points out to County Agent A. A. Lauderdale a few of the pieces painted by her. Painting, a hobby with Mrs. McLendon, is done only on imported china. She uses a special paint to make the design, then allows it to dry. When dry, the article is placed in an oven and heated to 1600 degrees to bake the paint into the china. Mrs. McLendon says she doesn't know what her china is worth because she doesn't sell it. However, if you're a special friend, you may get one of her products as a Christmas gift.

On Second Thought

Valuable Acres Are Reclaimed By Many Farmers

SOME farmers are just now realizing that some of their best acres have been going to waste for years. In most cases, they discover these areas can be put into profitable use much cheaper than it would cost to buy additional crop and pasture land.

1. MORE ACRES ADDED—Bob Alman, right, of Gilbertown in Choctaw County solved his grazing shortage by taking in more land along a creek that runs through his farm. The land was cleared by cutting bushes and briars with axes and a rotary mower. Large trees were killed by girdling. Alman explains to County Agent Matthew Sexton that the cost of clearing and ditching the land was only $20 per acre.

2. RUN-OFF PROBLEM SOLVED—Drainage of low land on Bob Alman's farm near Gilbertown was solved by cutting a ditch to the creek. He used a dirt slip attached to his farm tractor to do the job on dry soil while dynamite was used on the marshy land. Alman, right, tells M. D. Qureshi of Pakistan the ditch here was made by blasting with dynamite. The Choctaw County farmer estimates land taken in on his farm is worth at least $60 per acre.

Such was the case with Bob Alman of Choctaw County who needed more pasture last year to provide grazing for his beef herd. Like most other farmers, his first thought was to buy extra land. But after looking around, he found there wasn't any nearby land for sale. So to supply the needed acreage, he had to develop some of his swampland along a creek.

The idle land that was to provide extra pasture was covered in trees and bushes. That meant many hours of hard work would have to be spent before it was ready to plant. But the Choctaw farmer was not one to be discouraged easily, and he began cutting the briars and small bushes with axes and a rotary mower. The large trees were deadened by girdling and were left standing.

Another problem to be taken care of was drainage of small ponds on the area. That was solved by using a slip behind the farm tractor and cutting a ditch to the creek bed. The dirt taken from the ditch was used to fill in low places in the field.

The next step was to get the land into condition for planting. This was done by disking. After preparing the land, an application of 1000 pounds of basic slag and 100 pounds of potash was put on each acre. The low land was then seeded to caley peas, white dutch clover, and dallis grass; the higher area was planted in crimson clover and dallis grass. (Bob says caley peas do not affect the growth of his clover.)

The total clearing cost of the land was $20 per acre which, according to Alman, is cheaper than it could have been done with heavy machinery. He says this has given the farm workers a job when they would have otherwise been idle.

County Agent Matthew Sexton says this is a practical way for farmers to clear their land because it can be done on any size farm. Too, it uses labor during slack periods.

There will be more work to the clearing operation when the large trees start dying. But, points out Alman, the reclaimed land is worth $60 per acre, while only one-third that much has been spent on it.

Recreation Center Purchased For Limestone Youth

HOME demonstration clubs in Limestone County are looking out for their young folks. They recently purchased a camp site on the Tennessee River for use by any organized group in the county.

The Limestone County Recreation Center, which is being paid for through donations, will provide sleeping quarters and cooking facilities for about 25 youngsters at present. Plans are to increase its size so that larger groups can enjoy the clubhouse. Youngsters attending camp can enjoy swimming in the nearby Tennessee River.

No charge will be made for use of the center.

Trustees for the camp are Mrs. Thomas McDale, Mrs. J. V. Rudder, and Mrs. W. S. Lamon.

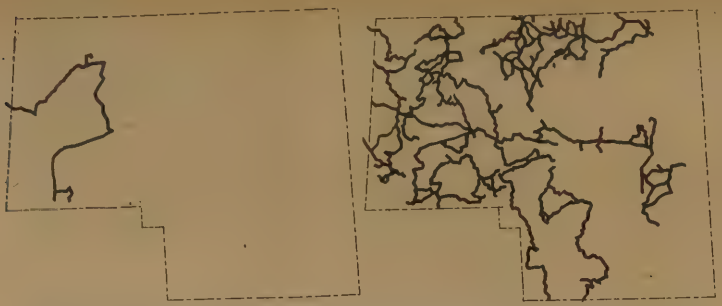
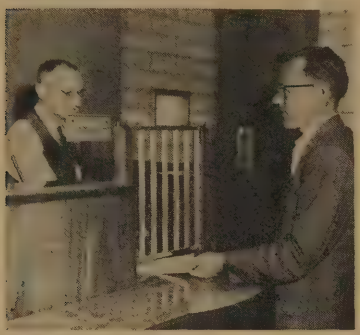
Many farmers wait too long to cut sericea for hay. It should be cut when 10 to 12 inches in height. When cutting is delayed beyond this stage, the stems are woody and tough and the leaves shatter badly.

ANOTHER REASON—Hopes of winning the Bibb County lamp wiring contest encouraged the Sansing boys to enter this project. But they had another important reason in mind too: They wanted a reading lamp built according to their own plan. Clay Sansing, left, and his twin brother, Ray, used almost identical patterns, while their cousin, Donny, thought up a different idea. For only $3.15 each, they have made lamps that would have cost much more at a store. All boys are members of the Woodstock 4-H Club. The trio of Sansings are 13 years old and have been in the 4-H work for four years. They have carried projects in corn, poultry, beef calves, and forestry.



MANY WERE ADDED—Only 452 pounds of milk were picked up on the 135-mile Marion County milk route the first day back in 1950. But that story has changed: Last year 421 families shipped over five million pounds of grade A milk, which brought them over a quarter-million dollars. This picture tells a story of how the original route has branched out into nearly all sections of the county and now provides jobs for a dozen truck drivers.



MORE SAVINGS—J. B. Hodges, left, cashier of the local bank in Hamilton, says many farmers like W. A. Gibby, with whom he is talking, have increased their agricultural income and bank accounts since they started producing milk. He said it's the best thing that's happened to farmers since the boll weevil.

A Thriving Business

Dairying Raises Marion County's Farm Income

A land of milk and money! That's the Marion County farmer's version of an old familiar saying.

In the early morning hours of January 1, 1950, an even dozen farmers started a project that became a quarter-million dollar business two years later. They started the first grade A milk route in Marion County, and within six months 222 farm families were shipping milk by six trucks to Tupelo, Miss. The whole thing was just a matter of cooperation from then on.

How did such a project get started? Many farmers, along with County Agent John Yarbrough and other businessmen in the county's three incorporated towns, realized the need for another crop that would supplement cotton income. They studied the question jointly, and dairying seemed to be their most logical answer. It was the cheapest enterprise in which farmers could get started; they already had some of the state's best dairy cows on their farms.

W. O. Lewis of Detroit drove his truck 135 miles that first morning to pick up 462 pounds of milk, not enough to pay the cost of hauling even if the producers had given it to him. But he, like many others in Marion County, had faith in the future of the project and kept working.

The big problem of making a route profitable for the truck owner until he was able to pick up enough milk to make it pay its own way called for more cooperation. It was then the businessmen really gave their support. They subsidized the route men up to eight cents per mile until proceeds from milk hauling reached that figure. This was necessary for two years; after then all routes were profitable.

The dairy program is set up on a sound basis, says County Agent John Yarbrough. Milk is being used only to supplement cotton income. Not more than 25 of the present 421 shippers have quit growing cotton since they became dairymen. And none of the producers are milking more than 15 cows.

The production per cow is high, which accounts for the $48 milk sales per farm averaged by dairymen last January.

One of the most remarkable things about Marion's dairy business is that only 50 cows have been shipped in since the project began. High quality cows that were in the county have been bred to good bulls to increase production in practically all herds.

The county's supply of bulls has been raised by 4-H Club members on halves with large commercial dairies. Some cows have been bred artificially from bulls kept in a commercial stud at Hamilton.

"Most of the milk is produced on sericea grazing and hay," says Yarbrough. "And that's a natural for our farmers, for they can grow the crop very easily," he adds.

What has the milk business meant to the farmers financially? J. B. Hodges, cashier of the local bank says, "It's the best thing that's happened since the boll weevil." He went on to say that regular checks received by farm people have helped them finance their farm operation without having to come back to the bank for "advances" during the year. It has made them more independent and has improved their outlook on life.

In addition to income received by the milk producers, people in the county are some $7000 better off because of money paid to haulers. Their business has grown to such an encouraging figure that they are always talking to their neighbors and insisting that they do a better dairying job. (They receive more money from the plant as their load of milk increases.)

Most of the farmers agree that their dairy program has meant much to them, and they're looking for something else that will pay off as well as milking cows.

There have been unconfirmed reports of screwworms south of Highway 80 already this year. Make sure you have on hand some form of EQ335 to use at the first sight of these pests.

This Month on the Farm

by API EXTENSION SPECIALISTS

MOW weeds and bushes in the permanent pasture. Don't let them get a start, for they rob your pasture of fertilizer and moisture.

Watch your permanent pasture, and don't overgraze. Use your supplementary grazing crops, such as sericea, to help out.

LAY-BY your corn early. Don't cut your yields by plowing too much, too late, and too deep. Most high yields have been made on land that was cultivated only two or three times.

SIDE-DRESS cotton at first plowing after chopping. If 500 to 600 pounds of 4-10-7 per acre were put under cotton, side-dress with 225 pounds of nitrate of soda or 110 pounds of ammonium nitrate (or equal nitrogen from other sources). If 400 to 500 pounds of 4-12-12 were used, side-dress with 250 pounds of nitrate of soda or 125 pounds of ammonium nitrate.

Farmers on Sand Mountain who planted on time may profitably side-dress each acre with 300 pounds of nitrate of soda, 150 pounds of ammonium nitrate, or equal nitrogen from other sources.

On the less productive red land or the gray land of the Tennessee Valley, farmers who used 600 pounds of 6-8-4 or 6-8-8 per acre under cotton may profitably side-dress with 100 pounds of nitrate of soda or equal nitrogen from other sources.

MARKET hog growers who don't have enough corn planted to balance their hog crop and who have the acreage available, should plant grain sorghum the latter half of June. Experiment Station results have proved that it's almost as good as corn—bushel for bushel—for feeding to hogs. About 7 bushels, properly supplemented, will produce 100 pounds of walking hog meat. See your county agent for information on recommended varieties, planting dates, and amount of seed to plant per acre.

DO you plan to drain some of your wet acres this year? The season for doing this work with machinery is fast approaching, and plans should be made now to get it done during the summer and fall. Also plan for ditches that are to be blasted next fall and winter so that the work may be laid out while it's dry.

THE acreage of sweetpotatoes can still be expanded by full use of vine cuttings from early set slips. Individual farmers might either sell cuttings if they have a surplus or buy from neighbors if they need more. Experimental work has shown that one-half of the vines may be removed for cuttings without seriously affecting yields.

These cuttings should be set in the first half of June, not later than the 20th if satisfactory yields are to be made. Well prepared land, with fertilizer applied 10 days to 2 weeks before setting, will give best results.

A starter solution made by dissolving 1 pound of 4-10-7 or ¼ pound of nitrate of soda in 5 gallons of water will help young plants. Use ½ pint to each plant.

NOT LIKE THE BEGINNING—Bobby Sherer, a student at Walker Junior College, looks over the herd of purebred Shorthorn cattle that have replaced a grade cow herd started on the Sherer farm back in 1940. These cows are part of a herd of 20 brood cows bought out of top herds in Florida, Mississippi, Tennessee, and Michigan when the registered herd was begun.

MAKES SLEEK, FAT CATTLE—The purebred Shorthorn herd of cattle on the J. R. and Bobby Sherer farm near Jasper is well fed on this field of white dutch clover, dallis grass, orchard grass, and Kentucky bluegrass. Bobby, left, tells J. C. Bullington, county agent, another field of 25 acres of crimson clover and oats are used for grazing crops during winter.

ANOTHER REGULAR CHORE—Bobby Sherer, already charged with many of the responsibilities of looking after a herd of purebred Shorthorn cattle, recently had another chore added to his duties. He and his father, J. R. Sherer, of Jasper, went into the broiler business, and Bobby will do much of the work with the birds. The new concrete block broiler house, 210 by 40 feet, is now filled to capacity with 12,000 New Hampshire chicks.

A Real Team

Father-Son Partnership Continues To Grow

THE old adage, "You have to crawl before you can walk," certainly holds true in the cattle business.

At least that's the opinion of J. R. and Bobby Sherer, father-son purebred Shorthorn breeders in Walker County.

They started in the grade beef cattle business back in 1940. Since that time they have been gradually replacing grade cows with purebreds. Last year the final grade cow was sold, and in the herd are 20 purebred brood cows and a herd sire, J. S. Royal Debonaire, of the Royal Leader family, recognized as among the best of the Shorthorns.

The Sherers' brood cows, which were bought out of top herds in Florida, Mississippi, Tennessee, and Michigan, are grazed on 55 acres of white dutch clover, dallis grass, orchard grass, and Kentucky bluegrass during summer, along with 25 acres of crimson clover and oats in winter. The oat crop serves a double purpose—in addition to grazing, grain is combined and used to creep feed their calves.

On their 265-acre farm the Sherers also grow 25 acres of corn that's used for cow feed. Last winter they fed 20 tons of hay and about 100 bushels of corn to their beef animals. The extra corn was sold this spring. In spite of the extremely dry weather of the past year, they made 1500 bushels of corn on 48 acres. Although this corn has been used mainly as cow feed in past years, a new farm enterprise was started this year which will make this crop more valuable than ever: It will be fed to broilers.

A new concrete block house, 210 by 40 feet, was filled to capacity with 12,000 birds this spring. Taking care of the chickens is a chore that is well attended to by Bobby, who already does a good job looking after the registered cattle herd.

Bobby, now a student at Walker Junior College, works on the farm in the afternoon, Saturdays, and summers. He plans to attend an agricultural college when he finishes his junior college course this spring. Then his plans are to return to the farm and take up where he leaves off with the cattle herd and chicken flock.

EASTER BASKET SALE—For the past four years girls in the 4-H Club at Semmes High School in Mobile County have found an unusual market for their eggs at Easter. The eggs were dyed and placed in attractive little baskets and sold to schoolmates at a handsome profit. Money made from this project was used by the club in observance of Rural Life Sunday.

Sericea Plus Millet-Sudan Pasture Equal To Alfalfa For Dairy Cows

DAIRY cows grazing sericea at night and millet-Sudan grass during the day produced approximately the same amount of milk as a similar group of dairy cows grazing alfalfa day and night in a test at the API Experiment Station in 1952. However, dairy cows confined to sericea alone produced only 79 per cent as much milk as the group grazing alfalfa.

Many studies have indicated that the milk-producing qualities of sericea hay are inferior to that of other legume hays. Nevertheless, a recent survey revealed that sericea is the basic forage (pasture and hay) on more than 50 per cent of the dairy farms in Alabama.

The grazing experiment was conducted last summer to study the value of sericea pasture for milk production. Similar groups of dairy cows were used with each forage system. Milk produced per cow from each of the feeding systems studied were compared with that from alfalfa. Systems studied included: (1) grazing irrigated sericea; (2) sericea grazing supplemented with oat-vetch hay, and (3) grazing millet-Sudan grass pasture during the day and sericea pasture at night.

Also the forage system that provided millet-Sudan grass for day grazing and sericea for night grazing was superior to both irrigated and non-irrigated sericea and to non-irrigated sericea supplemented with oat-vetch hay.

Irrigation increased the carrying capacity of sericea, but the quality of the grazing as measured by the level of the milk production per cow was not increased. In fact, cows on the irrigated sericea produced less milk per animal than those grazing the non-irrigated sericea. During the most severe part of the drouth period, cows receiving the oat-vetch hay as a supplement to sericea pasture maintained a slightly higher lever of milk production than cows grazing sericea day and night without a supplement. But the additional production was not sufficient to make the practice pay.

Results show that in a year of severe drouth (1) sericea pasture may be used in a dairy program without lowering milk production, provided the cows also have access to high quality grazing crops such as millet or Sudan grass during part of the day; (2) sericea is inferior to alfalfa as a grazing crop, and (3) irrigation of sericea and feeding of oat-vetch hay as a supplement to sericea pasture were not profitable.

Along The Way

Enough milk is especially important for strong bones and good teeth. If a child gets too little milk, chances are good that its bones will not get enough calcium. This may cause the bones to be too little or even malformed.

Older people who are deficient in calcium may have brittle bones that break easily and mend slowly. Whether young or old, it's a good thing for the diet to be calcium-high—milk meets this requirement.

The food industry of this nation is our biggest business. Last year the people of the United States spent $65,000,000,000 for food which was 27% of their income after taxes. It averaged $420 per person.

Broilers, one of the fastest growing farm enterprises in Autauga County, are getting a welcome from non-farm families too. They have time to care for the birds after work in the afternoons, thus adding several dollars to their annual incomes. One such chicken fancier is L. C. Taylor of Deatsville Rt. 1 who is an employee at the Prattville Post Office.

Here Taylor, left, and Assistant County Agent H. S. Morrow look over a plank that will be used in the construction of a 32 x 72-foot broiler house going up on Taylor's place.

Take Good Care Of Your Coastal Bermuda

COASTAL bermuda is one of Alabama's most promising new pasture and hay crops, especially for the Coastal Plains area. That's why many thousands of stolons have been set this year.

If you have set this grass, be sure to cultivate it some to control weeds and grass. But do not disturb the runners. By all means, use plenty of nitrogen for top dressing.

You can set coastal bermuda during summer when there's plenty of moisture. Have land ready so that it can be planted quickly after rains. If you wait until the rains come before preparing the land, you may lose too much moisture before the grass can get established.

Fruitworm on tomatoes can be effectively controlled with TDE (DDD) or methoxychlor. The insecticides may be used as five per cent dusts or at the rate of 4 pounds of 50 per cent wettable powder per 100 gallons of spray. Treatments should be applied at weekly intervals beginning when the plants start to bloom.

Be Ready

Control Cotton Insects; Follow These Steps

NOW that time for cotton insects to start their damage isn't too far off, farmers should know what it takes to keep them under control.

W. A. Ruffin, API Extension entomologist, says dusts that contain 5 per cent DDT plus 2.5 per cent aldrin, or 1.5 per cent dieldrin, or 2.5 per cent heptachlor, will control all major cotton pests except aphids and spider mites when used at the rate of 10 to 15 pounds per acre. Dusts that contain 3 per cent gamma of BHC and 5 per cent DDT, or calcium arsenate used in alternate applications with BHC-DDT, or 20 per cent toxaphene will control all insects except spider mites. Apply these materials at the rate of 10 to 15 pounds per acre, except calcium arsenate, of which 7 to 10 pounds per acre are needed.

Ruffin says that since spider mites are not commonly found on cotton in Alabama, sulphur is not recommended in any of these formulations. If spider mites do occur in damaging numbers, dust cotton with 3 per cent aramite, 1 per cent EPN, or 1 per cent parathion. Apply 20 to 25 pounds per acre every 4 days until mites are stopped. Usually two applications will do the job.

Thrips occasionally damage the stand of cotton in some fields. Any of the recommended dusts will control thrips except calcium arsenate. Apply dust at the rate of 5 to 7 pounds per acre. Repeat the treatment at 5-day intervals until pests are controlled.

Aphids may occur in damaging numbers in untreated or improperly treated fields. Apply the 3-5 mixture of BHC-DDT every 5 days at the rate of 15 to 20 pounds per acre until the insects are controlled.

Ruffin adds that bollworms often cause serious damage in fields of cotton that have been improperly treated with insecticides. Fields treated regularly at 5-day intervals with recommended materials ordinarily will not be damaged by worms. "However," said he, "in fields where bollworms do build up, apply 10 per cent DDT at the rate of 15 to 20 pounds per acre. Dust every 4 or 5 days until the worms are stopped."

All materials recommended here are equally effective when used either as a spray or dust except calcium arsenate and those recommended for spider mites.

The most important thing for farmers to remember is that the insects, not cotton, are poisoned. Therefore, do not treat until the plants are fruiting freely, unless there is danger of the insects damaging the stand.

When plants have 10 or more squares big enough for weevils to puncture, examine each field weekly. Pick 100 or more good sized green squares at random by walking diagonally across the field. If 15 to 25 per cent of these squares are punctured, it is time to start fighting boll weevils. Once control measures are started, it is most important that cotton be treated every 5 days—treating once a week will not do the job. Put on three applications, then wait a week, or not more than 10 days, and take square samples again from every field. If the infestation is still around 25 per cent, treat three more times at 5-day intervals. When cotton plants are blooming in the top and on ends of limbs and migratory weevils are in the blooms, poison three or four times at 4-day intervals to protect the top crop of bolls from insect damage.

Feed pullets a full ration and bring them into the laying house in top condition this summer. Early eggs will be valuable this year.

Research Results

in brief from A.P.I. AGRICULTURAL EXPERIMENT STATION

THE MOST EFFECTIVE WAY TO CONTROL FLIES is to eliminate breeding places. Garbage and manures of various kinds are excellent media in which flies may breed. Garbage cans should be emptied often; tops should be kept on the cans except while being emptied. Manures should be scattered or sprayed with a fly larvacide twice each week during the fly season.

FLIES CAN BE CONTROLLED ON POULTRY FARMS by proper management and use of insecticides. Management includes: a watering system that prevents excess moisture in the manure, removal of manure in November and March, free circulation of air over manure piles, and avoiding feeds that cause excessive loose droppings. Larval poisons such as aldrin or borax should be applied to the manure once or twice per week at the rate of 5½ ounces or 2 pounds, respectively, per 100 square feet. Adult flies should be controlled by any of the standard methods.

CONTROL OF PEANUT WORMS with DDT or toxaphene has been highly profitable in experiments conducted at the Wiregrass Substation. Four applications of either two and one-half per cent DDT or 10 per cent toxaphene mixed with sulphur-copper will usually control worms. Where large caterpillars develop, the concentration must be increased to five per cent DDT or 20 per cent toxaphene.

EFFECT OF REMOVING VINE-CUTTINGS ON YIELD OF SWEETPOTATOES. Two-years results at Auburn show that when three-fourths of the vines or 24,000 vine-cuttings per acre were removed June 1 the yield of sweetpotatoes was not affected. However, four-year results at Atmore show that when three-fourths of the vines or 86,000 vine-cuttings per acre were removed the first week in July, there was a 19 per cent reduction in yield of sweetpotatoes, and a 10 per cent reduction in yield when 40,000 vine-cuttings were removed.

YOUNG PINES ARE RELEASED FROM SCRUB OAKS by girdling the oaks. Red, black, and blackjack oaks can easily be girdled and better than three-fourths of them will die the first year. Using a light-weight ax, one man can girdle 50 small trees in an hour. By making the second ax stroke about four inches above the first stroke, the bark can easily be prized out.

VEGETABLE YIELDS ARE CUT by use of acid-forming sources of nitrogen if acidity is not corrected. After seven years continuous use of ammonium sulfate without lime on the same soil, mustard yields were only 24 per cent of those from continuous use of nitrate of soda. However, where enough lime had been added to neutralize the acids developed, ammonium sulfate produced 82 per cent as much as nitrate of soda. Lettuce that received ammonium sulfate without lime was failing at the end of seven years, but with lime was producing 19 per cent more than nitrate of soda.

1. TO HEAD THE HERD—A good bull is the best investment a cattleman can make, says Lee Y. Lamar of Tuskegee, who exhibits his recently purchased $1000 herd sire. Lamar says his interest in the beef cattle business started when he began feeding 4-H calves in 1939. He now has 35 brood cows on a 150-acre Macon County farm bought while in school at API.

2. THE STARTING POINT—Lee Y. Lamar (left) of Tuskegee shows Assistant County Agent Jack Bolling the grand champion rosette he received for winning the Shorthorn division of the Montgomery Fat Calf Show as a 4-H Club boy in 1944. Twenty ribbons on the table are proof that young Lamar had plenty of experience—and success—with beef before buying a Macon County farm and launching his own cattle business in 1947.

Watch 'Em Grow!

Many 4-H Calf Feeders Make Good Livestockmen

THAT first beef calf project has had a lasting influence on thousands of Alabama's 4-H Club members. That's why many successful cattlemen can trace their love of the livestock business back to the days when they were feeding and showing fat calves as youngsters.

Lee Y. Lamar of Tuskegee is an excellent example of such a livestockman. He started on the road to success back in 1939 when he bought his first beef calf and fed him for a show in Montgomery. His calf, like many others that year, was very ordinary, lacking breeding and conformation.

But Lee had his start. He continued beef calf projects, each year trying to get a better animal. And they did improve: in 1944 his steer won the Macon County fat stock show and was later selected grand champion Shorthorn of the Montgomery district show.

For his achievements in feeding beef cattle, 14 in all, Lee was awarded a trip to National 4-H Congress in Chicago in 1944. Later that year his livestock career was interrupted by World War II.

But after two years in the Navy, Lee came home determined to become a cattleman. He entered college at Alabama Polytechnic Institute in 1946 where he studied agriculture, majoring in animal husbandry, and was graduated four years later.

While still at API, Lee was getting ready for a fast start in the cattle business. He bought a 150-acre farm in 1947 and began developing pastures. At the same time he bought 10 heifers.

By steady plugging the young farmer has built his herd to 35 fine brood cows. He credits home-raised feed and keeping the best heifers with the good luck he has had.

Lee knew if he was going to raise the best calves for market he must have a better bull. So in 1952 he purchased a $1000 bull from Gordon LeGrane in Montgomery County. The animal was sired by Larry Domino 43rd and is a half-brother to the famous Jennings $50,000 bull.

The grazing program on young Lamar's farm consists of white clover, dallis grass, sericea, and native lespedeza during summer, and crimson clover and oats during the winter. Lee also grows row crops, mainly cotton and corn, on 50 acres of rented land near his farm.

HERE'S PROOF—It's a fact that clover will not grow on unlimed acid soils—and here's another bit of proof. T. F. Greathouse, right, of Centerville, tells County Agent J. C. Odom, center, and Tharon Camp, assistant county agent, that the difference in clover growth here is due to lack of lime on the land at right. All other treatment in the entire field was the same. Note the difference in the size of plants Odom is holding. The small plants came from the unlimed area. The area was seeded in the fall of 1951. Land on left received one ton of lime and 800 pounds of 0-14-10 at planting.

TOP JUNIOR DAIRYMAN—Bobby Bridgeman, who has one cow in production and a heifer almost ready to start filling milk cans, was selected Coosa County's best Junior Dairyman for 1952. He tells Assistant County Agent Tom Casaday that records kept on his cow's production along with feed and labor cost last year reveal a good profit. The Equality 4-H Club member is the son of Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Bridgeman of Alexander City Rt. 1.

Bluegills are usually bedding in great numbers during June. All pond owners should try to find the beds and harvest as many bluegills as possible. The majority of fish caught will be male or bull bluegills. Good live baits are crickets, mealworms, soldier flies, drone bees, and wasp larvae.

No Waste Here

A new machine is being added to the sawmills in South Alabama and may soon be seen around mill sites in the northern part of the state. The machine is a log debarker and, as the name implies, is used to take the bark off logs so that slabs and edging strips can be used for wood pulp.

Ivan R. Martin, API Extension forester, says that slabs and edging strips from the pine lumber produced in this state would supply about 75 per cent of the wood now used by paper mills in Alabama. He believes the use of the log debarker may eventually bring an increase in stumpage prices and cause timber owners to grow larger trees.

An Insurance Crop

When times get tough for cattlemen who haven't surplus feed for their animals this summer or next winter, there still will be at least one Randolph County farmer who'll be smiling and milking his 55-head herd of dairy animals without a worry.

C. G. Marshall of Wadley Rt. 1 is playing safe this year by storing feed in the form of silage. He is now filling a gigantic trench silo with crimson clover. Marshall cuts the crop, allows it to wilt for four hours, hauls it to the silo, and as it's chopped adds 40 pounds of blackstrap molasses per ton to the clover.

Marshall estimated recently that he has harvested about 30 tons of silage from his five acres of crimson clover. Later when his 15 acres of oats are ready he plans to cut them and add about 30 to 45 more tons of silage to the trench. Then in August the dairyman plans to harvest 10 acres of Dixie 18 corn and put it in the same silo. Since corn and oats contain enough starch to ferment, Marshall says no molasses will be added to these crops. He keeps the silo air-tight with sisal craft paper covered with one foot of sawdust.

If no emergencies occur before August, Marshall expects to have nearly 200 tons of silage ready for later use.

FEED efficiency! That's the watchword of every broiler grower. To him it means the number of pounds of feed it takes to grow a pound of broiler; or many growers express it in terms of how many pounds of broilers they get from each 100-pound bag of feed.

Figured either way, it's easy to see how important the term is when a poultryman looks at the following table. It shows the cost of feeding 1000 three-pound broilers when feed costs $5.75 per 100 pounds:

38 lbs. of meat per 100-lb. bag of feed—feed cost $448.00.

29 lbs. of meat per 100-lb bag of feed—feed cost $586.00.

The grower who's able to turn out 38 pounds of broilers from 100 pounds of feed will have $138 more profit than the producer who only gets 29 pounds of broiler meat per 100 pounds of feed.

Many things affect feed efficiency in growing broilers: The kind of chick, feed, diseases, brooding conditions, and crowding. All of these are important, but probably the factor having greatest influence on the poultryman's efficiency is wasted feed. In too many broiler houses, feed that should go into a broiler goes into the litter.

This feed waste can be stopped by using plenty of feeders of the proper size and filling them only half full.

RECENT discoveries at the Poultry Research Center in Edinburg, Scotland, that may help solve some of the problems of leucosis are reported by J. G. Carr in the World's Poultry Science Journal. (Leucosis is also known as range paralysis, big liver, or grey eye disease.)

Carr points out that he's found certain birds to be carriers of the leucosis virus. If a virus infects a resistant bird, it will still be a carrier of the disease even though it is not visibly affected.

He has found the age of the bird has a definite influence upon the amount of infective virus carried by the infected bird. A bird about 4 weeks old may contain several million infective doses, a 12-week-old bird several thousand, and birds one and a half years old only a few hundred.

We have known the hazards of growing young chicks near old hens, but we have not considered the danger from young chickens, 4 weeks to several months old, as a bad source of infection. Carr's research indicates that these birds are the greatest source of infection.

The disease is also transmitted through the egg. Although this means of spread may be small, it may explain heavy leucosis losses on some new poultry farms where several ages of pullets are grown. In other words, if a few birds in a flock are infected when hatched, at 4 to 12 weeks of age they would carry millions of doses of the infective virus. And if more day-old chicks were started nearby, many susceptible birds probably would be infected.

This research of course does not give all the answers on leucosis, but it may point the way to a better research and a more effective control program.

County Berry Growers Have A Big Season

Chilton County blackberry growers have wound up their 1953 season in a blaze of glory what with the shipping out of the county of some 1,300,000 pounds of the black fruit to the tune of approximately $156,000 in cash return.

That is the report as of yesterday by George Smith, general manager of the Thorsby Fruit and Truck Growers Association, who also reported that this year's berry crop had a much wider distribution throughout the United States than has previously been the case.

Smith said that the Chilton County black berries this year have been shipped to as far North as Canandiagua, N. Y., as well as Arkansas, Tennessee, Atlanta, Pensacola, Fla., and the Chicago Fresh Fruit Market. Nearly all shipments have been made by truck, said Smith, most of the product was shipped to canneries, wineries and freeze plants.

Although this week will just about wind up the blackberry shipping for this year, Smith said that this year's crop seemed to be entirely different than any other in that it started off with a big bang, while in other years it has had a more moderate start.

He stated that the acceptance of the Chilton berries has been exceptional this year. He also pointed out that if next year's crop is very much larger than it was this year that the Thorsby shed shipping facilities will have to be greatly expanded.

As an example Smith pointed out that the loading platform will have to be increased in size. He said that at times there just was not room enough to receive the berries on one side of the big concrete platform and at the same time get them loaded into the big transfer truck on the other side. Smith also said that the shed will have to install another set of loading scales to take care of the load that is now being received.

On several occasions Smith reported that his staff of office workers and shipping personnel were forced to work all night long in an effort to keep the shipments on the move. In this respect Smith said: "I would, in most instances like to thank all of the farmers and berry growers for their wonderful cooperation and patience. Without their help and understanding we would never have been able to handle as many berries as we did."

Smith said that starting this Friday the shed hoped to be able to start receiving and shipping cucumbers from Chilton County growers and that by the first of the week they probably will be able to receive tomatoes for shipment.

WINNER IN TRACTOR DERBY

James Shirley, Clanton FFA member, won the tractor derby held at the football field at Clanton Saturday, May 16. He was competing against 16 other Future Farmers from 9 FFA chapters in four counties.

Young Shirley maneuvered a Ford tractor pulling a two-wheel trailer through an obstacle course and then backed the trailer in between four markers which allows only 3-inch clearance on each side in 44½ seconds to give him top honors.

Second place winner was G. C. Hayes, Billingsley FFA member, who completed the run in 47 seconds. Third place went to Johnny Moore of Maplesville who needed just 49 seconds to do the job.

Local oil distributor, J. P. Lawrence, awarded a cup to the first place winner and plaques to the second and third place contenders. Driving skill and safe operation were the outstanding points on which contestants were judged.

Cooperating in putting on the tractor derby were the vocational agriculture teachers in surrounding counties, Standard Oil Company, and local implement dealers.

Host chapter was the Clanton Future Farmers who sold drinks, sandwiches and other refreshments. Under the supervision of J. R. Thompson, FFA adviser, they also made arrangements for the necessary facilities.

In addition to the tractor derby, entertainment was furnished by the Jemison FFA quartet who went to the semi-finals in the State FFA contest. Members of the quartet are: Billy Conway, Lloyd Sample, Donald Gothard, and Charles Williams. Jean Dennis is their accompanist.

Rain Needed In Next 10 Days

Chilton Tomato Crop Faces Very Serious Draught Damage

Although Chilton County farmers have received a good return for their blackberry crop, which has just about ended, they now face a serious loss with their tomato crop if the weatherman doesn't soon see fit to pour some much-needed rain on the withering tomato plants.

As a result of the dry weather, however, many market reports from throughout the country are right now indicating a very favorable price will be received by those who do have tomatoes to sell.

Asked for a statement yesterday pertaining to the possibility of a short tomato crop this year, County Agent M. R. Glasscock said: "If Chilton County Farmers don't get some rain within the next week or ten days, tomato crops will be very seriously damaged."

At the present time the county agent's office estimates that Chilton County now has well over 1500 acres of tomatoes in the ground, which should make a yield of some 8000 pounds of tomatoes

With the prospect of this big yield, if the farmers get the rain needed, Glasscock has called a meeting of all tomato growers to be conducted at 7:30 tonight in the Chilton County Court House. This meeting, explains the county agent, is to help decide when to open the local market. Glasscock reported that he has received many telephone inquiries from out-of-state tomato users who are very anxious to buy Chilton County tomatoes.

ALABAMA SCHOOL FUNDS

Alabama teachers' salaries are under $250 per nine months' session. They get less pay than teachers in Florida, Georgia and several other states. They get less pay than skilled or semi-skilled labor. They have invested years of training and thousands of dollars to prepare themselves for the job of educating Alabama children. Their salaries should be commensurate with their ability. Many are leaving this state for higher salaries elsewhere.

We believe the teachers are due to be paid more money. However, the teachers, aside from advocating repeal of sales tax exemptions and diversion of school funds, seem to have no comprehensive program to offer the legislature, as to the source from which more school money may be obtained.

Alabama is one of the lowest ranking states in the union in per capita income. It, however, already ranks well up the list in per cent of total state income devoted to education.

We believe there are some phases of the present education program where economies could and should be effected—the savings to be applied to raising teachers' salaries. Much money could be saved by eliminating duplication of courses in state colleges. There is no justification for Auburn and the University to have duplicate courses. State teachers' colleges should be consolidated into one. New buildings should be provided for on a strict campus enrollment basis.

The state has no business providing free text books to any child whose parents are able to buy them.

These and other savings provided by a revised program could be applied to the state's low-paid teachers' slaries.—Cullman Democrat.

A PERFECT RECORD

The law enforcement agencies of Chilton County, Sheriff Luther Kendrick and his staff of deputies, as well as the members of the State Highway Ptrol stationed here, are to be highly commended for the fine record of safety chalked up so far.

Since Jan. 1, 1953, Chilton County has gone through these past five months without a traffic fatality. And for this the Chilton County News salutes the county sheriff's department and the highway patrol. And by the same token the Chilton County News also salutes the moforists of this wonderful county.

At the same time however, the Chilton County News would like to point out that speedways are developing in our fair city of Clanton.

Since the summer vacation has started for the school children the city streets are becoming a playground. This in itself is bad enough. However, many of our motorists are making a speedway out of our city streets, which is destined to break the enviable record set during the past five months of this year.

As has just recently been pointed out by two of the top leaders in Alabama's traffic safety movement, Alabama's bloodiest month was June of last year.

During the month of June last year in Alabama some 90 men, women and children were slaughtered by motor vhicles, which is an average of three per day.

Let's not follow the crowds! Let everyone in Chilton County help to keep the record clean, as clean as it has been during these past five months. Sheriff Luther Kendrick and deputies L. W. Johnson and Reuben Gore, and Highway Patrolmen G. C. Webb, James H. Craddock, Fred Stein and Hugh Champion are doing all they can to keep this record. These officers have proven their worth. Now it's just as much the job of everyone else to keep it clean. Let's don't spoil it.

DALE CARNEGIE

STEPHEN A. ANDREJKO, Jr., 551 Grove Avenue, Johnstown, Cambria Co., Pennsylvania, became a Fireboss and later he was promoted to Section Foreman. He had one ever present underlying fear: a visit from the State Mine Inspector. He says he does not know why, but he worried until the man left.

When he would hear the State Mine Inspector was coming, he would tell his handyman to say that he was down in the old workings checking the ventilation. He got away with this for two inspections, but on the third inspection when he came around, the first thing he asked was, "Where is your Section Foreman?" The handyman told him he was down in the old workings checking the ventilation. Then said the Inspector, "You go and look for him; we are not going to inspect the section without him; go get him." He knew that Steve was afraid of him and that he was hiding.

CARNEGIE

Steve came out of hiding and approached the Inspector with a "Hello Mr. Curtis." Then he told the Foreman and the Superintendent to wait, adding, "Steve, and I are going for a walk. I have something to talk over with him." As they went into the old workings behind a wall the Inspector said, "Steve, what is the matter? What are you afraid of?" Steve answered frankly, "I do not like the way you look at a person. I would rather you gave me Hell than look at me the way you do." The reply came: "You should not let my eyes worry you, that is just my appearance." Then he continued so kindly that Steve never again feared him or ever worried about any other inspector. Since then Steve had helped several people who were in the same predicament.

One remark that stuck and Steven thinks really did the trick was: "People are all pretty much the same you know."

CONGRESSIONAL Gleanings

A—From 1940 through 1952, Congress cited 159 persons for contempt. Forty-five of them were convicted, and six other convictions were reversed. Gambler Frank Costello drew the heaviest penalty, 18 months in jail and a $5,000 fine. There were no contempt citations during the first four months of 1953. But the Senate May 6 cited for contempt Russell W. Duke, former San Francisco publicity man.

Q—Has former Speaker Sam Rayburn been in Congress longer than any other present Member?

A—No. Sen. Carl Hayden (D.-Ariz.) served in the House from April 4, 1911, to March 3, 1927, and in the Senate continuously since 1927. Rayburn (D.-Tex.) has served continuously in the House since 1913.

Q—Who has the most seniority in the Senate?

A—Sen. Walter F. George (D.-Ga.) is ranked first by the Senate. He became a Member Nov. 8, 1922. Second ranking Senator in seniority is Carl Hayden (D.-Ariz.) with 26 years in the Senate (following about 16 years in the House). The ranking Republican in seniority in the Senate is Styles Bridges (N. H.) whose service commenced Jan. 3, 1937.

Q—What is being done about President Eisenhower's request to let 240,000 immigrants beyond quotas enter the U. S. during the next two years?

A—The Immigration and Naturalization Subcommittee of the House Judiciary Committee decided April 27 to solicit information and opinions by mail on the advisability of admitting the extra immigrants. Hearings on a bill to grant the President's request will be held after replies have been received. Present quotas allow entry of 154,657 yearly.

My PET PEEVE

By W. Scott Boyd

THE era of television has wrecked the love of nature and the simple things. The kids zoom about the house in space suits, weird looking guns in hand, and shouting such things as "blast off" and "launch your rockets."

All of which brings to mind my back-to-nature movement of a couple of Sundays ago.

"Today we're going to the country," says I to one and all.

"Why?" the wife asks.

"To get the kids out in the sunshine, near to nature," says I.

"And poison ivy," adds the wife.

But they let me win and we took off for the country.

Time passed pleasantly until the youngest lad saw a cow. It wasn't the first one he had seen, but he had never been close to one. And I agreed to a closer inspection.

"It's a funny looking critter," he commented as we approached. For a while we stood there admiring the creature as she eyed us with a bored expression, if a cow can be bored.

"What's those things on her head, Pop?" the youngest asks.

"They're horns, son," says I.

About that time the animal mooed or whatever it is a cow does to make a noise.

"Which one did she blow that time, Pop?" he asks.

"HUH!"

What followed was the craziest conversation I have ever been engaged in. Try to explain to a four-year-old that a horn does not necessarily make a noise. He knows better.

In fact, he has almost convinced me that a horn has to make noise.

CARD OF THANKS

I wish to take this opportunity to thank everyone who was so kind and helpful during the sickness and death of my brother, Alvin Campbell. Especially do we thank Dr. W. C. Golden, Mrs. Grace Windham, Dr. Marshal Ware, Miss Helen Parrish, Barney Stroud, and the people around Enterprise Community.

May God's richest blessings be upon each and every one who were so good to us in our hour of need. The Family of Alvin Campbell, Mrs. J. M. Gray.

From the Mason County News, New Haven, W. Va.: We aren't much of a mathematician but according to a bulletin of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, "taxes will equal all wages, salaries, rents, interest and dividends received by the American people from January 1 through April 22, 1953."—now you know why you haven't had anything left over since the first of the year—you've been paying it all out in taxes.

From the Providence Journal-Enterprise, Providence, Ky.: Recently President Eisenhower . . . spoke with delight of the pickle jar and the cracker barrel found in most general stores when he was growing up . . . From the Hagerstown Herald, Hagerstown, Md.: A couple of doctors reporting in a medical journal say that on the basis of clinical experience with 500 patients they have found "neck-stretching" a highly successful treatment for chronic headaches.

Since the Russian Communists have made something of a specialty of stretching neck in the past 30 years they evidently have cured a lot of headaches. As a matter of fact, when a Kremlin operative gets through stretching a neck, nothing at all aches.

Wouldn't you like to have the hemp concession in the Soviet Union?

From the Kingsville Record, Kingsville, Texas: Ike is running his big job with quiet dignity, working his brain instead of his jaw, and getting his "team" through Spring training in top shape. He hasn't been throwing dead cats at anybody. And that has the Kremlin worried. Melenkov has heard about barking dogs hesitating to sink the fang into the flesh. Its so different from when Harry was telling 'em off.

From the Ashland Independent, Ashland, Ky.: Moscow does not like the United States, but it tolerates some American authors. Announcement is made of the plan to publish this year 900,000 books by American authors. One-quarter of the number will be devoted to editions of O. Henry's short stories. Also approved are Mark Twain's "Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court" and poems of Walt Whitman.

This is dangerous business for the Communists. Readers of these books may get the notion that Americans have many sensible ideas. There is no telling how far such an impression may spread.

MONTH OF JUNE

Don't you hear the red-winged black bird,
Bob-o-link, Oriole and Wren
A singing their very sweetest
From meadows, hill and glen?
Can't you hear them telling
In their liltin', tiltin' tune?
The roses are a blooming
For it's the month of June.

And . . . what is so rare as a day in June? Then, if ever, come perfect days.—Laurell.

June is the month of roses, brides and Father's Day. Let us make Father's Day a day filled with love, kindness, and good deeds. Let's do something to show Dad how important he is. The third Sunday in June has been set aside as Father's Day. On that day let us offer this prayer for all fathers: "Dear God, be good to Dad on this, his special day. We know that when he is alone he worries quite a bit but when anyone comes around he just smiles. He has done so much for the family, striving to make all happy. So dear Lord, Please be good to him."

My PET PEEVE
By W. Scott Boyd

I TOOK the oldest boy fishing. All afternoon we sat on the bank with a group of other fishermen and I gave the ungrateful little demon all the advice accumulated in years of fishing.

"If you'll just leave the kid alone," says one, "he'll learn."

"Nonsense," says I. And I proceeded with my hours of instructions. The net catch up to this time was zero.

"Pop," says the boy, "If I floated one of these minnows down over that riffle I betcha I'd hook me a big bass."

"Who ever heard of such a thing," says I.

"Please," he persists.

"All right," says I, "but be sure to stay out of the deep water."

Two minutes later I heard his frantic shouts. "I've got a big one!"

"All of two inches," says I to the other fishermen and started slowly up the creek to the riffle. Just then the bass jumped. One look was enough. I took off like a rocket.

By the time I got there the boy had him on the bank. A fat four pounds of fighting fish.

"It just takes experience," one of the fishermen shouted. Then the idiots rolled on the bank shouting and laughing like they didn't have good sense.

"Yep," says the oldest son, "it's all in knowing how."

GRAIN SORGHUM MAY SOLVE YOUR FEED SHORTAGE PROBLEM

Grain sorghum to be combined and stored for winter feeding or to be grazed from the field in early winter can be the answer to many Chilton County farmers feed shortage problems.

Chief advantages of grain sorghum production are:

1. Forty to fifty bushels of quality grain can be made per acre from plantings as late as mid-July when it is normally too late to expect a profitable yield of corn.

2. Grain sorghum can be harvested with machinery.

3. The off-season grain crop allows farm operators to spread the annual labor load involved in producing needed feed more nearly even throughout the year.

4. Grain sorghum fields can be interplanted with winter grazing crops at time of last cultivation.

5. Grain sorghum is readily grazed by cattle and hogs. Recommendations for producing grain sorghum are as follows:

SOIL — Any soil that produces corn or cotton.

VARIETY — Martin Combine and Early Hegari for combining, or Hegari and Sagrain for sileage and cutting green.

SOIL PREPARATION — Break and disk if grain sorghum is not following reseeding winter legume. If following reseeding legume disk thoroughly.

PLANTING TIME — June 1st to July 15th.

SEEDING RATE AND SPACING — Three to three and one-half foot rows—one to three plants per hill, four to sixteen inches between hills. Variety and future use to determine spacing and seed per acre. Close spacing used on combine varieties—wide spacing for the taller growing varieties that are to be hand-cut and fed.

Seeding rate will vary from approximately four pounds to eight pounds per acre.

PLANTING — Cover seed one to one and one-half inches. Use sorghum plate in regular cotton or corn planter.

FERTILIZER — Three to four hundred pounds of 4-10-7 per acre at planting. Two hundred pounds nitrate of soda, or its equivalent, as a side dressing at first cultivation.

CULTIVATION — Two to three shallow cultivation to control weeds and grass.

The overall cost of all levels of government in the United States today is 50 times what it was in 1913.

Men have walked to the North Pole, have flown there by dirigible and airplane. One attempt was made to reach it by submarine. Sir George Hubert Wilkins, an Austrialian explorer, made the attempt but turned back because of mechanical difficulties. It has never been tried since.

SALADS help keep meals from becoming dull especially if you practice the fine art of making salads properly.

Combine your fruits for salad just before serving so their appearance will be just as fresh and crisp as possible.

When using canned or cooked fruits or vegetables for salad, drain them carefully before placing on the salad greens. Liquid will often weigh the tender greens down and make them look wilted.

Chill the plates as well as dressing and ingredients. Salads should be served cold unless they're a hot type of salad such as hot potato or wilted lettuce.

Vegetable salads can be varied simply by adding a flavorful ingredient to the dressing. Flavor mayonnaise or French dressing with one of the following: deviled ham, sweet relish, chopped pickle olives, mustard or catchup.

Now that we're going to be in season for fresh berries, toss a few of these on your fruit salads for color and interest. Berries and grapes can be frosted when you want to make salads special by dipping in slightly beaten egg white and then rolling in granulated sugar.

Keep the salad plate from looking cluttered. Greens should never hang over the edge, for example. Mayonnaise for fruit salads can be thinned with leftover fruit juice from canned or citrus fruits. Cream whipped cream may also be used.

PROVIDENCE CHURCH NEWS

Services will be held at Providence Baptist Church next Saturday and Sunday, June 6th and 7th. This will be conference days and every member is especially invited and urged to attend. The Saturday meeting will begin at 11 o'clock; Sunday School at 10 o'clock, preaching following at 11 o'clock Sunday. Bro. W. E. Robinson, the pastor, will bring both messages. Don't forget B.T.U. Sunday night at 7 o'clock sharp.

Grain Sorghum

June planted corn is not recommended. Market hog growers who don't have enough corn planted to balance their hog crop and who have the acreage available, are advised to plant grain sorghum the latter half of June. Experiment Station results have proved that it's almost as good as corn, bushel for bushel, for feeding hogs. About seven bushels, properly supplemented, will produce 100 pounds of walking hog meat.

SOIL-CEMENT—today's biggest value for light-traffic streets

SOIL-CEMENT makes taxpayers' dollars go farther because about 85 per cent of the required material is usually native soil on the site. It's easy to transform high-maintenance cost streets into strong, durable pavement good for years of all-weather service with soil-cement.

Soil-cement's superior value and durability for light-traffic streets are fully established. Thousands of miles of soil-cement paving are now in service in the U. S.

"Biff" Falls for His Own Story

Every night Mrs. Morgan complained about how hard it was to get Rusty to go to sleep. Finally Biff decided to handle the situation. "Anyone can get a kid to sleep — takes a little patience! Here, hand me her storybook."

He grabs the book and goes into Rusty's room. About an hour later Rusty comes padding out in pajamas and hands her mother the book. "Read it quietly," she whispers, "so we don't wake Daddy."

From where I sit, Biff won't be so quick to be a "child-care specialist" the next time. If we could just resist being such "know it alls," our neighbors would be better off. Take those who would deny me a glass of beer with my supper — well, I might not care for the buttermilk they like. We all ought to realize that we all have different abilities and different preferences, too.

Annual Singing and Homecoming at Shiloh

The annual singing and homecoming was held at Shiloh Baptist Church last Sunday and was enjoyed by a large crowd.

The program began about 10:30 o'clock with our most dependable chairman, C. M. Billingsley, directing the first song. This was followed by prayer, led by the pastor, Rev. J. I. Bice.

The class singing until noon was very good, and the Chordetts from Prattville rendered some special numbers which were splendid.

At noon a bountiful lunch was spread under the trees and until 1:30 everyone enjoyed the social homecoming of friends and relatives. At 1:30 the singing was resumed with a well-packed house. A number of outstanding singers came for the afternoon session. We have never had a better singing.

We had a number of outstanding directors, among whom were Dr. and Mrs. Whitehead of Clanton. Several special numbers were rendered by the Liberty Hill Quartet; the Chordetts; the Wyatt Sisters; a duet by Edna Ousley and Carol Billingsley; a solo by Mrs. Anna Laura (Devaughn) Whitehead. These were all enjoyed very much.

We wish to thank everyone who took any part in helping make the day the success it was. Especially do we thank the singers; the pianists, who were: C. M. Billingsley, Mrs. Whitehead, Mrs. Edna Ousley, Nellma Joe Boockholdt, Mrs. Littlejohn, Mrs. Howard Wyatt, and Mrs. C. M. Billingsley; our chairman, who so tirelessly and efficiently steered the program through the day. We also wish to thank Carlos Owen who installed his public address system, which enabled all to hear the program.

"I REMEMBER" BY THE OLD TIMERS

From E. C. Wyatt, Elkins, W. Va.: I remember when a paper bag was called a poke; when a baby chick was called a biddy; and when the old timers use to go into the deep woods and get a large knot, shape it up, bore a hole through the center for a handle and use it to drive fence posts or wedges in logs and split them into fence rails. The wooden wedges were called "gluts." They were usually made from dogwood and well seasoned before using. They were usually made during the early winter months.

From Mrs. W. W. Thompson, Bell, California: I remember when I was a child my Dad had a cotton gin. My brother and I had to feed the sucker that took the cotton from the wagon to the press. One day my brother stuck his head in it and it sucked his hat up and got into the gin teeth. Dad had to stop the gin and it cost him a lot of valuable time.

From Mrs. Ellen Gustafson, Omaha, Neb.: I remember as a child when we use to carry in snow in winter time to melt for our baths which we took in the kitchen. Those were indeed happy days.

From Mrs. Clara Scheid, Ft. Recovery, Ohio: I remember when we bought crackers by the barrel, made 30 gallons of kraut for our family of four, and dug dandelions out of our yard for 10 cents a day.

PRESIDENT Eisenhower's tax program faces a battle in the Congress, according to Washington reports. It will be the first real test of Mr. Eisenhower's political strength since he took office. No one, however, is rash enough to predict that the President will not have his way on the five proposals he offered Congress:

1. The excess profits tax should be extended for six months beyond the expiration date of June 30 in order to gain revenue of $800,000,000.

2. Congress should repeal the 8 per cent reduction of the tax on regular income of corporations, which is now scheduled to go into effect April 1, 1954. Continuation of it would raise $2,000,000,000 annually.

3. The scheduled reduction in excise taxes due next April 1 should be maintained at least until a sounder system of excise taxation was enacted. He would make recommendations for this next January.

4. The increase of the old-age security tax from 1½ per cent to 2 per cent on both employes and employers should be postponed pending further study of Social Security taxes.

5. The 1951 tax of approximately 11 per cent imposed as an extra levy on individual incomes should continue until it expires on scheduled date of December 31.

● Stronger Allied ties is the objective of the meeting next week between President Eisenhower, Prime Minister Churchill and the Premier of France.

It is reported the meeting was proposed by President Eisenhower. He said the big three leaders would tackle the "many problems that must be solved co-operatively so that the world cause of peace may be advanced."

In other words, if the three have a complete understanding among themselves, then they may meet at some future date with Soviet Premier Georgi M. Malenkov for a discussion of world problems.

As one U. S. Senator remarked, "It would be a fatal mistake to go into a four-power meeting with a wide divergence of opinion among the Allies about Korea and other unsettled problems because the Communist technique is aimed at dividing the Allies."

● Northwestern National Life Insurance company's 18th annual employment survey reveals that starting salaries for college graduates is at a new all-time peak.

The survey covers 131 universities, colleges and technical schools. The 1953 averages reported by the schools run $290-$310 a month for liberal arts men, $310-$330 for business administration majors, and $325-$375 for engineers, with some individuals starting at $400 for a 40-hour week, plus a premium for longer working week.

Over half, or 76 of the schools surveyed, reported 90 to 100 per cent of their available seniors will be placed by commencement time.

The over-all number of college graduates is down from the peak years of just after World War II while there are more employers. This accounts for the increase in starting salaries and the greater percentage of placements.

Folks and Things ABOUT TOWN

—By Ben

Wonder if they have found the big bad booger that has been roaming the woods near the river. Reports have come that it is a bear, gorilla, and many other kinds of varmints. Goodness knows we don't know what it is they are seeing down there and we don't intend to try to find out. Whatever it is and several claim to have seen it), I hope it is caught soon so as to relieve folks in that section of the city.

Did you read in our favorite newspaper where post office box rent was going to double? Wonder if we could double the price of our advertising and newspaper and get away with it? You know within the past ten years the cost of production and paper stock has way more than doubled. But we haven't passed the increase along to the customer as we should have. Maybe that's why we have that hungry look.

We read in the June Alabama Trucker where a trucker's wife enrolled a clinic for a thorough checkup. One doctor checked her eyes, another her throat, another her respiration, and still another X-rayed her. This went on for several days until finally fourteen doctors had checked her. On the fifth day a little overalled man came into the room carrying a pail of water, rags, brushes, etc. This really scared the gal. "What are you going to do now?" she asked feebly. The little man smiled at her, "I'm going to wash your transom," he said.

Accident Hazard Is Now Eliminated

One of Chilton County's worst accident hazards has been eliminated by the county engineer's office during the past week. Judge Dave Tingle announced that work has been completed on the resurfacing of the Higgins Ferry Road from in front of Dr. Parrish's home east to the bridge. For many months motorists have been complaining about the slick condition of that spot of the Higgins Ferry Road.

Judith Williams Another Entry In Peach Queen Race

Three more of Chilton County's lovliest girls have been entered in the 1953 Peach Queen contest to compete for the highest honor of the year, the honor of being crowned to rule over the queen of the fruit, Chilton County's Peaches, on Wednesday, July 8th.

Miss Judith Williams, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell A. Williams, has been entered in the contest and will be sponsored by the Clanton Pilots Club.

Miss Paula Nivens, 16, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Nivens, has also entered the Peach Queen contest and will be sponsored by the Clanton Chapter, Beta Sigma Phi.

The Clanton Kiwanis Club has also chosen their entry to be sponsored. They will sponsor Barbara Davidson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Davidson.

Although full information on all of the above mentioned girls was not available at press time, Mrs. Erie Ellis and her committee is working at full speed in an effort to handle all of the entries as soon as possible.

Miss Williams attended high school at Chilton County High and is a member of the Beta Club, vice-president of the Glee Club, a Future Teacher of America, a member of the F.H.A., vice-president of Quill and Scroll, treasurer of the Junior Class, Editor of the Silver Shield, the High School Yearbook, a member of the school paper staff and Valedictorian of the Senior Class.

At a meeting last Thursday night of the Peach Queen Committee, tentative plans for the contest and the honors to be bestowed upon the reigning beauty were drawn up. However, in as much as the plans are not yet definite final announcement is being withheld temporarily.

Mrs. Ellis warned yesterday that the time is running short and that all those girls who are planning to enter the contest should get their names in to any of the committee members as soon as possible so that their applications can be processed and plans made for the entertainment for the whole group during the week preceding the day of the Festival, which is just one month hence. Mrs. Ellis also pointed out that it is not at all necessary that contestants have a sponsoring organization to be eligible. Any girl from throughout the county can enter the contest as long as she is within the age group of from 16 to 22 years and unmarried.

MAPLESVILLE ELECTS F.F.A. OFFICERS

The Maplesville chapter of Future Farmers of America held a meeting May 8th to elect new officers for 1953-54. They are as follows:

President, Charles Giles; vice-president, Paul Glaze; secretary, Thomas Chapman; treasurer, Bobby Moore; reporter, Curtis Smith; sentinel, Leighton Gandy; assistant adviser, Charles Graham; parliamentarian, Joe Harold Motley.

Albert H. Pyron, manager of the Clanton Baseball team, announced yesterday that he has withdrawn his baseball club from the newly organized Autauga County Baseball League. His announcement was in the form of a letter sent to the league president, J. H. Neighbors, of Prattville.

In an interview with a Chilton County News reporter, Pyron stated that although his club had withdrawn from the league, the club would still be booking baseball games throughout the summer season.

Asked for his reason for the withdrawal from the new league, Pyron pointed out that when the Clanton team played the Selma nine last Tuesday night the local club lost $18.79. He stated that the cost of playing the game amounted to $47.29 and the total gate receipts were only $28.50. He said the total expenses was for the cost of baseball, lights in the park and other expenses.

Pyron said he wished to thank those who had supported the team thus far in the season and that he was sorry that he was forced to make this decision. However, he felt that his decision was for the best to keep the club from running into any further deficit.

At the same time Pyron announced that the Clanton Club will take to the field this Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock against the Childersburg Club. The game will be played at the Clanton City Park.

SPARKMAN SUPPORTS WORLD DISARMAMENT

Senator John Sparkman, member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, is sponsoring a resolution which would provide for guaranteed world disarmament.

Among the thirty-three Senators who joined Sparkman on the resolution are Flanders of Vermont, Fulbright of Arkansas, Bricker of Ohio, Gillette of Iowa, Ferguson of Michigan, Mrs. Smith of Maine, Monroney of Oklahoma, Saltonstall of Massachusetts, and Hill of Alabama.

The resolution provides that the United States, working through the United Nations, would attempt to obtain agreement for enforceable universal disarmament.

A system of airtight inspection and enforcement would be established. All arms, including atomic weapons and other methods of mass destruction would be covered. Each nation would be allowed only those arms and forces needed for maintenance of domestic order.

Senator Sparkman pointed out the tremendous burden that the United States is now carrying to provide adequate defense. "We have no other choice," he said, "unless other powerful nations will agree to an enforceable disarmament policy."

Sparkkman explained that under the resolution, provided Russia and other countries agree to the plan, the United States would be willing to share a goodly part of the savings effected thereby with other nations in helping them to help themselves in conserving their resources and in building a higher standard of living.

He said that he discussed such a plan with members of the United Nations in November, 1950, when he was a delegate to the UN, and that countries not under control of Russia expressed enthusiastic approval.

In describing the plan on the Senate Floor, Senator Sparkman inserted a Gallop poll coast-to-coast survey showing that the people of this country are overwhelmingly in favor of such a plan. The poll also showed that the occupational group most in favor of it is the Nation's farmers, with 74 per cent approving.

Sparkman and other Senators pointed out the value of the resolution in making clear to other nations that we are not bent on war, and that we truly want peace with security.

Copies of the resolution will be sent to the heads of all the nations of the world.

ELECTED PRESIDENT

County Dairymen To Meet Tonight

M. R. Glasscock, County Agent, has called a meeting of Chilton County Dairymen to be conducted at 7:30 tonight in the county agent's office to make plans for the exhibiting of dairy cattle at the Chilton County Fair to be conducted at the Clanton Airport from August 25 through the 29th.

Mr. Glasscock pointed out that cattlemen who are interested in showing their cattle at this year's Fair should be getting their cattle in shape right now so that they will be ready in time for the presentation.

Tonight's meeting is for the purpose of making plans for the Dairy Cattle Show that is to be coordinated with the Fair plans and Mr. Glasscock would like to have all the suggestions he can get from the members of the association.

A WORD OF WARNING TO LOCAL FARMERS GRAZING CATTLE ON CRIMSON CLOVER

Each year this season quite a few farmers have trouble with their cattle that are allowed to graze areas where crimson clover has been combined. Chilton County sattlemen lost cattle last summer from decaying crimson clover stubbles.

Apparently the crimson clover plants that are in small piles develop mold or a fungus which adversely effects cattle.

The symptoms of this trouble are: the cows appear very nervous, slinging their head and picking up their feet. They do not want to move around and like to remain in one place. They may also become nervous enough to fight. Sores appear on and in the mouth, around the top of the hooves, and the udder may become so sore that they will not allow the calves to nurse. The skin becomes dry and may crack open. This is particularly true of areas of the skin covered by white hair.

It is believed that this trouble can be prevented by raking the crimson clover following the combine and before truning cattle on them. Cattle that become affected should be immediately moved off the clover fields and into a shady place with water available and should be given soft feed until they recover.

County Health Officer Orders-

Sixteen Glendale Property Owners Forced To Connect With The City Sewerage Line

Sixteen property owners in the Glendale Drive area have been ordered to connect onto the city sewer line within the next 30 days or they face a possible fine of $100 or they may be sentenced to not more than six months in jail.

Last week property owners in the Glendale area began receiving summons from the County Health officer advising them that it was mandatory that they make the connection to the city sewer lines.

It all came about several days ago on the complaint of some property owners against others made to the County Health office. And after considerable investigation into the matter notices were signed by Dr. G. M. Taylor, M.D., and E. F. Sloan, County Sanitation officer.

The Glendale sewer lines were installed by the City of Clanton last summer and in a few cases property owners have complied with the city ordinances and have connected with the sewer lines. The city ordinances state that property owners are to connect to the city sewer lines within 60 days after the installation has been completed by the city. The city ordinance also points out that the connection must be done by a licensed plumber and that the connection cannot be made to the city sewer lines until the assessment for the sanitary lines is paid.

The city has set up a rate of 75 cents per front foot of the property involved and this amount must be paid before a permit will be issued for the connection. At the same time it is pointed out that the city makes no provisions for a property owner to pay his assessment on time or to have it charged to his taxes. Mayor C. Fenn Jones reports that the full amount of the assessment must be paid before the connection permit can be issued.

The notices that have been issued by Dr. Taylor and Sloan call for the work to be completed by July 3, 1953.

Chilton Hospital Gets "A" Priority

Probate Judge Dave Tingle and Hospital Board Chairman F. Leo Thompson have received word from Washington that the proposed hospital for Clanton has been placed in the "A" priority list.

This word was received in the form of a letter from the Hon Armstead Selden, Jr., Representative, who wrote: "The Chilton County Hospital is now on the "A" priority list. We hope that construction can begin during the 1954 fiscal year."

Selden went on to say in his letter that on May 25th an amendment was introduced on the floor of the House to increase the Hill-Burton appropriation from 50 to 75 million dollars. Selden said in his letter that he had voted for this amendment and had made a statement from the floor of the House supporting this amendment. However, he reported, the amendment failed to pass by only six votes. Selden expressed belief, however, that when the amendment is reintroduced that it would pass the House.

Auto Overturns South Of Clanton

A man and wife from Tampa, Fla., were removed to the Prattville, Ala., hospital Sunday morning as the result of an automobile accident on Highway 31, south of Clanton.

Mr. and Mrs. Charlie B. Messina, or 2310 Tenth Avenue, Tampa, Fla., were taken to the hospital by the Martin Funeral ambulance after the car in which they were riding left the highway and overturned. Messina told County Coroner LeRoy Martin that his wife, Lillie, was driving the car when she tried to pass a transfer truck. However, when she discovered she was unable to maneuver past the truck car left the left side of the road and overturned. Neither Mr. or Mrs Messina were thought to be injured seriously. The accident occurred about 10:30 Sunday morning.

Effective July 1, 1953, the quarterly rental of post office boxes will be increased it was announced today by R. W. Lowe, postmaster.

Boxes that have rented for 75c in the past will advance to $1.50 per quarter.

Boxes that have rented for $1.00 per quarter will be advanced to $2.25.

The Postmaster also announced that in connection with the new rates it is desired that it be called to the attention of all patrons that box rent rates have not been changed since the year 1907, and that the increased changes are made to conform with the increased cost of providing the equipment and maintaining the service.

Chilton Schools To Get More Money

Chilton County schools would get $47,136 more each year from state funds if the Legislature adopts the proposal of school leaders, the Alabama Education Association announced today in Montgomery.

Legislators are being asked to increase the teacher salary state appropriation by ten per cent (10%).

"Sales tax exemptions for special groups take more than $33 million a year from schools. More exemptions may be permitted by this Legislature unless certain bills now pending in the Legislature are stopped. Adequate school funds could be provided and the tax load equalized were these exemptions from the sales tax removed.

"Teachers' salaries are below most laborers' and Alabama is losing teachers to Georgia and Florida. One Alabama teachers college reports 40 per cent of its graduates are going to other states because our salaries are so low," the ASA stated further. "A principal and his wife recently resigned their positions in one of the State's largest school systems to accept positions in Florida at increases totaling $2,800."

Eliminating sales tax exemptions would provide enough money for both reasonable teacher salaries and a good school building program. One out of every three Alabama children attends school in building judged inadequate—some condemned and dangerously close to falling; others with outside and unsanitary toilets or no toilets at all; some with no lunch facilities; some where over-crowded rooms create extreme fire and health hazards. Such conditions exist throughout the state where kids are trying to learn.

HELP SOMEBODY TODAY

"Out of the mouths of children oft come words of wisdom," and often out of the minds of the sick and the poor come great ideas. However an idea, whether great or small, is only as good as we make it by creating from it worthwhile things.

In a column on this page today is a "Letter To The Editor," that we believe should be read and reread. It is mainly to the peach growers but could include everyone of us who may produce more than he could use or sell. Obviously the letter is written by a woman, and by a woman who has seen the harder side of life and needs all the assistance from her fellowman that she can get.

If the peach grower has been blessed with a bountious crop for which he receives top market prices, or the vegetable grower has prospered, then let him help those around him who are less fortunate.

We hope all of you will read this "Letter To The Editor" today and hope you know of some way to help those poor needy by giving them a part of "the peaches you can't sell but just lay there and rot."

RETAIL SALES UP

The Federal Reserve Board reported recently that retail sales continued to gain momentum in May and that, in the latter half of the month, reached a level seven per cent above the level prevailing a year ago.

The Board said industrial production had remained practically constant in March, April and May, at a level of activity which was fifteen per cent above that of May, 1952. Department store sales, which slackened in April, rose considerably in the first three weeks of May.

Altogether, the Board report showed no sharp downturn in industrial activity in March, April and May. On the contrary, the record so far shows that industrial production, taken as a whole, remains at a high level and that retail sales have gained considerable momentum in recent weeks and are now at a figure exceeding the 1952 mark—which was considered an exceltionally prosperous year.

MALES: THE WEAKER SEX

Dr. Einer Perman, head surgeon of a large Stockholm hospital, says the male sex is much weaker than the female. The surgeon's statement is similar to others of that nature made by prominent doctors and surgeons for many years.

The female sex has proven superior in many tests of endurance and males have proven less durable and less flexible. This is apparently borne out by the average life span of men and women, men dying at an earlier age, on the average.

Dr. Perman advises the average male to let his wife run the house and wash the dishes. Men, he says, should relax when they come home from work and should take as many naps as possible. This is the advice men have long awaited, although they may have difficulty in following it.

CONGRESSIONAL Quiz

Q—Besides trying to prevent delivery of strategic goods to Iron Curtain countries, are we doing anything to keep this material here where we can use it?

A—Yes. The Export Control Act gives the Secretary of Commerce power to prevent scarce defense materials from leaving the country. The Senate and House have voted to extend the Act, scheduled to expire June 30, 1953, but differ on length of the extension.

Q—Can information obtained in telephone wire tapping be used as evidence in federal courts?

A—Such evidence is not admissible in federal courts, but a House Judiciary Subcommittee is considering bills to permit limited court use of wire-tap evidence in national security cases.

A—The Senate May 6 passed and sent to the House a bill by Sen. Pat McCarran (D., Nev.) to require all 48 states to recognize the legality of divorces which are accepted in any state.

Q—How much does the United States pay in United Nations "dues"?

A—During fiscal 1953, the U. S. paid $15,440,860 toward the UN's assessment budget. The House May 5 passed and sent to the Senate a fiscal 1954 appropriation bill for the State, Justice and Commerce Departments which includes $15,167,040 for the UN assessment. The UN assesses percentages of the total, and Congress appropriates the dollar equivalent. The U.S. share is gradually being reduced to one-third. In addition to dues, the U.S. makes other dollar contributions to the UN and other international organizations.

TREE-CLIMBING DOG

Memphis, Tenn. — The fox terrier belonging to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kerr has made quite a name for himself. When Pepper chases a cat up a tree, he goes up the tree after the cat. After the dog tackled a tree that was a little too high for him, Mr. Kerr built a ladder which Pepper uses to get to the first limb, from which he clambers on up into the tree.

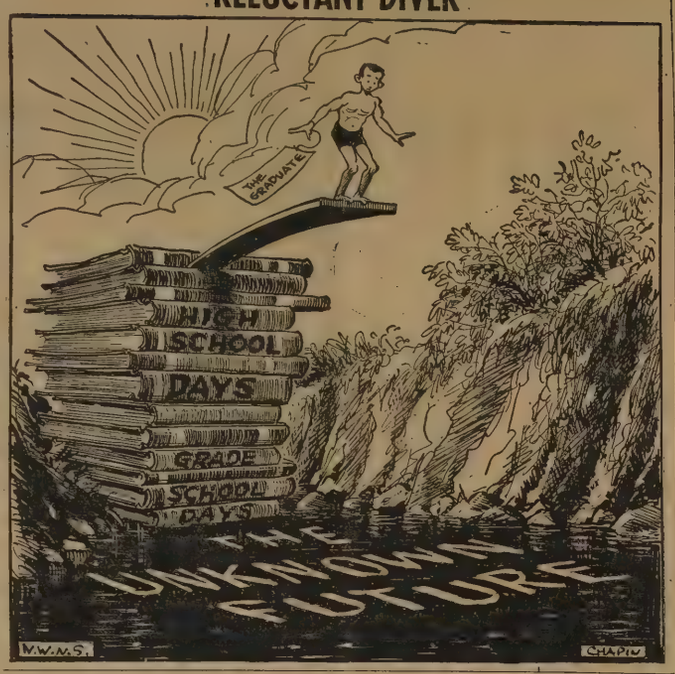
RELUCTANT DIVER



Around OUR HOUSE

by Kathryn Tucker Windham

Things are almost back to normal again around our house.

The head of the House is back home from the hospital, and the doctors say he will soon be completely well. To quote the six-year-old.

"We are rejoiced."

One hot afternoon recently when the baby (she's nine months old now, has eight teeth and shows promise of learning to walk before too long) was rather fretful, the next door neighbor came by.

"What this baby needs," she said, giving her usual good advice, "is some water to play in."

So we put the baby down in the middle of the kitchen floor with a shallow pan of water in front of her. In a few minutes she was splashing and laughing, having a wonderful time getting herself and the floor all drippy.

It was the neighbor down the street, the one with the big family, who helped us solve the baby's teething problem. We had tried almost everything to relieve her swollen, aching gums when this neighbor offered a simple solution.

"Tie some crushed ice securely in a clean cloth and give it to her to chew on," she suggested.

It worked wonders.

Now if we could only find some magical remedy for the four-year-old's red bug bites!

Our neighbor around the corner likes to have plants growing in pots on her kitchen window sills, but she doesn't like the ugly water marks the pots leave on the sills.

She had almost decided the marks were a necessary evil until she learned of the paraffin treatment. She melted some paraffin in a pan on her stove and dipped the bottome of the pots in it, letting the wax soak into the pores and harden. Now her window sills are spotless.

That same paraffin used on the bottoms of flower pots can make stubborn windows much easier to raise. Rub some of it on the cords or along the facing, and the windows will glide easily and swiftly.

Soften 1 tablespoon gelatin in 2 tablespoons cold water. Dissolve in ½ cup hot orange juice. When cool, add ¾ cup orange juice, 1 tablespoon lemon juice and ¼ cup sugar. Chill until slightly thickened. Then fold in 1 cup orange segments and 1 cup fresh sliced peaches. Place in individual molds and chill until firm. When ready to serve, garnish with slices of peaches and oranges and top with mayonnaise.

THE MISSION OF THE RADIANT HEART

A popular grouch is not to be found. He may be highly competent in his chosen vocation and may therefore be much in demand. As a professional man or as a mechanic he may be sought after, but usually his relationship with other people ends just there. The company of an ill-tempered, sulky person is never sought.

Among all the Chinamen that you have ever seen in this country, did you ever meet one who did not greet you with a smile? Do you know the reason for that placid cheerfulness of the Chinese that is so much a part of them? It is that their ancient philosophy laid major emphasis upon what we call disposition. Courtesy, politeness, graciousness, with the orientals were merely disposition in daily action. Had they been possessors of our Bible they would have underscored the sentence quoted here, "A man that hath friends must show himself friendly."

The American Chinaman brings that ancient teaching down to date.

During the last half of the nineteenth century, the best known man in the great city of Boston was Phillips Brooks, Rector of Trinity Episcopal Church, later Bishop of the Diocese. An intellectual giant was that man, known for the eloquence of his tongue and the mighty power of his pen. But the popularity of Bishop Brooks did not hinge upon his mental prowess, but upon his radient disposition. It was a common saying that no matter how gloomy the day, when Phillips Brooks walked down Newspaper Row the sun would shine.

Who should be the bestowers of the constant benediction of friendly hearts? Those who appreciate the goodness of God. That makes friendly with people. That is the psychology of it.

The writer of this article was once invited to preach to the patients in the Hospital for Lepers at Carville, Louisiana. He wondered beforehand how it would be possible to take any word of cheer to a crowd of people suffering from leprosy. Imagine his surprise when he walked into the hospital chapel and found all those afflicted people singing the old Gospel song, "Brighten the Corner Where You Are!" There it is in a nutshell.

Discontent and grouchiness cannot live where Christian trust prevails.

The chemical industry, which depends upon coal for a large portion of its source materials, will have to increase today's output by three-and-a-half times in order to meet demands in the coming quarter-century.

YOUR Health

"Your Health" is presented by your physician as a health service of The Medical Association of the State of Alabama.

CROSS EYES

Cross eyes is a condition that may be present at birth or develop early in life and which, if neglected, may cause strong psychological changes in the child as well as result in blindness.

Cross eyes is present when one eye is turned in or out, up or down, affecting either or both eyes. At first the eyes may cross for only short intervals, particularly when the child is tired or following an illness. Cross eyes may also be due to unequal development of one or more of the six delicate muscles to each eye; and this, in turn, produces an unequal action in the coordinating muscles. This muscle defect is more commonly the type of cross eyes which is present at birth.

Vision is present at birth, but sharp vision develops after birth and depends largely on the manner in which the eyes are used. If the eyes are straight, the reflex of the image falls on the special central focusing spot of the retina. The reflex actions set up in turn the reflexes which aid in the development of sight and sometimes the sensory development of the brain centers.

If one eye is not straight, its vision will not develop as quickly or as sharply as that of the straight eye. Unless the condition is corrected, blindness may occur in the eye through disuse.

The psychological effect on the child with cross eyes is important. Often the target of unkind remarks by his playmates, the child withdraws emotionally.

Treatment before the age of four years obtains normal vision in most patients, but the percentage declines as the child grows older although correction can still be accomplished to a certain extent.

Our sight is a possession that, unfortunately, is not always appreciated until it is lost. Give your child the right of appreciation. Help him to do well at school by helping him to see well. Remember cross eyes can be corrected.

CHILTON SENT FOUR HEADS TO HEALTH DEPARTMENT WITH POSITIVE RABIES

Montgomery — The 535 animal heads examined for rabies found to be positive last year at the laboratories of the State Department of Health and other Alabama laboratories included 4 sent in from Chilton County. The Department made the announcement today.

The state total included 400 dags, 69 foxes, 46 cows, 19 cats and one goat.

Most of the examinations were made by the State Health Department's Bureau of Laboratories. However, some were made at Alabama Polytechnic Institute, the U. S. Public Health Service's Virus Laboratory and the Tuskegee Institute School of Veterinary Medicine.

The New York Journal of Commerce reports that approximately 28,000 persons are killed in home accidents every year. Another 100,000 are permanently crippled.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Calera, Ala., Rt. 1

From Someone Trying To Please Our Saviour, Jesus Christ, Who Is Above All—

Dear Editor:

Please, this is to all of you that have peach farms. Will you all be kind enough to let people that is not able to buy any peaches to can, have what you can't sell. You know there is peaches you can't sell and as you know they just lay there and rot, and if all you who owns them would be neighborly enough and you could help many a hungry person that can't even buy a bushel. For I know there is people like myself, that ain't got the show that some in this world has but after awhile when our Saviour, our Lord, Jesus Christ, comes, we will all have justice. So will you please think this over for as you know there is many peaches that does no one any good and if you come to think of it two of the greatest commandments is Love God with all thine heart, mind and strength, and love your neighbor as thy self. Well, if we can't help while we are on earth together, you sure won't have that chance after our Lord comes. So please, take notice to this and help the poor people that don't have the money to help themselves. Just a poor woman hoping to help. May God bless everyone.

The Lord knows who I am.

WALLET BACK; FEE DEDUCTED

TOO EXCITED

Schenectady, N. In better light, the woman proved to be a stranger. Apologies were skipped — everyone understood.

ACROSS the DESK

ideas from other editors

From the South Pasadena Review, South Pasadena, Calif.: Each week makes it clearer that President Eisenhower has a fantastically difficult job simply to put his policies into effect. Last week it was the Department of Interior which provided the most glaring examples of the problem.

First off, Interior Secretary McKay sought to displace two holdover bureau chiefs who apparently disagreed with him. From the howl of New Deal opposition, it might easily have been surmised that McKay proposed to give the Reds 10 atom bombs rather than fire a couple of subordinates.

Finally, McKay discovered that to get rid of Richard Boke, the New Dealish regional reclamation director from California, he would have to eliminate the office, as Boke is protected by civil service.

Would it be bad to get rid of this bureau? The Reclamation Bureau has for the past several years been trying to do the work of the Army Engineers and the regular Interior Department.

From the Lake Worth Herald, Lake Worth, Florida: The claim that opening the (relief) rolls to the public will embarrass recipients of aid, apparently is made more to cover up the chiselers . . . than to actually embarrassment occurring when the rolls have been opened to the public, but there has been considerable improvement in the reduction of funds wantonly spent in the wrong direction.

From the Brookfield Courier, Brookfield, N. Y.: Annual meetings of corporations occur in great numbers every April. In the month just ended, these meetings give an encouraging glimpse of plans for pressing onward with expansion of facilities to serve civilian consumer demand.

Both large and small companies expressed this optimism. Favored fields for growth included chemicals, oil refining, motor, rubber, household appliances, and gas and electric utilities.

Textile companies have little hope of expanding, although they will spend some money shifting to use the new synthetic fibers. The railroads are ordering fewer cars, but they have a vast amount of plant improvement behind them.

Cutbacks in government housing, if they actually occur, will be accompanied by higher interest rates which should move more private money into this field. All in all, the economic skies are still bright.

Report from Washington

BY

ARMISTEAD SELDEN

Congressman, Sixth District

President Eisenhower is making rapid and extensive use of his powers to reorganize executive branches of the government.

Early in February he signed a bill which gave him authority to submit plans to Congress for changes in government departments. The authority expires April 1, 1955.

Such plans for reorganizing branches of the government become law in 60 days after they are submitted by the President unless they are disapproved by vote of a constitutional majority of either the House or Senate. A constitutional majority is a majority of all the House or Senate members rather than the majority of those who are present when the voting takes place. In the case of the House, the necessary majority is 218 votes. Congress has the authority to submit bills for passage of reorganization plans which, if approved, make the plans effective in less than 60 days.

Former President Truman used his reorganization powers from 1949 to 1952. A major reorganization plan went into effect during the last year of his administration. It placed all jobs in the Bureau of Internal Revenue under Civil Service except that of the top commissioner. Under the plan, the 64 offices of Collector of Internal Revenue were abolished.

Two Plans Approved—

Since he began using reorganization powers, President Eisenhower has already seen two of his plans go into effect. The first one established the Department of Health, Education and Welfare which replaced the Federal Security Administration and made the head of the new department a member of the President's cabinet.

The President's second plan is one to reorganize the Department of Agriculture. A number of House members sought to bring this plan to the floor for debate. But it was evident that the required constitutional majority necessary to block the plan was lacking, and the effort to bring the proposal to the floor was defeated. The Senate had previously failed to disapprove the plan. As a result, the second reorganization plan of 1953 went into effect at midnight on June 3, exactly 60 days after it was submitted by the President.

The major difference between the two approved reorganization plans is, of course, that the first one created an entirely new governmental department — the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. The second plan is designed to allow reorganization in an already long-standing governmental branch, the Department of Agriculture.

Reorganization of the Agriculture Department is aimed at simplifying and improving its internal operation. President Eisenhower hopes the changes will place the administration of farm programs close to state and local levels and will adapt the administration of the program to regional, state and local conditions. It is also generally believed that the reorganization will bring about substantial savings in the Department.

The Agriculture Department presently has only one assistant secretary, but the new plan provides for two additional assistant secretaries and an administrative assistant to help in supervising the Department. The secretaries will be appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate. The administrative assistant will be a Civil Service appointee of the Secretary of the Department with the President's approval. Secretary of Agriculture Benson says that both the number of employees and the total of their salaries in the office of the Secretary will be less than prior to January 1, 1953.

Other Proposals—

Besides the two reorganization plans already in effect, four more were recently submitted to Congress by the President. They are plans to (1) Reorganize the Council of Economic Advisers to obtain "the best economic thinking in the country." The proposal includes revamping the Council to re-establish a three-member Board with its own staff. The Chairman of the Board would report to the President on Council activities.

(2) Transfer from the Post Office Department to the Civil Aeronautics Board the responsibility for payment of airmail subsidies and provide for "a complete and formal separation of subsidy from compensatin for the transportation of mail."

(3) Consolidate in a new Foreign Operations Administration under State Department policy control all foreign assistance and related economic programs which are now scattered among several different agencies.

(4) Centralize in a new United States Information Agency the information activities of the Mutual Security Agency, Technical Cooperation Administration, the Voice of America and he programs financed in connection with government in occupied areas. The proposed agency would be controlled by the State Department.

Big Interest In Reforms—

President Eisenhower believes that approval of his reorganization plans will be major steps toward economy and increased efficiency in government. And the President is obviously not alone in his beliefs in governmental reform. His first two plans received sufficient support to put them into effect. Other than that, another indication of growing interest in governmental reform is the fact that innumerable bills calling for various reorganization plans have been introduced by Congressmen themselves. Some of the proposals have gained popularity while others remain highly controversial.

But, as I predicted in an earlier column, this year will probably see big changes in several branches of the federal government. Whether or not they will be as constructive as President Eisenhower believes remains to be seen.

County Chamber Of Commerce To Hold Monthly Meetings

J. Hollis Jackson, President of the Chilton County Chamber of Commerce, has announced that the regular monthly meeting of the Board of Directors will be conducted in the private dining room of the City Grill at 12 o'clock noon, Monday, June 1. At the same time President Jackson also announced the final full-membership meeting of the Chamber would be conducted at 8 o'clock Thursday night, June 11, at the Clanton City Hall Auditorium. Mr. Jackson explained that this meeting would be the final meeting of the fiscal year for the Chamber and that new officers would be chosen and installed at that time. The nominating committee for the Chamber has already met and have picked their slate. Other nominations will be invited from the floor at the June meeting, said Mr. Jackson.

Sunday's Sermon

Paul Champions Christian Liberty.
Lesson for June 14: Galatians 2: 1-10, 19-21.
Golden Text: Galatians 3: 26.

Paul was the first to see Christianity as a world religion. And he succeeded in having the barriers of Jewish rites removed from the work of the gospel, as he convinced the council at Jerusalem that circumcision should not be required of Gentile converts.

In Paul's view, the law had been a schoolmaster to bring men to Christ. The law had defined sin, but had shown the utter impossibility of keeping the law against sin, and had prepared men to turn to Jesus for the propitiation for their sins and to gain eternal life. Thus was laid down the great truth that Martin Luther, John Wesley, and others preached to a church that had come to depend upon its rites and ceremonies.

In writing to the Galatians, Paul gives his own testimony to the saving grace of Christ, who died for him on the cross. And the life Paul lived was by faith in the Son of God. He lived in Christ, and Christ lived in him.

So must we live by faith in Christ, that he may live in us and lead us day by day into a larger knowledge of his grace.

ATTENTION FARMERS AND LIVE STOCK FEEDERS ON THE REMOVAL OF FALLEN ANIMALS

For many years we have provided a FREE service for the removal of dead and diseased animals from your farms and feed lots, within a radius of 50 miles of Clanton. We have also paid the telephone charge when our service was desired, notwithstanding the heavy trucking and processing costs involved, because our finished products were bringing a fair value. For the past 6 months values have changed, and today HIDES, GREASE, TALLOW and MEAT SCRAPS are selling at the lowest prices in a decade. In some cases it is difficult to sell them at any price.

With these conditions as they are, and no bright spot for our product to advance in price in the near future, we were forced to do one of two things, either discontinue the collection of fallen animals, or charge a small service charge to defray gasoline and phone costs outside of a 20-mile radius of Montgomery. We believe the farmers and live stock feeders will appreciate our continuation of this collection even though there is a $2.00 service charge for the removal of one or more animals. When the market conditions are back to normal we will discontinue this charge, and will continue on as we have for years.

Please notice, this service charge is for calls outside of a 20-mile radius of Montgomery, the charges $2.00 for one or more animals. We will continue to pay phone charges.

It is far better and cheaper to call us and pay the service charge if you live outside the 20-mile radius, than to bury, burn or leave an animal decompose and contaminate both your herd and your neighbor's.

When our service is needed, call Clanton 400—Collect, Clanton, Alabama. Please pay our driver the service charge at the time of collection and do not call us if the animal has started to decompose after 24 hours as our drivers have orders to leave all decomposed animals.

MURDER BY INCHES

By Bess Leeke

SAM had to break in the door to reach the body of Mrs. Ambros Creighton. With the door locked from the inside and the only other exit from the room two windows overlooking a sheer drop of 60 feet to the Pacific below, it could only be suicide. She had stood on the chair, looped the rope over the ceiling beam, knotted it around her neck, kicked over the chair and—that was it.

Sam picked up the chair and moved it out of the way. He frowned, grabbed the chair and pushed it under the gently swaying feet. The feet cleared it by four inches.

"I went to call her for lunch," Ambros Creighton had said a few minutes before. "The door was locked and when she didn't answer I called you."

The other members of the household were Mrs. Bernice Smythe, the victim's middleaged sister, and Eric and Freida Smythe, Mrs. Smythe's thirty-year-old son and twenty-six year old daughter.

Joy Burton was waiting for him in the hall when Sam came out and closed the door. "It's all right to say Mrs. Creighton committed suicide?"

"No," he told the pretty reporter. "It isn't suicide."

When he questioned Mr. Creighton, Mrs. Smythe, Eric, and Freida he learned Ambros and Mrs. Smythe had both been in the house at the time of the "suicide." Eric had been out in the garage tinkering with his car. Freida had driven into town earlier and returned just before Ambros called the police.

Letting them believe, for the present, it was suicide, Sam drew Joy aside and asked, "What do you know about these people?"

"Well," she answered, "The money all belonged to Mrs. Creighton, inherited from her first husband. The others are poor relations, so to speak.

"It's rumored that Mr. Creighton has been seeking other interests at a certain apartment building up-town.

"Mrs. Smythe, a widow, has fallen for some man with no money and not much reputation. Her sister didn't approve."

"Well, Eric is quite a gambler. He made a trip to Las Vegas a few weeks ago. Since then he's been seeing a big-time gambler.

Sam asked thoughtfully, "What about swimming?"

"I don't know."

"You get on the phone and find out if any one of them, Creighton or any of the Smythes are good swimmers or divers. I'll be back in a minute," he told her.

Sam met her in the hallway later with a bundle under his arm, "What did you find out?"

"In his day, about thirty years ago, Mr. Creighton did some swimming. Mrs. Smythe doesn't go in for it at all. Eric is the bathing beach type swimmer but Freida won a swimming contest about three years ago."

"What about diving?"

"She won second place a couple of times in high diving—Sam, you aren't thinking—"

"That I am! Want to come along and hear?"

"You bet."

"I couldn't have killed her," Freida cried, "The door was locked from the inside. I wasn't even here."

"You did leave the estate, but walked back, came through the back, knocked her out, locked the door, hanked her, then kicked over the chair. You dived out the window, swam around to the beach and your car, dressed, then drove back."

"That's crazy. It's 60 feet or more to the water," she screamed.

Sam held up the bundle, "A wet bathing suit, cap, and towel in the trunk of your car and your high diving record—that and four inches make you a murderess."

"Sam, darling, you're wonderful," Joy beamed.

The Mirror - An Honest Friend

(By William Crowe)

"For I say, through the grace given unto me, to every man that is among you, not to think of himself more highly than he ought to think."— Romans 12:3.

It ever a bit of homely advice was of supreme importance, here it is. From the beginning of the Bible to the very end we find warnings against the fatal result of self-deceit.

The mirror never flatters. It tells the exact truth. If we discard its report, trouble invariably follows. For example, it is not difficult for one to imagine that Eve might have leaned over a placid pool in the Garden of Eden and concluded by the reflection therein that she was much more of a person than she really was, and thereby, at the promoting of Satan, asserted her importance as superior to that of her Creator. Thence came the race-wide disaster which accounts for all human failures down to our own day. That Garden scene was evidently not far from the mind of a later sage when he wrote, "Pride goeth before destruction and a haughty spirit before a fall."

What does one see when she (or he) stands before a looking-glass? A very ordinary person, just like millions of others of her (or his) generation. And yet — and yet — how easy it is to persuade one's self that the mirror doesn't do justice to the subject. There is where pride takes the reins and drives one to ruin.

Analyze the idea and we have:

1. The silliness of over-emphasizing ancestry. Sir Thomas Overby once remarked that the man who has nothing to boast of but his ancestor is like a potato—the only good belonging to him is under the ground.

2. The silliness of intellectual superiority. A highbrow is said to be a person who is educated above his intelligence, and tells you things you already know in language that you cannot understand.

3. The silliness of determing personal influence by material wealth. The only difference between the rich young ruler and the prodigal son is a few slumps in the stock market.

And so we might proceed to a further analysis. This is sufficient. The only estimate of human life worth a farthing is that based on one's Christian character, the very heart of which is tacitly declared in the advice heading this homily. "I say to every man not to think of himself more highly than he ought to think."

Alabama Highlights

The civil government of Alabama virtually ended with the capture of the City of Montgomery in April, 1865, following the War Between the States. And after Governor Watts was captured in May of that year, all semblance of government ceased.

After May, 1865, Alabama was overrun with deserters, stragglers and those who by some means had managed to stay out of active service in the war entirely. Soldiers from the army of northern Virginia, which had surrendered at Appomattox on April 9th, were returning rapidly to their homes, the Negro slaves had been set free and everything in the shape of either civil or military authority was in a chaotic condition.

On June 21, 1865, President Andrew Johnson, acting under the clause in the U. S. Constitution that required the U. S. "to guarantee to each state a republican form of government and protect each state against invasion and domestic violence," appointed Lewis E. Parsons, of Talladega County, Provisional Governor.

After Lewis E. Parsons, of Talladega County had been named Provisional Governor of Alabama in 1865, one of his first duties was to call a convention that was to "make such changes in the state constitution as would meet the changed conditions" and to recommend to the governor such ordinances as "would more speedily restore peace and order." This convention, its delegates elected by popular vote, met in Montgomery on September 12, 1865.

On September 12, 1865, delegates chosen by popular vote met in Montgomery in an effort to bring some order from the chaos which had resulted from the end of the War Between the States. They adopted this resolution: "Resolved that his excellency, L. E. Parsons, Provisional Governor of the State of Alabama, in view of the lawlessness and violence that prevail in many counties of this state, be respectfully requested to organize and call out one or more companies of militia in each county as soon as practicable, to aid in repressing disorder and preserving the public peace; and to this end, this convention hereby authorizes and empowers the Provisional Governor to adopt such measures as he may think necessary and proper for that purpose."

Governor Parsons took immediate steps to organize such militia. This service was entirely voluntary and was to be for a period of six months. The general plan seems to have been for the delegate or delegates from a county to request the Governor to organize a company or companies in his or their respective county. The governor was to name the company commander with a rank of Colonel. Each company was to have a captain, two lieutenants, three sergeants and not less than 40 enlisted men.

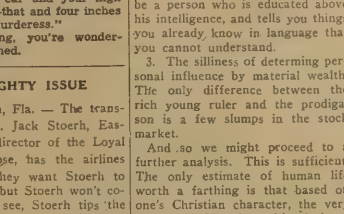
LAFF OF THE WEEK

"Oh, you poor dear—you've had another tough day at the office!"



SLENDER food budgets can be stretched and meals made interesting by making plentiful use of the following food-saving tips:

Poultry and meat leftovers should be stored as quickly after their serving as possible to prevent spoilage. When large enough pieces are available, serve sliced or heat in sauce or gravy.

Small chunks and pieces of meat go well in hearty salads, quick stews, hash or spaghetti dishes.

Tag ends of meat and poultry can be utilized in omelets, stuffed peppers or tomatoes, croquettes, etc. Use a food grinder to get them easily into small pieces.

Bones and small pieces of meat can always be simmered with green or yellow vegetables, potatoes, noodles, beans or rice to make hearty, nourishing soups.

Save your drippings and refrigerate them. They're tasty to use for sauteeing white or sweet potatoes, tomato or onion slices, apple rings, eggs, French toast, bananas or fish.

Drippings from ham, sausage or bacon are especially tasty when they're used for seasoning green or lima bean dishes, cooked greens, Spanish rice or scalloped potatoes.

What about leftover rolls? Split, butter and toast them under the broiler. If desired, sprinkle them with celery, caraway or poppy seed or grated cheese before broiling for a most delicious flavor.

Use a combination of leftover fruits and berries as a topping for a bowl of cereal. Leftover canned cereals are good in this way, too.

Recipe of the Week

Untie This Package For School Funds

EVERYBODY AGREES . . . that his child should have the best teachers to be had. But good teachers cost money. At present salaries, they cannot be secured or held in Alabama, at either public school or college level in the number needed.

Since schools closed, many Alabama teachers, experienced and beginning, are looking elsewhere for jobs. This, at a time when school doors are opening next Fall for the 87,242 children born in 1947 (a record number of births). Who will teach them? Where will they sit? If one of these young hopefuls is YOURS, you are much concerned with the answers.

A proposal to use the Educational Trust Fund Surplus for teachers' salaries is now pending before the Legislature. This would provide an appreciable increase but not enough to hold our best teachers.

The AEA is asking that the State increase yearly appropriations for teachers' salaries by at least ten per cent.

THIS WOULD COST { FOR PUBLIC SCHOOL SALARIES ABOUT $4,942,000 (To provide for additional teachers as needed and for improved training would require $2 million more.) FOR COLLEGE SALARIES ABOUT $1,400,000

MAKE ALABAMA TEACHING ATTRACTIVE

An Alabama business man recently visited a north Florida city. Upon calling at the school superintendent's office he observed six Alabama teachers waiting for interviews.

A South Alabama superintendent went to one of Alabama's teachers' colleges seeking teachers among the recent graduates. He found only six not already placed. None of the six was interested in the salaries he had to offer.

A principal and his wife lately resigned from one of Alabama's larger school systems to accept positions in Florida. Their combined salaries will total $2,800 more than they received in Alabama.

WHERE TO GET THE MONEY

1. KEEP SCHOOL TAX REVENUE FOR SCHOOLS ONLY.

House Bill 19 would use school money for building auditoriums and a residence at three of the agricultural sub-stations. House Bill 26 would use school money for research in the control of the pink boll worm. These services are more closely related to agriculture than to education. Why not finance them from agricultural funds?

2. MAKE SCHOOL TAXES WORK FOR SCHOOLS AS INTENDED.

Forty-One sales tax exemptions cost the schools $33 million a year. House Bill 167 would increase this loss by exempting the sales of caskets and burial supplies from sales and use taxes. Why add another exemption?

3. UNTIE THIS $33 MILLION PACKAGE OF ITEMS EXEMPTED FROM THE SALES TAX AND PUT THEM TO WORK FOR SCHOOLS.

Most of the sales tax collected is used for this purpose. But $33 million in potential receipts from the sales tax are never collected. They are wrapped up in a package of 41 exempted items on which no sales tax is paid. Untie this $33 million package. Provide your child with that good teacher you want him to have. Finance an adequate school building program. Help equalize the tax burden.

"I REMEMBER"
BY THE OLD TIMERS

From Mrs. Clara Mattingly, Louisville, Ky.: I remember when ice cream was sold from wagons (horse drawn) along the streets of Louisville. It was in bulk and we would take a bowl to the wagon and get it filled for a quarter. Also, the waffle man would drive along the street, making and selling hot waffles, generously sprinkled with sugar and cinnamon; or just plain powdered sugar. The waffle man had a stove in the wagon on which he cooked the waffles. And I remember, too, when men and boys would rise and give women a seat in public conveyances.

From C. C. James, Columbia, Louisiana: I well remember when mother made father's pants, as well as the 'boys', without a pattern. She sewed the suspenders without an adjustment, to the pants in one length. I also remember when coffee mills were so scarce that if one family in a settlement owned one, it was made available to the entire community.

From Hattie Sargent, Holdrege, Nebraska: I remember when the prairies were strewn with piles of bleached buffalo bones waiting the coming of the railroad to be shipped out. We were told they were used in sugar factories. The revenue received was a great help to the early settlers.

A PEEK AT THE STARS

By LYN CONNELLY

DON McNEILL'S "Breakfast Club" celebrates its 20th anniversary on the air next month . . . The Baby Club which Don started November 24 will continue its membership drive until the anniversary broadcast on June 23 . . . The new club is going amazingly well considering the fact that a baby must be born during the hour the program is on the air to be eligible . . . There are more than 2,000 members, with all states and Canada, Alaska, Hawaii, England and Ireland represented . . . Feature member of the new fraternity is Desiderio Alberto Arnaz IV, born January 19, probably the most famous baby in America today, thanks to the TV popularity of his parents, Lucille Ball & Desi Arnaz.

Don has come a long way since the first broadcast of "Breakfast Club" back on June 23, 1933 . . . In those days the program was known as "The Pepper Pot" and it wasn't expected to last too long . . . It probably wouldn't have except for the warmth and every day logic brought to it by the personable young emcee, fresh out of Marquette University . . . Today the show ranks as one of the oldest and most popular in radio and one destined to remain as long as folks continue to go for a mixture of good old-fashioned corn, sentiment and music.

AUDIENCE STARS

The real stars of the Breakfast Club, toastmaster McNeill has always contended, are the program's listeners and studio visitors . . . Their personalities on being interviewed, their contributions to "Memory Time" and their "hidden talents" are the nucleus of the program . . . There is "Smilin' Bill" Mahoney who appears every St. Patrick's Day and puts on a rousing show with his Irish songs, jigs and concertina . . . There is "Mrs. Smith," who visits the show once or twice a week and confides her "troubles"—universal among housewives—to Don, and courageous Jimmie Darou

Don and his gang have reached a milestone but even with the ever-increasing popularity of TV, we feel "Breakfast Club" is good for as long as there is an America . . . and Don McNeill, Ambassador of Corn.

They visited the Carlsbad Caverns, the Grand Canyon, and just about every other place of interest between Los Angeles and Clanton. Many are the stories told about the care Gen. Smedley D. Butler always took in looking after the welfare of the men in his command —especially as regarded their food. One relates that when he was in command of one Camp in France, he met two soldiers carrying a large soup kettle from the kitchen. "Here you," he ordered, "let me taste that." "But Gen—"

Yes, Sir!" the soldier replied, and running back in the kitchen, brought a spoon.

The General took the desired taste, and gingerly spat it out. "You don't call that stuff soup, do you?" he shouted. "No sir, replied the soldier, "that's what I was trying to tell you—it's dishwater, sir!"

Chairman Scott Announces

Peach Festival Plans Near Completion

BARBARA DAVIDSON

JUDITH ANN WILLIAMS

Blaring bands, marching feet, streets lined with people from all over Alabama! That's the order of the day as plans near completion for the 1953 Peach Festival, which will be conducted in the City Park here in Clanton on Wednesday, July 8th.

General Chairman Dick Scott has reported that the plans for the whole one-day affair are very near completion and Mrs. Erle Ellis reports that the names of the Peach Kueen contestants are entered from every part of the county.

As this story is being written announcements are being made that there will be bus loads of people both from Montgomery and Birmingham, and thousands of others are expected from every other section of the state and surrounding states. Scott said that although last year's crowd was estimated at better than 15,000, he hoped and expected that the streets of Clanton and the city park would be jammed with many more thousands of people.

The huge hangar at the Airport is now buzzing with all kinds of activities as members of the float-making organization get frame work and hundreds of yards of crepe paper in readiness for the building of the many floats that will be entered in this year's parade. Reedie Taylor is in charge of the selling of these floats and he already has many ordered.

On the day of the great event, the huge parade will make it's formation in Thorsby and will make it's way south on Highway 31 to Clanton under the guidance of the ffestival safety officer, Sheriff Luther Kendrick. Included in the parade will be the many beautiful girls, all of the floats, huge and colorful bands from every part of the state, and members of the U. S. Marine Corps.

Following the speech-making, the crowning of the Peach Queen and King and the fun-making auction of the prize peaches of the county, a huge barbecue is being planned by Cecil Ramsey, the chairman of this committee. In the afternoon it is planned to have ball games and band concerts to round out the days' activities.

The latest of the contestants to be entered in the Peach Queen contest is Miss Pat Broadhead, who is being sponsored by Johnson's Fashion Shop. In making this announcement, Mrs. Ellis pointed out two things pertaining to the Peach Queen contest. The first being that the girls do not have to be sponsored by any organization, either civic or commercial. The second point brought out by Mrs. Ellis is that she urges everyone who is contemplating entering the contest to please do so as soon as possible. This latter reason is important because it is not possible for the Peach Queen committee to make final plans for all of the girls until all the names have been entered.

OLD FASHIONED BOX SUPPER AT CANE CREEK

There will be an old-fashioned box supper next Friday night at Cane Creek Club House. The box supper, which is being sponsored by the Home Demonstration Club, will start at 7:30 o'clock.

Everyone has a cordial invitation to attend and the ladies are asked to bring a box to be auctioned off, and the men are asked to bring their pocket books.

Mrs. J. W. Wood says it will be just an old-fashioned party.

MOATES SEES ATOMIC SHELL

Army Cpl. Charles F. Moates, whose wife, lives on Route 1, Box 58, Dadeville, Ala., witnessed the first test-firing of an atomic shell from the Army's giant cannon at Camp Desert Rock, Nev., this week.

He was one of nearly 3,000 officers and enlisted men, most of them artillerymen, who crouched behind revetments 4,500 yards from ground zero as scientists fired the huge 280mm. artillery piece by electrical control from a tower ten miles away.

Hail The Size Of Hen Eggs-

Storm Damages Crops In North Part Of County

Although many Chilton County farmers drew a breath of relief late Wednesday when it started to rain, many other farmers in the county were sad Thursday morning after they had surveyed the damage of the hail and strong winds that accompanied the rain in some parts of the area.

Mr. T. E. Wyatt, the new official weather observer for the county, reported to the Chilton County News that the official rain-fall for Wednesday was thirty-eight hundredth of an inch. At the same time he also reported that the high for Wednesday was 99 degrees for recorded at 3:00 p.m., with a low of 67 Wednesday night. Mr. Wyatt also reported that at 8 o'clock Thursday morning the temperature was registered at 79 degrees.

After a hurried survey made by a Chilton County News reporter early Thursday morning it seems that the brunt of Wednesday's storm was struck in an area north of Collins Chapel. Throughout that area many corn fields were laid flat to the ground as a result of the high winds. In front of the home of Mr. H. E. Robinson, Route 1, Clanton, a huge tree was uprooted and blown completely over.

In many instances residents in the area reported that the hail stones were as large as hen's eggs for a short time Wednesday afternoon. In many of the orchards immature peaches were covering the ground where they had either been blown or knocked off the trees by the hail stones. At Mr. A. D. Headley's place it was reported that most of the damage there was to apple trees where many of the apples were on the ground.

Despite one report that a whole apple orchard of young trees had been ripped up, this could not be determined definitely at press time yesterday afternoon.

It was also reported early Thursday morning that there had been considerable damage to peach orchards local in Lillie Hill. However, after a careful check of those orchards it was determined that the amount of damage in this area could be quoted at about 1%.

JUNE CURRENT POPULATION SURVEY TO INCLUDE THE KOREAN VETERANS

Supplementary questions designed to obtain some measure of the impact of the Korean conflict on various types of workers will be asked in the June Current Population Survey, according to District Supervisor Mary G. Auburtin of the Bureau of the Census field office at Clanton, Ala.

The supplementary questions will develop information on the number of men who have seen military service since July 1, 1950, and whether or not these men worked for pay or profit or did unpaid work on a family farm or in a family business during the 1-month period prior to entering the service. The survey will reveal also what kind of a job the veterans worked at longest in the year prior to entering service.

The supplementary questiops are in addition to the regular inquiries on employment and unemployment which are asked each month in the Current Population Survey which is conducted on a sample basis locally and in 67 other areas throughout the country.

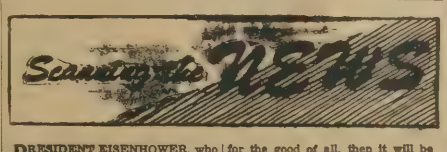
Marion C. Jones Gets Promotion

After having been with the Alabama Power Company for the past 27 years and having progressed step-by-step during all of that time, announcement has been made by the officials of that company that Marion Crit Jones has been promoted to the position of Assistant Superintendent at Lay Dam Hydro Plant.

The announcement was made June 1 by the Division Manager, R. L. Harris. Mr. Jones is a graduate of Chilton County High School. In a memo published by Harris to all Department heads of Birmingham, as well as others, the Division Manager wrote in part: "Mr. Jones is well qualified for discharging his new duties and responsibilities, having progressed through all phases of plant operation before transferring to plant maintenance for more than nine years."

In his new capacity Jones will act for the Plant Superintendent, Mr. Sam Powers.



PRESIDENT EISENHOWER, who as the nation's chief executive makes United States foreign policy, and Senator Robert Taft of Ohio, have expressed differences of opinion on the subject of Korea and the United Nations.

This difference could mean a great deal in the future, or it could mean nothing. As the President expressed it, Mr. Taft has every right to form and express his own opinions.

This sharp difference of opinion between the President and the Senator, called the most powerful figure in Washington excepting, of course, the Chief Executive, came about when the Ohio solon said in a recent speech that if negotiations fail in Korea the U. S. should tell England and other Allied nations "we are withdrawing from all further peace negotiations in Korea."

Senator Taft added, "I believe in the United Nations myself, but not as an effective means to prevent aggression." He then asserted that the U. S. "might as well abandon any idea of working with the United Nations in the East and reserve to ourselves a completely free hand."

World leaders and political observers waited anxiously for the President's reply to these statements. When it came it was blunt. The President asserted he believed in the United Nations and his policy would be to cooperate with the U. N.

Then he landed the most telling point in their difference of opinions. Go it alone in one part of the world, he said, and we will have to go it alone in all parts of the world. The President indicated that if compromise is necessary for the good of all, then it will be his policy to compromise.

As stated before this difference of opinions could mean nothing. However, observers are pointing out that Senator Taft is a powerful figure in GOP policy-making circles. His statement could mean a rebirth of an isolation trend that has not been entirely stamped out of some sections of his party. If he wished he could make future policy decision rather difficult, to put it mildly, for the President.

Does Senator Taft believe in the United Nations, some observers have asked?

The best answer to that is the fact that Senator Taft is an honest man. He would not have said he believed in it if he did not. But there are reservations in the extent of his belief. These reservations are not new, but have not been made public by the Senator as often as in the past.

What worries most members of the Republican party is the fact that Senator Taft has a strong mid-western leaning toward isolation. Is it, they are asking, beginning to get the upper hand again, even in the face of a GOP policy of cooperation with our Allies and the undeniable fact that we are living in a smaller world every day?

Washington observers have been cautious in their speculations concerning the Eisenhower-Taft differences. But most of them are agreed that the Senator's statement came at a bad moment, that is, were badly timed as far as Korean truce negotiations are concerned.

Here again one can say only time will tell the real effect—whether Taft's statement will have great influence, or none.

TWO ALABAMIANS WILL BE WINNERS IN GOODYEAR CONTEST

Akron, O., June 12, 1953 — National program to determine the outstanding soil conservationists in each state on an annual basis, will begin formally July 1, it was announced here today by Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., sponsor of the competition.

Two Alabama men will be among the 100 grand award winners who earn a vacation trip to Arizona for their soil conservation achievements during the ensuing year. One will be the outstanding conservationist selected from among the state's practicing farmers and the other will represent the soil conservation district credited with the best all around job for the year.

For six years the program has been conducted on a regional basis. The program was expanded to national scope as a result of the stimulus given conservation in the 17 states where it has been in effect.

The initial national program will close on April 30, 1954. July 1st starting date was set to avoid conflict with the final regional program being conducted in nine states.

All competition in the national program will be at the state level with winners being chosen by state judging committees selected from among each state's soil conservation leaders.

1953: YEAR OF OPPORTUNITY

Roger M. Blough, vice-chairman of the Board of the United States Steel Corporation, recently told the graduating class of Susquehanna University that this country now offers more opportunity for youth than at any other time in our history. He told the young graduates, "In no other hour in the world's history could you have picked a better time to start wrestling with more really fine opportunities or more really dangerous problems crying to be solved."

This is a theme which has been overlooked by too many speakers in recent months and we think Blough's denunciation of present-day "gloom-vendors" is timely and significant.

The young man or woman starting out in the business world today enters a world in which opportunities and horizons are unlimited. As a citizen of the United States, he or she lives in a country which is the acknowledged leader of all the world. Our standard of living and our earnings are the highest in the world. Our food, our average health and sanitation, our educational attainments and our individual freedom are all landmarks of achievement in world civilization.

There is every indication that our greatest achievements lie ahead of us. Our population is still rising, our income is rising and our standard of living and education is steadily moving upward. Therefore, Blough advises youngsters today to make great plans for the future. He quotes from a "great architect" named Daniel H. Burnham, who, many years ago, offered the following advice, which we recommended to the young man or woman of America in 1953:

"Make no little plans; they have no magic to stir men's blood and probably themselves will not be realized. Make big plans; aim high and hope and work, remembering that a noble logical diagram once recorded will never die, but long after we are gone will be a living thing, asserting itself with ever-growing insistency. Remember that our sons and grandsons are going to do things that would stagger us. Let your watchword be order and your beacon beauty."

DALE CARNEGIE

HAROLD L. DRAKE, 2 Birch Lane, Westfield, Massachusetts, discovered one morning through the study of his production reports that he had failed to issue orders to change their paper machine trim. There had been a whole day's run of a width which would cause a high production loss. He was worried about this loss but he was considerably more worried about having to report the error to his boss.

CARNEGIE

After considerable worry and agitation, he went down the hall to a door marked "General Superintendent" behind which sat a very formidable individual. He grasped the door knob but the muscles in his wrist would not turn. He retreated to get a drink of water, took a walk to the Recreation Room, had a smoke and another drink. Finally he did enter the Superintendent's office, laid the facts on his desk and said there was no excuse for such a serious error on his part.

Things had been going serenely with the Superintendent that morning so the interview wasn't too uncomfortable. In fact, together they figured how to cut the loss considerably.

Several similar incidents occurred before he realized his real problem; that a similar condition exists among those who go to public beaches. There is a type of bather who enters the cold water toe by toe, squealing and protesting. There is another type who dashes in, gets it over and enjoys himself that much sooner.

When he realized this, he knew that when he had a disagreeable task ahead he must be the type to take the plunge, admit his error without passing the buck, for he knew that the result could not be anywhere near as bad as his worry would picture.

For years the lovely Coosa-Tallapoosa Lakes have been referred to as the "Backwaters" and as the term implies, Backwaters they are, according to definition. A name or a brand can sometimes be very unbecoming and impersonal, thus repelling rather than attracting. Many Alabamians and out-of-Staters have heard of the backwaters of the Coosa River but never bothered to visit because backwaters sounds like some kind of a swamp or dead lake. This misconception has done much to stem the recreational development on several of Central Alabama's most beautiful bodies of water.

Lake Jordan, only 30 miles from Montgomery, contains about 6,000 acres and offers 142 miles of shoreline. It is well stocked with game fish, and has been declared by a noted fish biologist as having more fish per acre than any other lake in the State. Chance visitors from all parts of the country say that this is truly a delightful find, not listed in their travel folder.

Last week, a Montgomery fisherman said that this was his first visit to Lake Jordan, and was shocked to find such a fishing lake so near his home. That is a typical story of many others that are finding their way to Lake Jordan.

During the past four years as the term backwater has faded and been replaced by definite names, a transformation has taken place. Modern lakeshore cottages are being constructed along a shoreline that not too long ago was a wilderness. Picnickers and vacationers are coming in ever increasing numbers, and fishing lodges are steadily improving their facilities to vie for many new customers.

Lakes Lay, Mitchell and Jordan on the Coosa River, and Lakes Martin, Yates and Thurlow on the Tallapoosa River are all similar, but each has an individual unsurpassed beauty. Make it a point to visit each lake and see for yourself. While you are there you are invited to tour the power plants where a congenial guide will be happy to show you how electricity is made.

Last week's early mornings and late afternoons round-up of whoppers for the Alabama Power Company Fishing Contest are as follows:

Lake Martin—

Lake Hill Inn, Highway 241 River Bridge, near Alexander City, reports: J. L. Smith, 129 Iris Avenue, Alexander City, fly fished Elkahatchee Creek with a popping bug and caught a nice string of Bluegills and a 4 pound, 4 ounce Largemouth Bass.

Fred Wilder, Southside Standard Service Station, Dadeville, reports: B. G. Clark, Lafayette, caught his string of Largemouth Bass from Rocky Branch. The best catch was 4 pounds, 11 ounces and wigglers was the type bait used. Charles W. Sanford, Jr., Dadeville, had his fun in the Smith Mountain area. Charles used a popping fly to snag a whoppin' 5 pound, 1 ounce Largemouth Bass.

Lake Lay—

J. W. Blalock's Fishing Camp, just above Lay Dam and near Clanton, reports: Preston Garrett and Wilton Downing, Clanton, took a nice string of Large and Smallmouth Bass from the mouth of Paint Creek. Their best individual catch was a 4 pound, 5 ounce Largemouth Bass.

G. O. Norred's General Store, Talladega Springs, reports: Bunyan Parker, Sylacauga, used worms for bait and Rock Springs Creek to pole in a 15 ounce Shellcracker along with several other nice ones.

B. J. Phillips' Paint & Sporting Goods Store, Sylacauga, reports: Blanchard Brown and C. N. Porter, Sylacauga, were fishing Blue Springs Creek with a small popping fly and creeled the limit on Bream and 15 Bass. Blanchard hit the jackpot when he boated a 15-ounce Bluegill.

Lake Mitchell—

L. F. Cox's Fishing Camp, Cargile Creek, near Verbena, reports: Mrs. M. L. Perdue, Birmingham, caught a nice string of Bass from Cargile Creek while using a small spoon as bait. Leon Kontos, Birmingham, hooked 10 Smallmouth Bass weighing 19 pounds, 14 ounces. His largest catch was 3 pounds, 14 ounces. John Brown, Birmingham, J. C. Jones, Sweetwater, and Leonard Speigner, their guide, boated 30 Bass and Crappie that weighed better than 50 pounds.

O. E. Oglesby, Mims Ferry Fishing Camp, below Lay Dam, near Clanton, reports: Frank Agrimi, T. P. Pearce and son, Billy, 2420 South 10th Avenue, Birmingham, used live minnows and a Torpeda Plug to string 15 Smallmouth Bass that weighed 22½ pounds. Scott Richards, Birmingham, and Jeff O. Miller, Clanton, had a successful day about the Islands near the ferry. A nice string of Bream and Bass were taken on a black and white Shimmy popper fly.

Chief Alapoco Says: There aren't many sports more exhilarating, thrilling, and filled with pleasure than are water sports. If one uses the maximum amount of common sense and good judgement, they are as safe as in any other vigorous sport. — R. L. Scott, Recreational Supervisor.

Editor's Note: The following essay was written by a Cedaredge, Colorado, citizen, and was printed in the Congressional Record.

THE WEALTH OF A SMALL TOWN

"A small town is where everybody knows your business and yet they will make it their business if anyone in the community needs help. It is where the folks will talk about you and then talk for you when the chips are down. It is where there has to be a fire to get anyone on the streets after 9 o'clock and yet there will be square dancing until 2 o'clock in the morning and not dependent on hot music and cold drinks to keep up the friendly spirits.

"In a small town there is a common bond during a disaster and a common thankfulness for rain, or a beautiful day, or a new fire hydrant. There is little thought paid to social position and the judging of a man is done on his own value—the deep values.

"It is where a person speaks to his friend as many times as he sees him during the day, not worrying over the social graces as to whether they have already greeted each other previously. It is where a neighbor's hurt becomes your hurt.

"The freedom and dignity of the individual is practiced in a small town without a lot of paid coaching by experts who think they know the minds of men. A man expects to earn what he gets and gets what he earns.

"The building of a park or the paving of a street becomes a personal thing in which the majority of folks see a tangible part of themselves. The yardstick is not off in degrees that ask 'What is there in it for me?'

"A stranger becomes the focus of honest curiosity and the returning native always seems to have added a little glamor. The deeds of the town and its men often shine brighter in a far away place. The words of a stranger often seem like important words.

"A small town is where the lack of convention allows for more time to live well and think clearly. The veneer of fatuous arguments in a thin shell which comes closer to allowing thought. The problems of the people are concerned with nature and close association with others—with things as they are.

"This, in part, is a small town and the people who live in it. It is closer to the concepts of freedom, individual initiative, and self-realization than any other segment of the land except the remote rural. It is the balance wheel in our social order. May there be enough vision to see that the wealth of our small towns is far greater than that which could be measured by smoking stacks and production lines."

TEMPERANCE EDUCATION

A work conference was conducted in which all college personnel connected with teacher training in the field of Alcohol Education, the secretary of the Alabama Commission on Education with respect to alcoholism, and the heads of all the divisions in the State Department of Education were present. This conference was held at Alabama College and the discussion was concerned with the integration of Alcohol Education into the total school system; promoting Mental Health in the classroom; and further training of public school teachers and other leaders. This conference was conducted under the supervision of the State Department of Education and lasted two days.

A conference was conducted in Birmingham in which representatives from various groups participated, including religious leaders, leaders in business and industry, social workers, educational leaders, and representatives from the press. The purpose of this conference was to promote a unified concept concerning the personality growth and the prevention of alcoholism, and to devise a unified method of approach with respect to education as a preventive measure. Several local conferences growing out of this conference were held.

Approximately forty local and regional conferences have been conducted during the year. These include faculty groups, church groups, social and welfare agencies, societies for Mental Health, and A. A. groups. Most conferences were concerned with special problems but in general they were concerned with building healthy personalities as a means of promoting society.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Millport, Alabama.

Dear Mr. Tucker:

Last summer, I hope you will remember, I asked you to publish in your paper a letter from me asking the people of Alabama to cooperate in helping me collect the folklore of the State. The response to the appeal was good. I did not, however, get as much as I need, so I am asking you again this summer to publish this letter in your paper.

I should like to point out how much assistance this work will be to me. I am a graduate student in college. My thesis is a collection of Alabama folklore, and without this material I cannot get my degree. So any help that anybody can give me will be greatly appreciated.

I am interested in collecting all kinds of old songs—old love songs, work songs, field songs, songs that mothers and fathers sing their children to sleep with, songs children play games to, funny songs, minstrel songs, and all other kinds like that. I am also interested in all kinds of tales, tall tales, whoppers, big lies, ghost stories, and all kinds of weather signs, such as when it is time to plant or harvest crops, how to tell if it is going to rain or be a dry spell, how to predict good or bad luck, how to tell if somebody is coming to see you; in fact, all such things. I am particularly interested in home remedies and cures, ways our parents took care of sickness and emergencies until the doctor came, and after he left; and ways our parents made soap, dye, and all the ways they made things around the house.

I would like to emphasize that I do not want anybody to write down any of this material. All I ask them to do is simply send me their names and addresses, and the time of day they would be able to talk to me. Then during July and August I will come around and see them, and I will take down this material. They will not have to write a bit of it. My address is Ray Browne, Millport, Alabama.

I would like to thank everybody in advance for the help that they will be willing to give me. It will be of great assistance to me.

Sincerely yours,
RAY BROWNE.

Dear Editor:

We know that the people back home are trying in every way possible to help the service man serving throughout the world. Their thoughtfulness in correspondence is deeply appreciated by all. Correspondence is a great morale builder; it's importance should be conveyed to the people back home.

We are writing to you for we feel that you can help us in our time of need. We are especially interested in corresponding with the young ladies in your community. We will endeavor to answer each and every letter that we receive.

Thanking you in advance, we remain

The New Kelvinator Automatic Washer!

Washes Dirty Clothes Really Clean!

As advertised in The Saturday Evening POST

Here is a completely automatic washer that gets dirty clothes really clean. Yet the washing is so gentle that you can trust your finest underthings to its care.

The new Kelvinator Automatic Washer has a special and different washing action . . . Shampoo Washing which begins with the full supply of soap or detergent but only half-a-tub of water. This produces a "shampooing" action with rich creamy, concentrated suds which loosen the most stubborn, ground-in dirt and grime. Then, as the tub slowly fills with water, the X-Centric agitator flexes the clothes up and down and around with its soft, pliable rubber fins in a motion similar to that of hand washing. Finally, the tub fills to overflowing and floats dirt and soap over the top . . . away from clothes, not through them. Then gentle spin-drying leaves clothes damp-dry and drip-free. See it demonstrated!

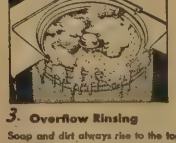
BETTER BECAUSE OF 3 SUPERIOR WASHING FEATURES!

1. Shampoo Washing

This special Kelvinator washing action leaves white clothes really white, because they are shampooed in a concentrated solution . . . washing away the most stubborn dirt.

2. "X-Centric" Agitation

"X-Centric" action of Kelvinator's rubber-finned agitator imitates the hand washing of clothes . . . gently flexing them up and down and around to loosen ground-in dirt and rinse it away.



3. Overflow Rinsing

Soap and dirt always rise to the top. By adding water so the tub overflows, soap scum and dirt are floated over the top of the tub . . . away from the clothes . . . not through them.

Untie This Package For School Funds

EVERYBODY AGREES . . . that his child should have the best teachers to be had. But good teachers cost money. At present salaries, they cannot be secured or held in Alabama, at either public school or college level in the number needed.

Since schools closed, many Alabama teachers, experienced and beginning, are looking elsewhere for jobs. This, at a time when school doors are opening next Fall for the 87,242 children born in 1947 (a record number of births). Who will teach them? Where will they sit? If one of these young hopefuls is YOURS, you are much concerned with the answers.

A proposal to use the Educational Trust Fund Surplus for teachers' salaries is now pending before the Legislature. This would provide an appreciable increase but not enough to hold our best teachers.

The AEA is asking that the State increase yearly appropriations for teachers' salaries by at least ten per cent.

THIS WOULD COST { FOR PUBLIC SCHOOL SALARIES ABOUT $4,942,000 (To provide for additional teachers as needed and for improved training would require $2 million more.) FOR COLLEGE SALARIES ABOUT $1,400,000

MAKE ALABAMA TEACHING ATTRACTIVE

An Alabama business man recently visited a north Florida city. Upon calling at the school superintendent's office he observed six Alabama teachers waiting for interviews.

A South Alabama superintendent went to one of Alabama's teachers' colleges seeking teachers among the recent graduates. He found only six not already placed. None of the six was interested in the salaries he had to offer.

A principal and his wife lately resigned from one of Alabama's larger school systems to accept positions in Florida. Their combined salaries will total $2,800 more than they received in Alabama.

1. KEEP SCHOOL TAX REVENUE FOR SCHOOLS ONLY.

House Bill 19 would use school money for building auditoriums and a residence at three of the agricultural sub-stations. House Bill 26 would use school money for research in the control of the pink boll worm. These services are more closely related to agriculture than to education. Why not finance them from agricultural funds?

2. MAKE SCHOOL TAXES WORK FOR SCHOOLS AS INTENDED.

Forty-One sales tax exemptions cost the schools $33 million a year. House Bill 167 would increase this loss by exempting the sales of caskets and burial supplies from sales and use taxes. Why add another exemption?

3. UNTIE THIS $33 MILLION PACKAGE OF ITEMS EXEMPTED FROM THE SALES TAX AND PUT THEM TO WORK FOR SCHOOLS.

Most of the sales tax collected is used for this purpose. But $33 million in potential receipts from the sales tax are never collected. They are wrapped up in a package of 41 exempted items on which no sales tax is paid. Untie this $33 million package. Provide your child with that good teacher you want him to have. Finance an adequate school building program. Help equalize the tax burden.

The Lutheran Church cordially invites you to worship with us and attend our services if you have no church home of your own. My PET PEEVE

By W. Scott Boyd

THAT four pound bass that the oldest boy caught has had a great influence upon my life. We took it home and in time it was stuffed with shrimp, baked, and disposed of with great delight.

"What a nice, cheap dinner," says the wife. "We'll all go fishing and we won't have to buy any meat for the entire summer."

"With what?" says I.

"With poles, stupid," says the wife.

"But they're expensive," says I.

"Don't be ridiculous," says she. "Go down town and get some poles and those "spools" that you wind the line on."

"You mean reels," says I.

"O. K.," says she, "have it your way but go get them.

"One for everyone in the family?" says I.

"Definitely," she orders.

Two hours later I'm back home with rods and reels for grandmother, the wife, and the youngest son. Also an assortment of hooks, line and sinkers.

"There it is," says I and handed the wife the bill.

She took one look and screamed. "That's impossible," says she.

"No, dear," says I. "That's correct. $98.65."

"We're bankrupt," says she.

"Yes," I agreed. "I figure that our fish for the summer, if we have exceptional luck, will cost us about $10 a pound."

She only moaned.

"Now, let's all go fishing," says I and gave forth with that little grin that the wife says is going to lead to my murder someday.

A large bowl of lilies and daisies were placed on one end of the table and a crystal bowl filled with mint punch was placed on the other. A delicious salad, dainty sandwiches, potato chips, home-made cake and mints, completed the refreshments served to 13 members and one visitor.

All this lovely reception was given as a farewell party for Miss Ada Bennett, who has been a faithful member of the Circle since she has been in Clanton.

Members of the Circle presented Miss Ada with a set of Amber Fostoria beverage glasses, as a token of their love and appreciation of all she has meant to the Circle.

The Modern Approach To Natural Health

(By DR. MARSHAL L. WARE)

GLANDS

Today a number of ailments are traced to a gland deficiency.

Every thought and emotion affects our glands and are either constructive or destructive.

Our glands are health builders, which, if in harmony, health is the result, but if any one of the seven principal glands of the body fail to function, our whole mechanism is out of order.

Hope, cheer, courage and happiness should replace thoughts of fear, worry, anxiety or grief. This is a must if we want one hundred per cent health.

These glands are fed by our food intake, which should be high in vitamins and minerals, without these foods the glands cannot do their work.

Most important of all is the nerve supply to these glands, as to all other parts of the body. Normal nerve supply means health.

A vertebrae (backbone) out of place in the neck or back stops the normal nerve function to these glands and neither correct thinking or necessary foods will overcome the disease produced.

POPLAR SPRINGS NEWS

Our attendance was very well for Sunday School. We still have several sick ones in our community. We miss them being in our services and to those who are able to come and don't, we miss you too, and you miss a great blessing by not doing your duty and attending service every time it is possible. So it is our prayer that every one who possibly can will be at every service.

We still have Training Union too and we do need every one who can to come and help us. Be sure to come next Sunday night and to worship service.

Next Sunday is the Devaughn reunion here. Also it's our regular preaching date and our pastor will be bringing the message before the noon hour. So every one who can be sure to come.

May we remind you of our prayer service each Wednesday night. Do we have a good reason that's pleasing to God when we don't attend? If we don't, we had better be praying about it. And move excuses out of the way and be present next time.

Our W.M.U. will observe our day of prayer with Kathleen Mallory mission offering in June at the home of Mrs. John Cox. The program will begin at 9:30 o'clock. So we do want each member of our W.M.S. and every other lady in reach to be sure to come and each lady is to bring a dish for dinner and in the afternoon, after we finish with the program, we will have our regular meeting. So make plans now to attend this meeting. It will be well worth your time.

Mrs. Esther Childers is in Selma Baptist Hospital, having had a local operation. She is doing nicely and expecting to return home soon.

Mr. and Mrs. Lester Warnock and children of Pepperell visited relatives in our community over the week end.

May we all remember all sick people, those who are unsaved, our boys in service, and pray much for our revival meeting.

A study of pasture improvement and cattle management was the primary purpose of the all day meeting of Chilton County Cattleman's Association on Jack A. Roberts' farm in Beat 13.

The pasture study included a soil sampling demonstration, the use of crawler type tractor and equipment in sub-soiling, pasture drainage and bush clearing, and observation of cattle and pasture plant combinations.

The 50 farmers who attended heard County Agent M. R. Glasscock, Herbert Quinn and William S. Perry, explain various phases of the subjects. Roberts showed the visitors his fine Angus cattle.

After lunch Ralph Mims, president of the association, presided at a business session. The group decided to further publicize the beef industry in Chilton County by planning beef exhibits at the County Fair in August.

Folks and Things ABOUT TOWN —By Ben

(Editor's Note: Because of the unknown whereabouts of the regular Editor, "Folks And Things" is being written this week by the staff of Chilton County News.)

Well, the boss has really pulled one this time. He announced last week that he, Bobby and Myrtle, were going north to see June and her family and that they would be back in town Sunday noon. But we don't much believe that story. We think that the bosses' real idea in going north was to escape the heat. And won't he be surprised if and when he ever gets back to the "garden spot of America" and finds out that we had a right cool week end with a cool breeze and no hot sunshine all day Sunday.

Anyhow, we hope the boss and his family are having a big time up there in Memphis, Tenn., with all the grandchildren and June and Leland West. It's been a long time since he has had a week end off.

There sure has been a lot of goings on since the boss left town. There have been more people around here getting pats on the back. Last Thursday night Hollis Jackson got a rousing hand from the full membership in attendance at the Chilton County Chamber of Commerce meeting. And he well deserved it too.

Then Sunday morning Rev. Vickers had a whole heap of a lot of nice things to say about our good friend, R. C. Williams. You know R. C. has just ended six successful years as Superintendent of the Sunday School at the First Methodist Church here in Clanton. That's a record that anyone would be proud of.

And while we're talking about pats on the back listen to this one. Mrs. Steve William Baker gave birth of triplets in the Central Alabama Hospital over the week end. There were three little girls.

Our County Engineer has received a couple of good slaps on the back also. He has been commended by state and federal road engineers for the fine record of our roads. The county got a rating of 95% following an inspection tour by the engineers. And because of this he got another slap on the back from Judge Tingle. Nice work, Doug. Hope your next rating is a hundred per cent.

We got us a new prexy for the Chilton County Chamber of Commerce. He is Harold Foshee, a young business man who has already had a good deal to do with the local Chamber. The members of the Industrial Committee will tell you how much he has helped them during the past year. Harold has got a big job now for sure, but we feel that he'll do it.

Something really happened over the week kend. Mrs. Erle Ellis says she and her committee have received a whole flock of applications for the Peach Queen contest. And it won't be long now before the contest closes and the big day, July 8th, will be here. Then we'll know which of these young ladies will be Queen of the Peaches.

The old Chilton County Rumor Factory is at it again. Seems that several days ago Clanton's Mayor, C. Penn Jones, caught one of those real old summer colds. Come last Friday afternoon he told this reporter that he believed he would stay home and in bed for the next couple of days. Well, today he called our office and asked us to say that he had not suffered another attack of whatever it was he suffered several months ago. Mayor Jones is merely sick in bed with a very bad cold and I hope this will spike the rumors.

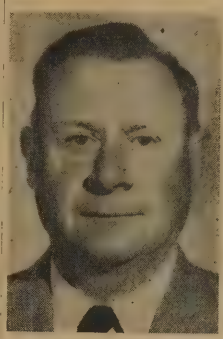
Have you heard about the big to do that Reedie Taylor and his boys and girls are having at Chicago Sales? Reedie and Ray and all the rest have a whole lot of wonderful merchandise for Pop's Day come this Sunday. Look through today's Chilton County News and you'll see their announcement.

Pat Broadhead Elected President

Miss Pat Broadhead, one of this year's Peach Queen contestants, has been elected President of the Methodist Youth Fellowship Club. The election took place last Sunday night at the First Methodist Church of Clanton. At the same time Jack Hunter was chosen as Vice-President of the club and Paula Nivens was elected Secretary and Attendance Chairman. Gordon Robertson, Jr., was elected Treasurer.

At First Baptist

Hutchinson's Fourth Year Here Will Be Celebrated Sunday



J. GILBERT HUTCHINSON

Sunday, June 21, Dr. J. Gilbert Hutchinson will celebrate his fourth anniversary as pastor of the First Baptist Church, Clanton. The day will be observed with special services appropriately taking note of the occasion.

A goal of 625 has been set for attendance in Sunday School, 200 in Training Union, and record attendance in the Worship Services. The pastor has fequested that a special offering be taken for the Building Fund. One of the goals for the day is to enlist each family in monthly giving to the Building Fund.

There has been a remarkable program of advance in the First Baptist Church during the past four years. The church has built a beautiful pastorium at a cost of almost thirty thousand dollars. The Sunday School has had an average yearly increase of one hundred thirteen members and the Training Union has more than doubled. During this period five hundred members have been taken into the fellowship of the church, an average of 125 per year.

The remarkable growth in all branches of the work was made possible through the host of workers who have followed the pastor's leadership.

The financial condition of the church also reveals the wholehearted cooperation of the membership in accepting a program of Scriptural giving which has produced outstanding results. Over two hundred thousand dollars has been given for all purposes, and over thirty-six thousand dollars has been given to missions.

Dr. Hutchinson states that the next program of expansion will be the enlarging and air-conditioning of the auditorium. This project will also provide adequate space for the ever increasing adult work.

The First Baptist Church has a right to rejoice in the program of advance of the past four years. The church will be given south-wide recognition at Ridgecrest and Glorieta this summer. Dr. and Mrs. Hutchinson will appear on the program at both of these assemblies.

With a desire to reach the people and serve the cause of Christ, in the community and throughout the world, the First Baptist Church of Clanton, Ala., moves forward.

Double Win Total Eight Lomax Goes

The Lomax baseball team now has a winning record of seven against two losses after their double victory last Saturday and Sunday, winning over Draper prison by a score of 10 to 7 and over Maplesville by a score of 11 to 4.

In the game last Saturday against Draper, the prison team got off to a fast start, scoring two runs in the first inning, five in the second. The five in the second inning came on a pair of homers.

Lomax scored two runs in the fourth, two in the fifth and one in the seventh and five more in the eighth inning. Van Edwards pitched all the way for the victory besides hitting a long triple to drive in the tying and winning runs in the eighth.

On Sunday the team scored their second victory over Maplesville on the Thorsby diamond. James Armstrong and J. W. Langston divided the pitching chores, both men turning in good performances. Kent Lowery blasted two home runs for Lomax to take the batting honors for the day.

So far this season Lomax has defeated Clanton, Draper, Maplesville, Plantersville twice, Calera and Enterprise. They have lost only to Draper and Calera. The next home game for Lomax will be Saturday at Thorsby against Isabella with game time scheduled for 2:30 p.m.

Receives Praise For Chilton County Roads

Commendations from three different sources have been received during the past few days by Chilton County's Engineer, J. D. Bullington.

Following a recent inspection tour by both state and federal engineers of road conditions in this county letters have been received by Bullington commending him on the excellent condition of our highways.

Both of these inspections have given Chilton County a 95% or better rating on our county roads. And as a result of this record Probate Judge Dave Tingle heaped other praise on our county engineer. Judge Tingle said yesterday morning that he felt that the people of Chilton County were very fortunate in having such a man as Doug Bullington as the engineer of Chilton County. Judge Tingle said that he was greatly appreciative of Bullington's efforts and endeavors that have afforded Chilton County roads such a rating. One of the letters received was from E. Sherrer, Assistant Division Engineer for the Alabama Highway Department of the Third Division of Tuscaloosa, Ala.

Before his charge to the new officers of the local chamber, however, Mr. Dobbins led the full membership in a rising vote of thanks to the outgoing president. Mr. Dobbins had nothing but high praise for the immediate past president in his giving unselfishly of his time during the past year and for his excellent leadership.

Following this Mr. Dobbins urged the membership to get their own house in order, so that the people of Chilton County would have something to sell. First off he urged for enterprise, and then he suggested that the people of the area get busy and beautify their communities. He urged the establishment of a public library, an auditorium and recreation. Mr. Dobbins also had high praise for the efforts on the part of the local chamber for furthering the agriculture industry of the county and for its efforts in promoting the Peach Festival each year.

He also urged [illegible] people to take a more active part in civic activities in the county and to emphasize his point, he said, "You have a civic debt to pay and no one is going to pay it for you."

The meeting was then called to a close after the outgoing president called on the people for full cooperation for the new officers.

JACKSON RECEIVES RISING VOTE OF THANKS

Last Thursday night a Clanton Business Man received a rising vote of thanks that he well deserved.

We know that J. Hollis Jackson was a little embarrassed that night as he sat in the auditorium of the Clanton City Hall and heard the praise that was heaped on him by Bill Dobbins as he led the full membership in attendance in what was probably one of the most sincere outbursts that any man in Chilton County has ever known.

And Hollis Jackson well deserved that vote of confidence as he stepped down from the head of the Chilton County Chamber of Commerce. During the past year that he has served the local Chamber Mr. Jackson has earned the respect of many business and civic leaders from throughout the state.

And during the past 12 months that he has been the head of the local organization much ground work has been laid for the year's to come. Hollis Jackson has given of his time and effort and has traveled far in his efforts and desires to see our community grow.

As did many of those attending last Thursday's meeting the Chilton County News also wants to take this opportunity to say "Thanks, Hollis, for a job well done."

We know, too, that as Hollis said at last Thursday night's meeting the new officers of the Chamber can still count on him to do all he can in the future. He'll be back in another phase of civic endeavor, because a man with as much civic pride as Hollis Jackson has, will never let up for very long.

TOO MANY PEOPLE WITH THANKLESS JOBS

We hear a lot of talk around our area that there are too few people for too many jobs—civic jobs we mean.

But we feel that this is not necessarily so.

We kinda feel that there are a lot of our folks hereabouts that would like very much to do something for our community, but that they have never really had the opportunity. You know, if you don't ask a fella to do something he won't push himself forward because he doesn't want to become obnoxious. He doesn't want to be called an opportunist or a climber, yet he has a sincere desire to do something constructive for his community. He wants to help, but he wants to have someone ask him to help.

Let's see what we can recall to mind that some of our folks are doing right now in an effort to help out in a civic way. Take our Industrial Committee of our Chilton County Chamber of Commerce for instance. They have worked untiringly during the past year on several industrial prospects to locate in our area. But because of necessity there has been no publicity given their efforts, and therefore, we don't always know what they are doing. And it's a discouraging job after you have gotten all the necessary information together and then find out that perhaps he is not as sincere as you thought, or that perhaps he decides he doesn't want to move his facilities or he decides another community is better than this one. Those men deserve the thanks of every citizen in the county for what they are trying to do.

Also take for instance the men and women who are working so diligently and are giving so freely of their time for the Peach Festival. Have you ever stopped to think how many of our folks it requires to put on one of these enormous pageants that draws upwards to 15,000 spectators? There is Dick Scott, Mrs. Erle Ellis and her big group of ladies helping her. There is Reedie Taylor, Earl Wilson, Sheriff Luther Kendrick, Pope Payne, Archie Ogburn. And there are many, many more that are doing everything they can to help make our community better than ever.

Then take for instance our city, town and county officials, that practically donate their time and efforts toward making this area grow bigger and better. Think too of our outlets of public information, our newspapers and our radio station that continually donates time, effort and space in helping to promote our civic efforts.

There are hundreds more that are continually donating their time and efforts toward the civic betterment of our community. When you stop and think about it and start counting up all those that are doing civic jobs you wonder a little who cooked up the remark, "there are too few people for too many jobs."

VANISHING WILL-O'-THE-WISP

Report from Washington

BY

ARMISTEAD SELDEN

Congressman, Sixth District

It's A Boy!—

I hope my friends in the District will forgive me for utilizing a few lines in this week's column in order to share with you some good news of a personal nature.

Last Friday (June 12) at 5:00 p.m., our young son, Armistead Inge Selden, III, arrived. Both he and his mother are getting along fine. Needless to say, we are pleased over the arrival of our first son!

Funds for VA Hospitals—

A number of veterans' organizations, as well as individual veterans, have been concerned recently over the proposed cuts in the Veterans Administration's budget for fiscal year 1954 which begins July 1st. Chief concern has been in connection with rumored reductions in the VA hospital program.

It is certainly understandable that this rumored reduction in funds for the hospital program would cause alarm. Last year 2300 beds were closed in existing VA hospitals. The reason given by the VA for this closing of beds is that funds were not available to employ the necessary personnel to keep the beds in operation. There has been much discussion among individual members of Congress as to whether the reduction in the number of beds was due to inadequate funds appropriated by the last Congress or whether it was the result of mismanagement on the part of the Veterans Administration. In either event, the beds were closed and many sick and disabled veterans unable to pay their own expenses were turned away from the hospitals operated by the Veterans Administration.

Selden Queries Boone—

All appropriations bills, including the bill which embodies funds for the Veterans Administration, are handled by the Appropriations Committee. However, all members of Congress are vitally interested in every appropriation bill as they must vote on the money bills when they reach the floor of the House.

The Veterans Affairs Committee, of which I am a member, is particularly interested in appropriations for the Veterans Administration. Most of us on the committee felt we should be fully informed on any proposed cuts in VA activities, particularly those concerned with the hospital program. With this in mind, the Committee requested Admiral Joel T. Boone, Chief Medical Director of the Veterans Administration, to appear before us to explain the minimum amount needed for adequate operation of all available VA hospital beds during 1954. In his testimony, and in answer to direct questions from me, Admiral Boone stated that a minimum appropriation of $555 million for the category listed as "In-Patient Hospital Care" would supply the needs of all VA hospitals during the coming fiscal year. Admiral Boone assured me that this amount would make it possible to maintain all beds now in operation, open the 2300 beds closed last year due to lack of funds, and take care of all beds scheduled to be opened up under new construction planned for 1954.

Shortly after Admiral Boone made these statements to the Committee on Veterans Affairs, the House Appropriations Committee reported the Second Independent Offices Appropriation Bill for 1954. This bill included an appropriation for maintenance and operation of hospitals (hospital care—in-patient) in the amount of $555 million—the exact amount requested by Admiral Boone, the VA's Chief Medical Director. It was pointed out in the Appropriations Committee's report that the sum of $555 million is nearly $40 million more than the 1953 appropriation.

Supports Full Funds—

It is my intention to support the full appropriation of $555 million and to oppose any effort to reduce this amount when the bill reaches the floor of the House for debate and vote. Should Congress approve this sum of $555 million (and it is my belief the Congress will do so), any failure to operate the maximum number of beds available will be an administrative failure of the Veterans Administration and not the failure of Congress to appropriate sufficient funds.

As a member of the Committee on Veterans Affairs, and as a believer in sound government economy, I certainly favor any reductions that can be made in the VA budget or any budget by the elimination of poor management, inefficiency, and waste. I feel certain there are no veterans groups and very few veterans who would disagree with me in this respect, and it is quite possible that Congress will make some reductions in the overall VA budget on this basis. Yet, I do not favor the reckless closing of hospital beds simply for the purpose of reducing expenditures, and I do not believe the members of Congress will shirk their responsibility by failing to appropriate sufficient funds for the operation of all available VA beds during fiscal year 1954.

Apply For '54 Wheat Acreage Whether You Grew Any In Past 3 Years Or Not

Any farmer in Chilton County who has land on which no wheat has been seeded during 1951, 1952, and 1953, may apply for a 1954 wheat acreage allotment, according to Eddie Owen, chairman of the Chilton County Production and Marketing Administration Committee.

Mr. Owen pointed out that to be considered for an allotment on a farm which has had no wheat seeded during those years, the farmer must apply in writing to his county PMA Committee by June 30, 1953. Blank application forms are available at the county PMA office in Clanton for use in filing requests for the allotments.

May Unemployment Claims Lowest Since October Of 1952

Montgomery, Ala. — Initial claims for unemployment insurance during May hit the lowest level since October, 1952, according to Joe L. Coleman, Director of the Department of Industrial Relations.

This represented a drop of 18 per cent, from 11,614 in April to 9,521 in May. Calera, Mobile, Fort Payne and Jasper areas showed the largest decreases, while a sizeable increase occurred in Alexander City where a large foundry was destroyed by fire.

About 16,300 persons drew $913,392 in unemployment insurance payments during May. This was a 037,000 drop April payments but $19,000 more than the year ago total. A difference of 32 cents in average checks primarily accounted for the increase.

Swelled by high school and college graduates entering the labor market, new applications for work totalled 11,250. This was nearly 11 per cent above the April figure, but was 1,400 fewer than were received during May, 1952. In both instances the changes were proportionately greater for women than for men.

The 37,448 persons who were seeking work kthrough local employment offices at the end of the month represented only a slight increase over the preceding month, and is practically the same as the year ago figure. The applicant group included fewer women but more veterans than it did in May a year ago.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Randolph, Ala., June 13, 1953.

Dear Editor Chilton County News:

I would appreciate an opportunity to say a few words in regards to the Howard College Extension Division for Christian Training which I have had the privilege of attending fairly regular since its beginning in 1947. I am sure that I am speaking the sentiment of thousands of others when I say it is one of the greatest privileges ever extended to those who have a desire to learn.

The Fall term of the Clanton Center will open on the 7th of September at the First Baptist Church of Clanton. The writer feels very unworthy to serve as Director, but since I have been chosen to do so, I shall do my utmost with the cooperation of those who have an interest in the school to make it one of the very best among more than forty others held in our state.

The Sunday School Preview and the Book of Genesis will be taught parallel during the first period. The books of I and II Thessilonians, I and II Peter and James will be the studies for the second period. A study of Church Finance will be taught during the third period.

The faculty for all the classes have not all been completed as yet, but Dr. and Mrs. Hutchinson of the First Baptist Church, Clanton, will be part of the faculty I am sure. We shall from time to time be giving more information as it is received.

The following brethren will serve on the Advisory Committee:

Rev. Hyman Atcheson, Rev. G. H. Carroll, Rev. L. E. Daniels and Rev. Rasberry of Maplesville. We are anxious for you to attend the school, and either of the above committee will be glad to render any service possible to be of help to you. Feel free to call on any of us at any time.—M. Lockhart.

YOUR Health

"Your Health" is presented by your physician as a health service of The Medical Association of the State of Alabama.

THE TUBERCLE BACILLUS

Tuberculosis is a disease caused by a germ, the tubercle bacillus. Every single case comes from the invasion of the body by the tubercle bacillus, generally from contact with a person who is an open active case of tuberculosis. When the germ gets into the body it may remain quiet without causing much trouble for a long period of time. In fact, if not too many germs have entered the body and if the general health and state of nutrition remain good, these germs may be prevented from spreading and growing by the health of the body itself.

Thus the first step in the prevention of tuberculosis is the maintenance of one's good health, not only by regular physical examinations by the family physician but adherence to regulations governing balanced mental and physical activity.

Since the cause and control of tuberculosis are known, it is important to find those people who have the disease and to treat them. Thus, since it is almost a certainty that early detection offers complete arrest of the disease, not only do the victims of tuberculosis benefit themselves but eliminate the possibility of spreading the infection to others through contact.

For a long time, emphasis in treatment as well as in case-finding has been on adolescents and young adults because of the heavy incidence in these age groups. Without relaxing in efforts to prevent and control the disease in these young people, special attention must be directed to the large group of persons who have already passed their fortieth birthday, those in their fifties, their sixties, seventies and even those in the eighties. In the older patient active and communicable tuberculosis may produce no symptoms that are in the least suspicious, but the x-ray film will show the disease to be present.

Because the cause and cure of tuberculosis are known, it is possible to effect complete eradication of this disease. It is not one person's responsibility, but a concerted community effort to locate those harboring the germ and through their treatment remove them as carriers to spread the disease.

Fresh Food & Water

Laying hens need plenty of fresh, cool water to make more eggs. They also need fresh feed. Keep feed fresh by stirring it occasionally each day. Stirring the feed will make layers eat better, too.

To remove stains on an aluminum pot or pan, cook an acid food, such as tomatoes, in the utensil. Or boil a solution of two tablespoons of vinegar or cream of tartar to one quart of water in the pan.

Garden Musts

Keep grasses and weeds out of summer gardens. Rotting vegetation heats up the soil and interferes with proper germination of seed. Also keep an eye out for bugs, worms, and other pests that injure fruits and vegetables.

Dab upholstered furniture with a damp sponge to pick up dog and cat hairs or particles of lint.

Chilton Farmers Will Have Extra Year To Obtain Storage Loan

The U. S. Department of Agriculture has announced a one-year extension of time, through June 30, 1954, in which farmers may obtain Commodity Credit Corporation loans to finance the construction or purchase of new farm storage facilities for grains and other storable crops. This information has just been released by E. H. Buckner, Secretary of the Chilton County FMA office in Clanton.

This program, initiated in June 1949, has been extended from time to time for the purpose of increasing farm storage space and of easing the pressure on transportation facilities. As of March 31, 1953, a total of 34,263 loans of approximately $40,548,000 had been approved for farm storage structures having an aggregate capacity of over 142,000,000 bushels.

Loans are available up to 80 percent of the cost of the structure, to any owner-operator, tenant, landlord or partnership of producers wishing to erect a facility which will meet requirements for eligible storage under the price support program. Loans are payable in four annual installments, or earlier at the option of the borrower. The first installment is payable twelve months after the loan is disbursed by CCC. Interest on loans is at the rate of 4 percent a year.

Loans are available through local lending agencies or from Production and Marketing Administration County Committees. They are available to producers of wheat, corn, oats, rye, barley, grain sorghums, soybeans, dry edible beans and peas, rice, peanuts, cottonseed, flaxseed, hay seeds, pasture seeds, and winter cover crop seeds..

Helping Develop Alabama

Around OUR HOUSE

by Kathryn Tucker Windham

It had been one of those will-bed-time-never-come days. I started off by spilling the baby's breakfast cereal and burning the toast, and those events set the tempo for the rest of the day.

By afternoon I was cross, to put it mildly, and the children, of course, knew it. The four-year-old came in from play, looked at me solemnly for a minute and then said,

"Come here, mother, and let me kiss you. Maybe it will put the pleasure back in you."

With such an effective prescription, the pleasure should stay put a long time.

When I decide to get thrifty and save things, they usually turn out to be just junk or they manage to get so much in the way that I discard them in disgust before I ever use them. But our next door neighbor finds a practical use for everything, even such items as empty milk cartons.

When she's preparing a meal, she puts one of the empty cartons on the edge of her sink and uses it as a garbage container. Its wax coating makes it waterproof, and she declares it the most satisfactory method of disposing of garbage that she has tried.

She uses the cartons, too, as containers for rooting plants. Cut off to the proper depth and filled with rich soil, she finds them ideal for this purpose. When the plants are ready to be placed outdoors, she puts them into the ground carton and all, and they never even know they have been moved.

This is certainly not the proper time of year to mention it, not this sweltering day, but our neighbor also uses the cartons to cover young, tender plants in her garden on nights when there's danger of frost.

Three things I'd hate to have to try to rear a baby without: Running water, Kleenex and a rocking chair.

When our friend down the street, the one with the big family, cuts off her children's corduroy overalls to make them comforable for wearing in this weather, she saves the leg pieces to use as dusting mits.

By sewing up one and of the leg and stitching diagonally across one corner to make a place for the thumb, she makes an ideal dusting mit. And the best part of it is that she always has more mits than she can use and shares them with her neighbors!

Having so many children, this neighbor has learned a lot of tricks about repairing the damage youngsters sometimes do to furniture.

When the mahogany table in her living room got a bad scratch recently, she treated it with iodine right out of the medicine cabinet. She painted the scratched place carefully until just the proper shade was reached. Then she let it dry before giving it a glossy polish.

This is certainly frozen dessert weather. One of the favorite frozen sweets in our neighborhood is made with apricot nectar. Here's how: To 1½ cups apricot nectar add 1 mashed banana, ½ cup crushed pineapple, 2-3 cup sugar, 1 tablespoon lemon juice and 1 cup cream. Freeze until firm. Then beat with rotary beater until light and fluffy and freeze again.

Senator Hill Declares Wilson's Cut In Air Force Is Too Risky

Senator Lister Hill has declared that Secretary of Defense Wilson's proposed cut in Air Force strength from 143 to 120 wings involves a "risk that our country cannot afford to run." Hill said that the cut means reductions in strategic and tactical air force combat wings and in supporting wings, including supporting units for Army combat operations, the elimination of air bases, and reductions in the training of pilots and other personnel.

Pledging an all-out fight for funds for the 143 wing program recommended by the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Hill declared that "air power is the only force capable of preventing an atomic air attack upon our country, and of carrying the atomtic bomb to the heart of the enemy to destroy its war making capacity."

"The Senate Committee on Armed Service Appropriations, of which I am a member, has been warned by our country's highest military leaders of tremendous gains in Soviet military strength, both in Russia and in the satellite countries—gains in ground forces and submarines and particularly in jet fighters, jet long-range bombers, atomic bombs and air bases," Hill said in a statement. He added:

"Secretary Wilson's cut was not approved by the Joint Chiefs of Staff composed of General Bradley, as Chairman; Admiral Fetchler, Chief of Staff of the Navy; General Collins, Chief of Staff of the Army; and General Vandenburg, Chief of Staff of the Air Force. In fact, as recently as March, the Joint Chiefs advised Secretary Wilson that any reduction in the program of 143 wings for the Air Force would increase the risk to national security beyond the dictates of national prudence."

General Vandenburg declared that "once again the growth of American air power is threatened with start-and-stop planning and at a time when we face an enemy which has more modern jet fighters than we have and enough long-range bombers to attack this country in an all-out atomic effort."

"We all earnestly want to bring about savings and reductions in the budget," Hill said, "but we remember Pearl Harbor, Bataan and Corregidor. We remember the losses and sacrifices of our boys in Korea. We must fight to provide the 143 air wings for the defense of our country."

CONGRESSIONAL Quiz

Q—What proportion of the armed services are physicians?

A—The Army has 3.68 per thousand, the Navy 4.25 and the Air Force 3.76. The Defense Department has told Congress it plans to lower the over-all ratio to 3.2 per thousand.

A—No one this side of the Iron Curtain knows for sure, but Dr. Leo Lowenthal, chief Voice evaluator, on May 11 offered a Congressional subcommittee the "conservative" estimate that half the people in Communist lands listen "fairly regularly." Others have been less confident of the Voice's effectiveness.

Q—What did Britain's Clement Atlee mean when he said "the American Constitution was framed for an isolationist State?"

A—He said that, at the time the Constitution was drafted, "Americans did not want to have anything to do with Europe." Comparing the British and American systems, he pointed out that the Prime Minister's policies are the government's policies, while in the U. S. "power is divided between the Administration and Congress." A President can make only limited commitments in foreign relations, since many agreements need Congressional approval through treaty ratification, or implementation through appropriations and other action. One famous example of Congress blocking a President occurred when the Senate refused to ratify Wilson's Versailles treaty.

Q—Is the Chief Justice's pay check any fatter than those drawn by other Supreme Court judges?

A—His colleagues on the highest bench earn $25,000 a year, while he receives $25,500. The pay bill now pending in Congress would widen this margin by raising the Associate Justices $10,000 to the $35,000 level, and giving the Chief Justice a $14,500 increase, to $40,000.

Put Safety To Work For You As You Work To Can

Now that the canning season is here, homemakers are reminded to carry safety into the kitchen.

The following suggestions are shortcuts to safe canning:

1. Use thick potholders, and wear cotton gloves to protect wrists as well as hands.

2. Use jar lifter, and fill jars with funnels.

3. Keep long-handled forks and spoons within easy reach.

4. Be sure lids are large enough to cover utensils completely. Keep pan handles away from edge of stove.

5. Do not have inflammable curtains near the stove.

6. When making jelly and preserves, use a large kettle to prevent the mixture from boiling over.

Still Time To Do That Last Deep Cultivating

Auburn, Ala.—In fields where cotton is up to a good stand and plants are thinned out, farmers may still have time to run a sweep around the crop deep enough to add more nitrogen.

In this last deep cultivation add enough nitrogen to bring the total available pounds to 60 per acre.

However, as cotton gets more mature, there is danger of pruning off plant roots if the crop is cultivated too deeply.

The only other cultivation cotton will need is grass and weed control. Here again, work shallow to keep from cutting off the root system.

It Has to Be Double or Nothing

One thing's sure — our town's "Glove Basket" is a success. The Red Cross matched forty-two pairs from the gloves we collected.

The idea was started by Mrs. Peters, "Easy's" wife. It bothered her that folks always threw out a glove whenever its mate was lost. So Mrs. P. thought of a way to cut the waste almost in half.

She put up the "Glove Basket" in the City Hall and asked us all to drop in whatever stray, single gloves we had. Most everyone did, and now the Red Cross is forty-two pairs of gloves richer.

From where I sit, Mrs. Peters and the community deserve a lot of credit for coming up with a wonderful idea and then getting everyone to cooperate to make it successful. The retailers of beer, too, have a good idea—the Self-Regulation program sponsored by the Brewing Industry — and by cooperating voluntarily to keep their places clean, neat and orderly, they go with the community "hand in glove."

East Texas Shortage May Raise Chilton's Marketing Prospects

East Texas Shortage May Boost Chilton's Marketing Prospects

Because of unsuitable weather conditions in East Texas which has caused a shortage in crop production of melons and tomatoes, M. R. Glasscock, county agent, has predicted that Hilton County's markets may be greatly strengthened.

Glasscock has pointed out that the East Texas area has moved but a very few cars of tomatoes during the past few weeks. Growers in that area have reported very light crops of tomatoes which may not exceed 50% of last year's yield.

Pertaining to the melon crop in Texas, Glasscock reports that their watermelon crop of 136,000 acres mean very little in the ultimate outcome of this year's crop. Actually the number of cars which may be shipped from Texas in 1953 can be below the 1952 level. Unfavorable weather conditions have caused from 25 to 50% deterioriation in many years at this time.

Last year, watermelon vines in East Texas were 12 to 24 inches in length and in a vigorous growing condition. But this year most of the watermelon shipping counties in Texas, many growers have irregular stands and the plants or not running as they should be.

The Practice of Christian Liberty. Lesson for June 21: Galatians 5: 11-18; 5: 22-6: 5. Golden Text: Galatians 5: 13.

Christian liberty is not merely a subject for theological discussion. It is a blessed experience to be enjoyed every day. Thus we find Paul urging the Galatians to enjoy Christian liberty, but not to use it as license for not doing things required of them in the way of living and service. Faith in Christ does not cancel the law of righteousness, but it establishes the law. James writes that faith without works is dead.

So faith should be the beginning and the continuing support of a life of godliness. And faith should lead men to depend upon the Holy Spirit to guide them into the way of all truth. As many as are led by the Spirit of God will not fail to reach the light.

So Paul in conclusion stresses the power of the Spirit as the inspiration and support of Christian living. By the Spirit, a man will be loving, forgiving, and marked by self-control.

In such living by the Spirit there will be no place for vain-glory, but humility, and sympathy toward others will have an important place.

LILACS IN THE RAIN

By Mary Boyles

WHEN Elaine Bord opened the door to their apartment the room was too neat; especially the coffee table without her husband's pipe and assortment of magazines. To intensify the atmosphere of loneliness a spring rain was padding against the window pane. She sniffed the air. Lilacs! How could that odor have seeped into the heart of Chicago? Scoffing at a trick of imagination, she dropped into a chair.

Thoughts pounded through her tired brain. Dave must have meant it last night when he had said that he was going to leave that very day for Vincennes to take over his uncle's paper. She had told Dave that she had an important job with an advertising firm. She had recently been promoted to a higher personnel job. The promotion put her salary a little above his, but she pointed out he was in line for the next raise in his firm.

She had not believed that Dave would leave without her. She shrugged her shoulders and sniffed the air again. The odor of lilacs seemed real. For her their fragrance held a particular memory. She closed her eyes and could see vividly a boy and a girl, jumping puddles on their way home from school one spring day.

"My teacher said I might get a solo dance in the festival, cause I did so good this year," Elaine had boasted. She repeated a part of the dance on the curbing. Dave had looked away, his thin pointed face solemn. She had danced three more steps before she noticed that Dave was running down the street, heedless of puddles. She had scampered after him.

Why had Dave looked so unhappy? Then she had known. While she was bragging about her part in the festival, she had forgotten what had happened to Dave. In his solo when he had reached the high part, which he usually took so easily, his voice had broken. He had tried to continue his song but no sound had come.

"Dave, Dave." Elaine cried as she rushed around the house.

She had been about to enter the kitchen when she heard a sound under the lilac bush by the back door. "Dave," she cried and crawled under the lilac bush beside him. She had caught his fists as he pounded the earth. "Dave, your song was beautiful."

"I ruined the program," he had cried.

"I heard you sing in practice. Your song was beautiful. Something just happened at the festival. You couldn't help it."

"Silly old song! Who cares?" he had said.

Another shower had been pelting against the lilac leaves. The odor of the lilacs had covered the two children like a soft fragrant blanket.

"You're pretty, Elaine. You're my girl. You can have all my lilacs if you want them." He had pressed his damp flushed face against hers. She had sat up giggling.

After that the lilacs had carried a memory of Dave The two memories merged—the old and the one of last night. She knew that she must have been thinking only of herself again. She could not let Dave go to Vincennes without her. He had said something about having to finish some work at the office tonight. Perhaps she could catch him there. She was trembling so violently that she could hardly dial. The telephone rang several times; then Dave said, "Hello."

"Dave," she said breathlessly. "I want to go to Vincennes with you."

She heard him chuckle as he said, "Good."

"You'll think I'm silly, but I keep smelling lilacs . . . ever since I stepped inside the apartment."

"Have you been in the kitchen?" he asked.

"No," she answered, "just in the front room."

"There's a pitcher of lilacs on the kitchen sink. The flower man at the station had loads of fresh lilacs this morning."

"But how did they get here?"

"I sneaked them in. I was betting on the lilacs. I didn't have anything to do with the rain."

a peek at THE STARS

By LYN CONNELLY

THERE are rumblings that Sid Caesar and Imogene Coca will be getting so much money next year that the budget will have to be sliced on the rest of the show . . . . Actually, this hour and a half extravaganza has worn extremely thin and it wouldn't surprise us if its only audience these days are new TV owners or people who never tire of repetition . . . Ben Blue has started his projected TV film series, "Ben Blue, Esq.," financed by NBC . . . An audition tape was cut on a show titled "Country Editor," starring Will Rogers Jr.

Guy Mitchell, who zoomed to popularity via Columbia Records, will make his film debut in "Those Sisters from Seattle" . . . Already in the works is a second film role for versatile Guy . . . He's been assigned one of the key parts in Paramount's upcoming "Red Garters," a lavish technicolor production which will be filmed in the new 3-D process . . . In "Red Garters," Guy will join a Columbia platter-mate, lovely Rosemary Clooney, who just made her own debut in "The Stars Are Singing."

PLATTER CHATTER

CAPITOL: More wonderful discs for the kiddies have been released by this company . . . Mel Blanc does a fine job with "Little Red Monkey" backed by "Pussy Cat Parade" . . . Then there's a cute little ditty called "Teena, the Laughing Hyena" as done by Billy May and written by Alan Livingston . . . Bozo gets into the act with two fine waxings of nursery songs and "Jungle Jingles," featuring the popular laughing hyena again.

Jerry Lewis leaves Dean Martin long enough to do two songs from Walt Disney's "Peter Pan"—"Never Smile At a Crocodile" and "Following the Leader" . . . Mel Blanc continues his fine work on "Woody Woodpecker and the Animal Crackers," and "Sylvester and Hippety Hopper" . . . These are all excellent for the small fry and guaranteed to keep them glued to the phonograph.

March Retail Sales Up 15.8 Percent Here

March retail sales in Chilton County show a 15.8 per cent increase over February, 1953, and a 13.9 per cent decrease over March, 1952, according to the Bureau of Business Research at the University of Alabama in a report just released.

In making their monthly announcement, the Bureau also reports that retail sales in Alabama for the month of March continued at high level.

One of the biggest increases over the year, 17%, was recorded by clothing stores and an increase in automobile sales again accounted for a substantial portion iof the rise in total retail sales for the state.

New passenger car registrations in the state hit a new high for March and the volumn of sales by car dealers was 26% higher than in the corresponding month of 1952, the Bureau reported.

Filling stations also reported a sizeable gain as gasoline sales soared to an unprecedented monthly total of over 60 million gallons. Sales by furniture stores were up 13%.

Only three of the 15 retail categories, drinking places, drug stores, and secondhand dealers, reported sales below 1952.

Survey Shows Boll Weevils Will Be Plentiful This Year

County Farmers Advised To Buy Boll Poison Now

Although this is not quite the time to use cotton poison, it is the time to be buying it and getting set for the control of the boll weevils, according to W. A. Ruffin, API Extension Entomologist.

Ruffin points out that cotton growers who take advantage of the present lower prices on poison will save money and also make certain of having the insecticide on hand when it is needed. Every farmer, says Ruffin, whether he has bought his poison or not, should remember that treating for weevils too early in the season can be very wasteful.

Although for the past two years weevils have done very little damage in Alabama, recent examination of cotton fields in several places in the state proved that they are almost everywhere now. In fields of older than average cotton examined in Henry and Houston Counties about half of the buds had been eaten by weevils. This situation may indicate that damage this year could approach that done in 1949 and 1950 when the pests destroyed more than $50,000,000 worth of cotton each year.

Farmers have a tendency to begin dusting as soon as they find the first squares punctured, despite the fact that research of the API Experiment Station has proved this practice does not pay. Those growers who wait until cotton plants are fruiting freely and weevils are found puncturing about 25 per cent of the squares get good control for less money.

Once it is evident that weevil control measures are necessary, make three applications of poison five days apart—not once a week. About three weeks later put on three more applications five days apart if the pests are still puncturing 25 per cent of the squares. Finally, when the cotton plants are about through setting bolls and are blooming in the top, poison three or four times at four-day intervals to protect top bolls from damage. Poison applied for boll protection usually saves more cotton than that used at any other time.

Good cotton poisons include 2.5 per cent aldrin, 1.5 per cent dieldrin, 2.5 per cent hepachlor, and five per cent DDT. None of these materials should be used without DDT. Dust that contains three per cent gamma of BHC and five per cent DDT or calcium arsenate, when used in alternate application with BHC-DDT or 20 per cent toxaphene, gives excellent control of all cotton insects. Any of these materials will protect cotton if used correctly. Haphazard use of them is likely to result in an infestation of bollworms, which are much harder to control than weevils.

Cotton insecticides, except calcium arsenate, are effective as either dust or spray. If dust is used, it is much better if applied when the air is calm.

Printed lettering will come off of feed bags if you use kerosene. Pour it on the letters and roll the bags up for a day or two.

Concrete pavements generally carry the heaviest traffic. Yet their annual maintenance cost is far lower than any other pavement intended for similar service. And the rugged strength and stamina of concrete assure long life — many years of all-weather service without interruptions for frequent repairs or rebuilding.

Compare construction costs too, and you'll find that concrete pavement usually costs less to build than any other pavement of equal load-carrying capacity.

So with long life, low maintenance expense and economical first cost, concrete is easily the thriftiest investment for your main traveled highways, assuring, as it does, low annual cost—the true measure of pavement economy.

SOUND THE ALARM! RUSH THE SANDBAGS!

The sales tax was levied in the mid-thirties to help finance the public schools. It was levied in the midst of the Great Depression. Because of hard times, certain items were exempted from the sales tax when the original law was passed. Since then economic conditions throughout the state have steadily and greatly improved. Yet requests for new exemptions from the sales tax come with each session of the Legislature.

Today there are forty-one exemptions. Each exemption means less money for schools. Who profits by these exemptions? ALL the people—or SOME of the people?

Three exemptions, costing Alabama schools about $2,000,000 a year, were authorized in 1951 — this, when times were never better.

There are two new requests for exemptions before the Legislature today.

SB 128—would exempt municipalities from liability for the collection and payment of sales taxes for the operation of recreational facilities.

When will such requests stop? The answer lies with you — as a patron of the schools and a citizen of Alabama.

What as a citizen and voter do you want to do about these exemptions? Talk to your legislator about them. Ask HIM to act for YOU in the Legislature.

Dry Weather Helping To Increase Number Of Flies

Destroy Breeding Places To Drive Out Houseflies

Auburn, Ala.—In recent weeks houseflies have become a real problem on farms all over the state.

Dry weather and unsanitary conditions around some farms and homes are offering ideal breeding places for this pest. And farmers are reminded that the only way to have no flies is to supply them with no breeding places.

Piles of manure and decaying vegetable material are two of their favorite breeding spots. So put all garbage on the compost pile and cover it with dirt. Spray garbage cans at least once a week and keep rops on them at all times. Every week remove animal and poultry manure and spread it over the fields.

To control flies in poultry houses where hens are confined in cages or where birds cannot get to droppings, apply phosphate, aldrin, dieldrin, or toxaphene over the manure piles each week. In broiler houses the best control is to put in fresh shavings or other litter regularly to keep houses dry.

Every week or so dust hog lots and barns, other than dairy barns, with any recommended cotton poison other than calcium arsenate. Every ten days or two weeks spray dairy barns with lindane as directed on the container.

Also there is a new "fly bait" for dairy barns but there is a warning that floors must be clean and cows must be kept away from the poisonous material for at least six hours. The bait is made by mixing one pint of cheap molasses and enough water to make 10 quarts of liquid. Lindane and TEPP are added to this sweetened water. Now on the market in Alabama, this formula must be used as directed on the container as TEPP is very poisonous to both animals and people.

Perspiration spots on clothes can often be removed by applying smelling salts. Another method is to hold the discolored area over a bottle of ammonia. In both instances, alkaline fumes help bring back color faded by acid in perspiration.

Construction Starts On Howard's New 65 Acre Campus

Construction for Howard College's new campus is underway at the new Edgewood Lake site in Shades Valley section of Birmingham, according to Howard College president, Harwell G. Davis. Breaking of the ground for the new campus was started last week, which involves 65 acres.

It is expected that the preliminary work will take about three months, but it will be about three years before the campus can be moved from its present site in East Lake.

The area being cleared will provide space for the administration building, to include office space and classrooms, and dormitories. The over-all site of the new Howard Campus is made up of 175 acres on Lakeshore Drive, with additional acres being held in reserve for future expansion.

"This is a great day for Howard College and the Baptists of Alabama," President Davis said. "The additional space made available on the new campus will provide for Howard's growing student body and will permit us to better serve the Baptists of our state."

Howard College's Summer Enrollment Gains Ten Per Cent

Howard College Summer Session enrollment is up 10 per cent over last summer, Howard Dean P. P. Burns announced today.

Registration which began Monday, June 8, has reached 543, exclusive of the Evening Division enrollment.

Courses in all departments are being offered during the summer, and all college facilities are available.

Specialist Warns Farmers To Watch For Sick Cattle

At this time of the year farmers often have trouble with cattle allowed to graze areas where crimson clover has been combined.

Clover stubbles in small piles develop a mold or fungus that poisons cattle, says John Parrish, API Extension dairyman.

He advises dairymen to be on the lookout for these symptoms. Animals become nervous and sling their heads. Sores appear on and in the mouth and around the top of the hooves. Udders may become so sore that cows refuse to let the calves nurse. The skin becomes dry and may crack open.

Affected cattle should be moved off the clover fields immediately, Parrish warns. Put them in a shady place with available water, and give them soft feed until they recover.

Howard Works Out New Program For Forestry Students

Howard College has completed a cooperative arrangement with Duke University whereby qualified students [illegible] to specialize in forestry [illegible] their undergraduate [illegible] Howard and their graduate [illegible] Duke. Dean P. P. Burns [illegible] today.

Dean Burns stated that the program, as worked out with Dean C. [illegible] of the Duke Forestry [illegible] permits a student to take three years of general education at Howard, and two years of specialized study in forestry at Duke. At the end of five years, the student would receive a bachelor's degree from Howard and a master's degree from Duke.

In cooperating with Duke University Howard joins a selected group of liberal arts colleges in 18 states who are making forestry training available on the graduate level. Howard is the only college in Alabama participating in the program.

"Duke University welcomes the opportunity to help liberal arts colleges serve their students in this area of specialized interest," Duke President Hollis Edens said of the program. "Students can now prepare for professional forestry training without sacrificing a well-rounded education in the humanities and sciences."

Dean Korstian of the Duke Forestry School emphasizes that students entering the professional part of the program would be outstanding.

Folks and Things ABOUT TOWN

—By Ben

Thanks a lot to Bob Taber for pinch-hitting for us last week. We still don't see how he found the time to do all the chores he was called on to do. However, we had a wonderful time and enjoyed our short vacation very much. Reminds us of a story we heard the other day about vacations. A fellow said the best place to spend your vacation was just inside your income.

A sign in large bold letters on the side of the road between Columbus, Miss., and Tupelo, Miss., stated: "Strong Gin," it was advertising a cotton gin owned by a man whose name was Strong.

Enough about vacations. Let's get back to the bad habit of some of our people around here about starting rumors. One of our good friends and soon to be our neighbor, J. S. Patterson, has been deeply hurt by someone who started the rumor that he was the cause of the residents of Glendale getting notices to connect to the city sewer. The story was carried on the front page of Chilton County News several weeks ago. We have in our possession a letter from the County Health Department that plainly states that Mr. Patterson had nothing to do with the citations. The letter, among other things, states: "The notices issued by the Health Department were a matter of routine and as a part of a regular program conducted by the Health Department to promote better health in Chilton County." Patterson is visiting the residents of Glendale and explaining to them that he had no part in the matter and it is not fair to blame him with something he did not do.

A friend was asked about his business: "It's coming along fine. It was sold on the courthouse steps last Friday, but there were no bidders, so the Sheriff let me keep it. That makes the best month I have had since the depression."

One of the cutest things we have heard in a long time. The other day Fred Clackler wrote his wife, Mary Frances, who is staying here with her mother, and asked her to write him the exact day that their baby would be born so he could start making arrangements to get leave so as to be here on the eventful day. Now if Mary Frances can do that. . . .

We don't know anything about the "House That Jack Built," but we sure have watched the house that Woodrow Wilson has built. He has torn down the cement block building that was on the lot and is getting along nicely on his new building and has done practically all the work at night. Just any night you can drive by his place and see him out with a flashlight or other means of lighting, laying cement blocks. Such determination we have never seen and just wish we had half the spunk that optometrist Wilson has.

We got a couple of cute little boys on either side of us. One is Lanny Jones and the other is Stevie Taber. The other day Lanny and Stevie were in the front yard making conversation when some of the elders walked out. Lanny can't talk too plain, so he called Stevie, "Stebie." Stevie says: "Listen to Lanny, he puts a hump in my name."

What's this we hear about our friend, Mrs. Ben Sessions, going out into the country to buy a young chicken? That's not the story, though. After Mrs. Sessions bought the chicken she placed it in back of the front seat and slammed the car door. Well at about that time the chicken had some ideas of its own, so it decided to go back to the chicken yard to be with its friends. As it would happen the chicken's neck and the car door got to the same place at the same time—bang! And the hero of our story was without a head. That, my friends, is what is known as sticking your neck out.

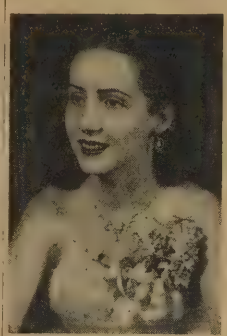
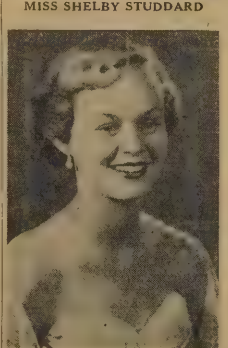
Eighteen Peaches Now Vieing To Be Queen Of Festival



MISS BILLY SUE BURGESS

MISS SHELBY STUDDARD



MISS PATRICIA BROADHEAD

Chilton County Peaches are rolling! Yes, Chilton County Peaches are rolling far and wide as they are being shipped 24 hours a day to hundreds of different sections of the country. And too, Chilton County Peaches are rolling in as they present their names to be entered in the Peach Queen contest and another is entered to swell the list of names to a total of 18, one of which will be chosen and crowned to rule over the Peach Festival on July 8th.

The latest name to be entered in the contest is Miss Sarah Carter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Carter of Maplesville, but it is by no means the last name to be entered as the Peach Queen Committee announces that the closing date for the contest will be July 1.

The latest to be announced as having a sponsor is Miss Juanella Dobbs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Dobbs, will be sponsored by the Clanton Lions Club. Miss Dobbs is an employe of the Goodyear Service Store of Clanton and a graduate of Jemison High School.

Another contestant who had received sponsorship is Miss Billy Sue Burgess, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hoyt B. Burgess, of Clanton Route 1, who will be sponsored by the American Legion of Thorsby. She is also a graduate of Jemison High School, a member of the Beta Club, a member of the Glee Club, an artist for the school paper and year book. Miss Burgess will enter Alabama College at Montevallo.

While these announcements were being made, General Chairman Dick Scott was also making announcements that more bus loads of people from over Alabama will be in attendance. Another bus load of spectators will be arriving from Montgomery, making a total of two and another will be coming from Selma Chamber of Commerce as well as a bus load from Birmingham. Spokesmen from all three cities have reported that they would like time on the program to present gifts to the Peach Queen.

Scott also has announced that about 10 U. S. Marines will be in the parade, both as color guards and as Peach Queen escorts. At the same time he also announced that members of the U. S. Army and the Air Force will also have a part in the huge parade that will begin it's long march from Thorsby and wind it's way down Highway 31 and through the streets of Clanton to it's ultimate end in Clanton's City Park.

The list of bands from around the state is also beginning to swell as word comes in to the Peach Festival offices that more and more will be on hand to march in the parade and to take part in the day's program. Scott reported that he already has assurances of more than one Avondale Mills Band and he has already received word from Montevallo High School that they will have their great band in the parade. He said that he was also anticipating a favorable answer from Maxwell Field that the huge Air Force Band would also be on hand for the day. Scott also said that by the first of the week he should be able to announce that the celebrated bands from Sylacauga and B. B. Comer High Schools would also be on hand.

Money Orders And Cash Taken

Police In Five States Participate In Search For Jemison Robbers

Police officers in several states throughout the southeast today have been alerted to be on the lookout for the professional safe-crackers who Tuesday night opened the safe at the Jemison post office escaping with between three and four thousand dollars worth of postal money orders and then attempted another safe job at the Marbury post office a little over an hour later.

Sheriff Luther Kendrick reported that some time between 11 o'clock and 12 midnight Tuesday the Jemison post office was entered by jimmying two doors to get to the place where the safe was located. Once inside this office, according to Kendrick, the burglars knocked off the combination and used a punch to trip the tumblers. Besides the money orders the robbers also escaped with between $250 and $260 in cash

The robbers, however, apparently were not satisfied as they also entered the stores of three Jemison merchants. One of the places was the store of Cobb Brothers Hardware Store where they escaped with $28.65 in cash that was in a cigar box. The robbers also entered the store of Fred Smith where the only thing reported missing was three cartons of cigarettes. Sam Woodley's place was also entered, but nothing was reported missing.

From here, according to investigating officers, the burglars then fled south going to Marbury, where they attempted to enter the Marbury post office. However, they were foiled in this attempt because just as they got the front door open a huge siren went off and they left that vicinity at a fast pace

Sheriff Kendrick, who was assisted in the investigation by his Chief Deputy, Reuben Cate, a state investigator and a postal inspector, [illegible] that the burglars missed a large sum of money in the Marbury safe as they were awaiting the arrival of Monday morning.

Burglars Enter Baptist Church Tuesday Night

Burglars entered the office of the First Baptist Church in Clanton some time Tuesday night, but as far as could be determined there was nothing missing.

The entry was investigated by Sheriff Luther Kendrick and his deputies, who reported entry to the office was gained by jimmying open the door. The safe was entered merely by opening the door, but there was nothing of value in it.

Mrs. Beatrice Bryan, the church secretary, reported that she came into the office about 8:30 Wednesday morning and said she smelled a peculiar odor. For that reason she believes that the office was entered just before her arrival.

Mrs. Bryan also reported that she had received an anonymous phone call Tuesday afternoon, from a man who said he was from Miami, Fla. Mrs. Bryan said the man had been watching her from across the street. Investigators were unable to say at the time whether or not the phone call had anything to do with the entry into the church office.

Kenneth Sapp At Chilco Packing Co.

The celebrated fruit and vegetable firm of Troy H. Cribb & Sons, Inc., with Kenneth Sapp, sales manager, has for the second time obtained as sales agents for the Chilco Packing Company, which will begin operations June 21st.

The announcement was made yesterday afternoon by John DeRamus, general manager of the Chilco Packing Plant, who said that the Chilco Packing Company will cooperate fully and to the best of their ability with the peach growers in the preparation of their peaches for the market. Mr. DeRamus also urged farmers not to wait until the last minute before they bring their products to the shed.

Mr. Sapp, who operated the Cribb firm's Sanford, Fla., citrus and vegetable branch, is spending his second season in handling Chilco Peaches through the Chilco Packing Company shed.

The Cribb firm, which has year-around offices in Spartanburg, S. C., has been in the South Carolina peach industry every year since 1924.

American Farm Bureau Strong For TVA

Unfounded rumors that the American Farm Bureau Federation has altered its long-time position of firm support for the Tennessee Valley Authority were decisively quelled on April 22, 1953, by a letter which AFBF's assistant legislative director, Matt Triggs, sent to Congressman Robert E. Jones, Jr., of Alabama.

The Congressman had made two speeches on the floor of the House of Representatives in which he had interpreted one sentence in AFBF's 1953 policies as indicating a change in support which Farm Bureau members have always given TVA.

Mr. Triggs made it clear that this is not in any way the intention of the resolution. In fact, he said, "your interpretation that our 1953 resolution placed AFBF on record as favoring the sale of TVA to private concerns came as a distinct shock."

"As you must know," Mr. Triggs continued, "the American Farm Bureau Federation has supported TVA from its inception. At our last annual meeting in Seattle, where the policies referred to by you were agreed upon, there was not even any discussion of a change in Farm Bureau policy with regard to our support of TVA.

"Certainly any change of a major and historic policy of the American Farm Bureau Federation, such as our support for the TVA program, would have been the subject of spirited debate."

"Your address to the House," Mr. Triggs wrote to the Alabama Congressman, discloses that your interpretation is based upon one sentence, which if pulled from its context and considered without relationship to the whole of the resolution, could be the basis for an erroneous interpretation of our policy. The sentence referred to is:

"It should be the policy of the federal government to sell existing federally-owned generating plants and transmission lines to private enterprise or local public institutions on a basis mutually advantageous to the federal government and the people served by such facilities."

The Farm Bureau letter explained that this sentence was incorporated in the resolution "primarily to reflect the policy of our California membership that the State of California should be permited to purchase the Central Valley project from the federal government.

Then Mr. Triggs pointed out that the final clause of the quoted sentence: "On a basis mutually advantageous to the federal government and the people serviced by such facilities"—specified that if the people in an area want no change, no change is proposed.

Carson Boockholdt Plans Water Disposal Area On His Farm

Carson Boockholdt, of the Enterprise Community, has gotten to the planning stage for a big water disposal area on his farm, according to Olin G. Fields, Work Unit Conservationist for Chilton County.

Fields reports that Kudzu will occupy one large draw, and either sericea or behia grass pasture will serve another. Carson, according to Fields, also plans a large acreage of heavy duty perennials such as kudzu and sericea for most of the open land on the farm he has just recently purchased.

Other [illegible] around the county includes a report that Claude Tucker, also of the Enterprise Community, has excellent grazing for his cows with Sudan grass. The Sudan grass was planted early in the spring after crimson clover was turned as a cover crop.

Mr. J. H. Rasco of Jemison is using sericea for his summer pasture along with a small area of dallis grass. For winter grazing he is using fescue and clover, oats and rescue grass. Mr. Roscoe reported that he enjoys grass and cattle farming much more than he does row crops. He also said that the only crops he now has is a garden and three acres of corn.

Mr. Vonnie Blalock reports that he has cut 400 bales of hay off four acres of his place last week, plus grazing the sericea. He states that in order to do all this he uses ample amounts of fertilizer. He applies from 800 to 1,000 pounds of 0-14-10 per acre.

Leo And J. J. Headley Recommend Use Of Sericea

Leo and J. J. Headley of the Mt. Pisgah Community, have the largest commercial herd of beef cattle in the county, according to Olin G. Fields, Work Unit Conservationist for Chilton County.

According to Fields, the Headley's feel that their cheapest and best grazing for their big herd is sericea lespedeza, native grasses with reseeding crimson clover. The Headleys are thinking about planting a large acreage of kudzu to graze in the fall between the time sericea and the native grasses are killed by frost and the crimson clover is large enough to graze, according to Fields.

Vickers Named Official Delegate To WMCE On June 26

Reverend Marvin K. Vickers, pastor of the First Methodist Church of Clanton, has been appointed an official delegate of the World Methodist Convocation on Evangelism June 26 to June 28 in Philadelphia.

The announcement was made by Dr. Joseph H. Edge, associate secretary of the Methodist Church's General Board of Evangelism, which has its atioal headquarters here. He is registrar of the Convocation.

The Philadelphia meeting will mark the opening of the American phase of Methodism's world-wide emphasis on evangelism this year, Dr. Edge said.

"We are selecting delegates from throughout the country to represent every phase of the Church—the ministry, laymen, church school teachers, the Woman's Society of Christian Service, youth fellowships and the Methodist Student Movement," he stated.

More than 5,000 delegates from outside the Philadelphia area will be in attendance, and arrangements are being made to seat 67,000 persons at a mass rally on Sunday, June 28, at Philadelphia's Franklin Field.

At least 1,000 persons will be received into the church at the rally, Dr. Edge said, signaling the first step toward a church-wide goal of 250,000 new members in Methodist evangelistic campaigns next fall.

Bishop W. Angie Smith, Oklahoma City, is general chairman of the Convocation, and Bishop Fred P. Corson, Philadelphia, is vice-chairman.

LEGISLATURE SLEEPS—EDUCATION DECLINES

The Legislature of Alabama, we believe, is making a serious error in its failure thus far to give ear to the problems of a declining educational system.

Some details of this decline are cited in an advertisement published on page 3 of this issue. The ad is paid for by the Alabama Education Association (teachers), but if parents only knew what is happening to the educational opportunity of their children in Alabama they would be not only paying for ads—they would be hammering at the doors of the House and Senate on Goat Hill.

Our children are being jammed together with 40 to 60 children under one teacher. Right here in Montgomery, where conditions are far better than in some counties, we have had to fashion classrooms out of auditoriums and use other makeshift plans. The population curve still rises fast, with the prospect of a flood of new children next year and the next.

What provision is the Legislature making for new schoolrooms?

None!

States bordering us are taking our teachers away from us with far more attractive salary offers. Our new college graduates are spurning Alabama schools for higher salaries in business and in other states.

What is the Legislature doing to provide new revenues?

Nothing!

Worse than that, it appears that new exemptions to the sales tax may be voted, thereby actually lowering available school revenues.

Exemptions already cost the schools an estimated $33,000,000.

The municipalities want to exempt receipts from recreation facilities. This exemption, if broadly interpreted, could mean a very heavy loss to education.

One concern is the apparent failure of State Superintendent Terry to stand up and fight these attempts to riddle the funds of his Education Department. If he has denounced them, we have not heard his voice, or seen it quoted.

It is all very well to talk about "the needs of education" in general terms, but the battle is being fought TODAY in Montgomery and unless some education warriors begin to make their presence felt very soon, the people of Alabama are going to be asking a lot of questions in the next two years. — Montgomery Examiner.

FIN-FAN ITEMS

By— R. L. SCOTT

Hot weather dictates the time of day to try your luck with the finny tribe. Up in the day it's too hot to fish and the fish are pretty quiet anyway, so in the cool of the evening and early morning is the logical time to go after 'em. The Coosa-Tallapoosa Lakes are in beautiful shape and prospects are better than usual. Lake Martin ranges from slightly stained up about Horseshoe Bend to crystal clear down on Kowaliga Creek. Yates and Thurlow are stained but nice catches are being made every day. Lakes Lay, Mitchell and Jordan are clear and just right to fill your stringer.

Entries in the Alabama Power Company Fishing Contest have been pouring in fast and furious during the past week. The contest round-up of weekly reports is one of the best indicators and guides for week end fishing trips, especially, if you are unfamiliar with the lakes. From them you get concrete information on what's being caught, with what and where.

Lake Martin—

Lake Hill Inn, Highway 241 Bridge, near Alexander City, reports: Rick Pearson, Alexander City, fly fished with a popping bug and creeled a nice string of Largemouth Bass. Rick's best catch, a 5-pounder, created much excitement when he became entangled in a sunken tree top. P. D. Culberson, Alexander City, used live minnows below the highway bridge and tied into some king-sized Crappie. The Whopper on the string weighed in at 2 pounds, 4 ounces.

Fred Wilder, Southside Standard Service Station, Dadeville, reports: Harrell Huguley, Jr., LaFayette, fished Blue Creek with an Old Skipper fly and hooked a 6 pound 2 ounce Largemouth Bass among several smaller ones.

Lake Yates—

H. E. Dopson's Store; Red Hill Community, near Martin Dam, reports: W. H. Boggs, 105 Marshal Street, Alexander City, flipped a Jitter Bug into four good spots for as many Largemouth Bass weighing 16 pounds. The largest catch was five pounds, 8 ounces. That means that the other three averaged 3½ pounds each. Nice going Mr. Boggs.

Lake Lay—

Ed Hardiman, Manager, Riverview Fishing Lodge, near Clanton, reports: John McGill and Jack Christy, 7104 South 1st Avenue, Birmingham, caught 15 Smallmouth Bass weighing a total of 23½ pounds. Weed beds in and about river points, using a white popping bug was the combination that paid off.

M. E. O'Neal, Lay Dam Village, caught his string of Smallmouth Bass on a Buck's Fluify Tail. The whopper entry weighed 3 pounds, 12 ounces. L. B. Rainey, Jr., 2503 South 11th Avenue, Birmingham, used an injured minnow on a spinning outfit to bag 4 Smallmouth Bass, the largest weighing 3 pounds, 8 ounces. George W. Day, 1809 North 21st Avenue, Birmingham, hauled in an assorted string of 10 Bass and Crappie with a Heddon Pink Eye. The string weighed 16½ pounds and the best individual catch was a 1 pound 14 ounce Crappie.

J. W. Blalock's Fishing Camp, near Clanton, reports: Preston Garrett, Clanton, fished Paint Creek with an injured minnow and the largest Smallmouth Bass on his string pulled 4 pounds, 5 ounces. Willie Pitts, Bessemer, and Lloyd Teer, Wylam, each caught a 3 pound, 12 ounce Largemouth Bass fly fishing the river banks before sun-up.

Charlie Depoister's Fishing Camp, Blue Springs Creek, near Talladega Springs, reports: R. V. Cantrell, 535 Selma Road, Bessemer, hooked a big fish early in the morning but he got away. That he returned with a black and white popping bug and rascal. It was a 5 pound 9 ounce Largemouth Bass.

H. C. Leigh's Fishing Camp, Waxahatchee Creek, near Shelby, reports: Dan G. Melvin and Jack H. Tate, Adamsville, caught the creel limit of Large and Smallmouth Bass, also 44 Bream. They used fly rods and a home-made black popping bug.

Lake Mitchell—

O. E. Oglesby's Mims Ferry Fishing Camp, near Clanton, reports: S. M. Cargile, Clanton, fished the rocks in the upper reaches of Mitchell Lake with a broken back Fin Tail and on his string of beauties, the largest was a 4 pound, 2½ ounce Smallmouth Bass. L. E. Sherrill, Birmingham, caught 8 nice Smallmouth Bass, the largest weighing 3 pounds even. J. H. Rhodes, Clanton, used a red head top water plug to land a 4 pound, 1 ounce Largemouth Bass. Several other nice Bass were caught about Gandy's Island.

Lake Jordan—

Sears' Boat Dock, Swayback Bridge, near Wetumpka, reports: Ray W. Sanders, Montgomery, used live minnows on Sofkahatchee Creek to bag the creel limit on Crappie.

The Whopper Catcher monthly prize winner of May will be announced next week.

CHIEF ALAPOCO SAYS: Always keep a sharp eye on the youngsters. They have so much fun in the water that some of them are likely to be foolhardy at times.

Recreational Supervisor.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our sincere thanks to all who were so kind to us during the illness and death of our mother and grandmother, Mrs. Emma Nelson. Especially do we thank Bro. Cook and Bro. Atcheson for their most comforting words; the quartet that sang, and those who sent flowers and food. May God's richest blessings abide with each of you always.— The Nelson Family.

STATE SUPERINTENDENT

TEMPERANCE EDUCATION

The State Department of Education has distributed about 12,000 copies of six bulletins prepared under its supervision. Three of these bulletins deal with methods of integrating information concerning alcohol with various high school subjects. One deals with the overall concept of the program as an integral part of education. One bulletin is concerned with building wholesome personalities. One is an adaptation of a scientific study which was made with cats. This bulletin is written on the level of junior and senior high school pupils. These bulletins were distributed to all superintendents and principals in county and city systems.

More than 17,000 sheets of mimeographed material covering approximately fifteen titles were distributed by mail. Twenty-one 16mm motion picture films and five 35mm film strips were in constant circulation during the entire year.

A subcommittee composed of seven members has met four times to study the whole matter of Alcohol Education and suggest further steps. The study was made by means of two questionnaires prepared by the committee. From the 472 replies received the committee made seventeen recommendations. This report is a tentative one and the committee is still pursuing its study. A materials workshop was conducted at Auburn during the first six weeks of summer school. Twelve carefully selected teachers were engaged in writing a teachers' guide which will be used by teachers of all grades. This bulletin will include ways of producing a wholesome learning atmosphere in the classroom; discovering frustrations in children and seeking to help children adjust themselves to the school environment. The bulletin will also contain several suggestive teaching units covering various subject fields. In the absence of a textbook the guide will contain pertinent facts about the effect of alcohol on the body, mind and society as well as selected bibliography which teachers can use.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To the Assistant Editor of the Chilton County News:

Now that the Editor is out of town, it seems a good time to get something in the paper about his wife. Like the shoemaker's wife who goes without shoes, so the editor's wife goes without publicity, but Mrs. Tucker, (Myrtle to most of us) is certainly deserving of the highest praise, for many things, but especially for her work as Superintendent of the Vacation Bible School at the Methodist Church. She has given much of her time and efforts, contributing to the success of the two weeks school. Her Christian spirit is a guiding light to all who come in contact with her and her wonderful personality has made her a favorite with all the children and faculty. Her work in the church, Sunday School, and Bible School, is certainly to be commanded.

Thanks, for letting me say what many would like to say.

"A Methodist Woman."

Clanton, Alabama.

Dear Editor:

Enclosed is a clipping out of The Birmingham News in regard to mufflers on motor vehicles.

Now, why don't we have the same thing here in Clanton? I am one of your daily readers and clerk here in the Willingham Hotel, and so often it is difficult to hear over the telephone on account of cars and trucks making this hill here by the Hotel with those loud mufflers.

If you think it would help any, I would be glad to call on our Mayor, Mr. C. Fenn Jones, and see if he would not take some action with our city officials to stop this nuisance. Thanks,

Yours very truly,
N. E. SAMUEL.

Pittsburgh, Pa. — Among the graduates at the recent high school commencement was Mrs. Mary Renton, mother of three grown children. Mrs. Renton resumed her high school education in 1950.

WOOD, canvas, plastic, and cord webbings in outdoor furniture can be kept clean with warm soapsuds and brisk scrubbing. Always rinse well, and wipe off excess water. Glass and tile table tops need frequent washing with warm suds.

Because foam rubber is a long dryer, it's advisable to cover such pillows with a zippered removable ticking that's quickly and easily launderable in hot soapsuds. This way, the pillow itself will not have to be washed very often.

Soot and dirt should be washed off of house plants to permit the leaves to "breathe." Protect earth in the pot with a piece of round plastic or waxed paper slit at one side and slipped around the stem. Dip leaves with a sudsy cloth, then a rinse cloth. For very delicate foliage, use an atomizer or spray

Crisp Sandwich Filling
(Makes 1¼ cups)

¾ cup sieved avocado
½ cup grated carrot
½ cup finely chopped cabbage
¼ teaspoon grated onion
¾ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon lemon juice

To prepare avocado, cut into halves lengthwise and remove seed and skin. Force fruit through sieve. Add remaining ingredients and mix well.

to apply the soapy solution and rinse water. Let plants dry away from sunshine.

Flexible plastics like draperies, shower curtains, or place mats can be tubbed or sponged with warm soapy water, rinsed and wiped dry. Upholstery and hard-surfaced plastics like furniture or counters can be wiped with a well-suded sponge or cloth, then rinsed and wiped dry.

If washable and color-fast, rugs can be shampooed at home. Apply "dry" suds with a cloth, sponge, or brush. Work on one section at a time, overlapping to avoid rings. Remove soiled suds with a clean rinse cloth and blot all possible moisture with a clean, dry cloth. Work quickly, avoid saturating moisture, and keep the windows open to speed drying.

Clean bird cages at least twice a week; change the paper every day. A transparent plastic bird cage can be washed in soap and water, perches, swing, seed and water cups, and floor trays.

PEACH GROWERS

The peach shed of Chilco Packing Company will begin operations Monday, June 22nd, and we, as their sales agents, extend to you our best wishes for a profitable season.

Within the limits of their capacity, Chilco Packing Company will cooperate with you in every way possible in the preparation of your peaches for market; and we will likewise exert every effort to obtain the highest possible net returns.

In order to serve you best, it is necessary that we have at least a fair approximation of the volume of peaches we will be expected to handle. Not only is there a limit to the packing capacity of the shed, but we must also make arrangements in advance for containers and other supplies, as well as transportation facilities to move them after they are packed. And last, but by no means least, for best prices we must make arrangements in advance for potential customers to take the volume we expect to have. You cannot come in at the last minute with unexpected supplies and expect us to do a first class job of selling, and if such should happen we would be compelled in all fairness to give preference to those who came to us first.

There is a large volume of peaches in Alabama this season and it is going to take experienced and well-organized salesmanship to sell them. There is also the possibility that if you wait until the last minute to make your arrangements the packing shed will not be able to take care of you. For the above reasons we urge you to come in and discuss the deal with us now.

Perspiration spots on clothes can often be removed by applying smelling salts. Another method is to hold the discolored area over a bottle of ammonia. In both instances, alkaline fumes help bring back color faded by acid in perspiration.

SOUND THE ALARM! RUSH THE SANDBAGS!

The sales tax was levied in the mid-thirties to help finance the public schools. It was levied in the midst of the Great Depression. Because of hard times, certain items were exempted from the sales tax when the original law was passed. Since then economic conditions throughout the state have steadily and greatly improved. Yet requests for new exemptions from the sales tax come with each session of the Legislature.

Today there are forty-one exemptions. Each exemption means less money for schools. Who profits by these exemptions? ALL the people—or SOME of the people?

Three exemptions, costing Alabama schools about $2,000,000 a year, were authorized in 1951 — this, when times were never better.

There are two new requests for exemptions before the Legislature today.

SB 128—would exempt municipalities from liability for the collection and payment of sales taxes for the operation of recreational facilities.

When will such requests stop? The answer lies with you — as a patron of the schools and a citizen of Alabama.

What as a citizen and voter do you want to do about these exemptions? Talk to your legislator about them. Ask HIM to act for YOU in the Legislature.

Folks and Things ABOUT TOWN

—By Ben

Guess that electrical storm in Chilton County Sunday night showed folks how dependent we are on electricity. What with the television, radio, and the like "out of order" we understand some families even had to make conversation among themselves for entertainment. Now that's something that hasn't happened in a long time and we imagine was quite difficult. Anyway, things like that make us appreciate the good things of life much more. Bless that old Alabama Power Company.

Two mighty pretty girls in short shorts were dining at the Dixie the other day. Two strangers, of the opposite sex, were dining at a table not too far distant. When the foursome finished their meal it was exactly at the same moment and they sauntered to the paying teller at the same time. The two gentlemen stepped back so that the ladies could go first and the older of the two men was heard to remark: "Remember now, fellow, you're a married man." To which he answered: "Yep. She took my freedom, but thank goodness she didn't take my eyesight."

Driving up to the house of a farmer to deliver his seventh baby the family doctor nearly ran over a duck. "Is that your duck," he asked the farmer. "That ain't no duck," the farmer answered. "That's a stork. His legs have just been worn off making so many trips."

Sen. Lister Hill has won Senate approval of a bill to extend his Hill-Burton Hospital Construction Act to 1957—two years beyond the present expiration date of the Act in 1955. The House will soon vote on the bill. In speaking of the hospital program Hill said: "In Alabama some 52 hospitals, health centers, etc., have been built under the program. It is important that the program be extended at this time, particularly in view of the sharp cut which the Eisenhower Administration has made in the Democratic budget program. Many of the cities and counties in the State have their local share raised and have expected to build their hospitals and other projects within the remaining two years of the Hospital Act."

Dorrough Announces Welfare Recipients

Montgomery, Ala. — State Welfare Commissioner Bill Dorrough says that state welfare aid payments in May totaled $2,909,625.57, with average payments of $29.80 going to 96,629 recipients.

Dorrough said that due to new end , stricter requirements, state welfare aid to dependent children dropped considerably during May. He said one new policy relating to step and other substitute parents caused 239 cases to be closed last month. Dorrough said aid is never given to children with two able-bodied parents and the Welfare Department regards step-parents or other substitute parents the same as an own parent.

Dorrough added that the closures under new policies during May brought the total affected by the new car ownership policy to 195. The latter policy provides that anyone owning a truck or automobile not in business for a profit is not eligible for aid.

Deadline Nears

Twenty-Two Lovely Young Ladies Enter Peach Queen Race

As the list grows long so does the time grow short and the list of girls now entered in the 1953 Peach Queen contest totals 22 of Chilton County's loveliest as the closing date is now only one week from today.

Mrs. Erle Ellis, Peach Queen committee chairman has set the closing date as July 1, and at that time the committee chairman will close the books and start the wheels of fortune rolling that will in only a few short days after that stop over the girl who this year will be crowned the 1953 Peach Queen, receive many gifts from visiting members of Chambers of Commerce from throughout the State of Alabaa, and will culminate her activities with a two-day flying trip to the Capitol of the United States, there to present the assistant to the President, former Governor Sherman Adams, with a basket of Chilton County's finest peaches.

At the same time it has just been announced that the man who will have the privilege of auctioning off the prize baskets of peaches on Chilton County's biggest day, Wednesday, July 8th, will be none other than Robert McCormack, of the Montgomery Stockyards. In a telephone conversation with M. R. Glasscock, county agent, McCormack said that he would consider it an honor to be able to be the auctioneer for the finest peaches in the world.

R. L. Scott, General Chairman, stated that he expected to make the announcement within a few days as to who the main speaker for the big day would be. He also reported that he hopes to announce more bands would be in this year's parade. Reedie Taylor, float chairman, has reported that the bunting and streamers are flying at the city airport hangar as Marvin Marcus and his crew make ready the number of floats that will be in the mile-long parade as it winds it's way from Thorsby down highway 31 to Clanton's City Park. Sheriff Luther Kendrick has also reported that his Safety Committee has everything in readiness. Highway Patrolmen will be on hand to help control traffic and to lead the parade from it's starting point on to the assembly grounds where the King and Queen will be crowned. There has been no announcement as yet as to who will be selected as the King.

The following is a complete list of the girls who have so far entered the Peach Queen contest:

REVIVAL AT FIRST ASSEMBLY

To clean a sewing machine needle, run a strip of fine emery paper back and forth under the presser foot so the needle will penetrate the paper rapidly. This will sharpen and polish the needle so it will work efficiently. Rusty needles can also be polished this way.

Alabama Highway Deaths Increasing

Montgomery, Ala. — With Alabama's June rural highway deaths approaching the 40-mark, and the urban traffic toll no better than last year's, state safety leaders this week renewed their appeal to Alabamians to consider the automobile a weapon of life or death.

The Alabama Safety Council expressed grave concern that speed has killed almost as many persons as all other June accident factors combined. "Why," Council President Hugh Comer pleaded, "Won't Alabamians realize that speeders are killers looking for victims?"

Chairman Earl McGowin of the Alabama Safety Commission joined the Council president in asking city, county and state police for even more rigid enforcement of all traffic laws, and in urging drivers to "use your God-given sense of courtesy and decency on the road, and stop this senseless killing."

Comer pointed out that dangerous driving "isn't always willful," however. Often, he said "it's lack of knowledge or dulled faculties that leads drivers into accidents involving speeding."

For this reason, the Alabama textile industrialist explained, the Council is offering a list of seven items as a "safe speed check list" as one phase of its :Remember 'Bloody June' " traffic safety program.

This program was prompted by Alabama's traffic score during June, 1952, of 90 dead and 3000 hurt in nearly 24,000 street and highway accidents—an all-time high for any month in recent Alabama traffic history).

The seven-point check list, as announced by the Council, follows:

1. Stay within the legal speed limit at all times. "Now that we have a maximum speed law on the statutes, there's no road in Alabama where speed grater than 60 miles an hour is legal," Comer declared.
2. Drive at a speed so you can stop in the assured clear distance ahead. "Even though the speed limit sign says 60, if it's not safe to drive more than 40 or 50, that is the sane driver's limit."
3. Slow down before you get to curves and intersections.
4. At night, drive at a speed which will let you stop within headlight range.
5. Drive with traffice.
6. Where children are playing, be able to stop in a car length or less.
7. When you're tired or inattentive, stop.

Regarding the last item, Comer cited the Army's instructions on how to combat fatigue, which the Council president said "often is the cause of accidents involving autos traveling on the wrong side of the road."

The Army rules: 1. Keep vehicle windows open, and breathe deeply; 2. If drowsiness sets in, stop, get out, and exercise briskly; 3. Drink coffee or other alertness beverage every two hours; 4. When possible, change drivers every two hours; 5. The sure-fire remedy, if these four wail; pull off the road and sleep until fit to continue.

Two Above Parity

Sweet potatoes and hogs were the only two farm products selling above parity on May 15, according to the Alabama Crop Reporting Service.

These Foods Lead

Milk, beef, potatoes and vegetables are heading the plentiful foods list this month.

Polio On Increase Over Alabama

Alabama's infantile paralysis score now stands at 90, compared with only 26 cases reported to the State Health Department by this time last year.

Twenty-two more polio cases were reported in the state last week, 10 of them in Montgomery County. Jefferson and Calhoun each had four, and Madison, Mobile, Perry and Tuscaloosa Counties each had one.

During Past Six Months

Hundreds Of Dollars Pilfered From Clanton Homes, Stores

Sheriff Luther Kendrick has issued a plea to all residents and business men of Chilton County, and especially Clanton, Ala., to be on the lookout for sneak thieves, who in the past six months have riffled several homes, churches and business places in Clanton to the tune of several hundred dollars.

In issuing his warning, the county's chief law enforcement officer said that there had been a decided increase in the number of robberies during the past four to six weeks.

In relating some of the recent entries, Kepdrick said that one Clanton residence had been entered while no one was at home and that over a hundred dollars in cash had been taken. Kendrick also related that another large sum of money had been stolen from one of Clanton's hosteleries by a sneak thief who had entered an unlocked room.

Sheriff Kendrick also related that Clanton churches had been entered several times during the last several months, the last time being last week when the First Baptist Church was entered, but nothing was reported missing at that time. The First Methodist Church has also been entered and a sum of money taken from a drink box.

Sheriff Kendrick has asked for the cooperation of all householders as well as business men in keeping their homes and offices locked when they are not on the premises. Kendrick reported that if a forced entry were to be made he and his deputies would have a better chance of catching the burglar. Kendrick reported that so far no clues have been found that might lead to the identity of the sneak thief.

SOUTH KOREAN FOLLY

Something more than a lack of appreciation for the efforts of the United States has been shown by President Syngman Rhee, and South Koreans in general, in the last few weeks. While most of us can understand the stubbornness of the old man in wanting to have his country reunited, it is hard to understand his lack of appreciation for the sacrifices of over a hundred thousand Americans in restoring the freedom and independence of South Korea.

Instead of threatening to fight on alone, as he did when an armistice neared, Mr. Rhee would have showed more appreciation, and a sense of balance, had he joined with President Dwight D. Eisenhower, and other Allies, in attempting to work out a satisfactory cease-fire.

Not only did Mr. Rhee attempt to sabotage the cease-fire, but he encouraged other South Koreans, including the South Korean National Assembly, to join in the sabotage effort. The height of folly was reached when South Korean girl students rushed U. S. guards at Military Headquarters in Seoul in angry demonstrations against the division of their country. This folly would not have been so distasteful had Korea not been divided for many years before the present war began.

Since the war was not fought over the division of Korea, but over the issue of saving democratic Republic of South Korea and restoring its independence, the attitude of Mr. Rhee left much to be desired. Mr. Rhee sought to influence public opinion to such heights that he would force this government to capture North Korea also for him. It was altogether a sorry performance.

CARS, BURGLARS AND ALARMS

It seems that automobile thieves in the western part of the United States have invented a dvice for breaking trunk and door locks from their moorings. They use steel pliers, with hardened steel jaws to grip the lock. With the pliers, thieves can easily enter automobile trunks and doors.

Police officials in the Eastern States warn that the device may soon appear in their section of the country, and advise motorists to forestall the danger of successful burglaries by installing automatic alarm systems. These systems would be connected with windows and doors, as well as the trunk, and when the thief attempted to enter, a bell would go off.

While this might be a good suggestion, we doubt whether many motorists will take advantage of it. When life reaches the stage where we must all equip our cars with elaborate burglary alarm systems, it has certainly become tedious.

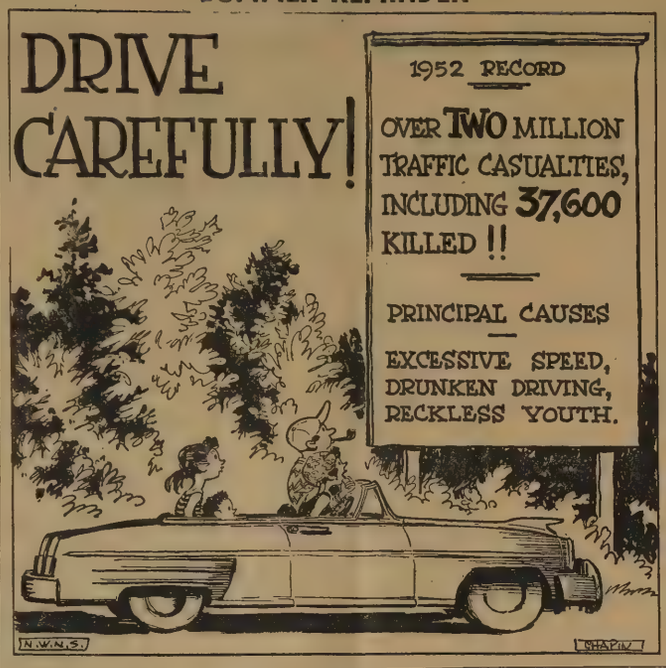
SUMMER REMINDER



Report from Washington

BY

ARMISTEAD SELDEN

Congressman, Sixth District

Despite the protests of a number of Congressmen, including myself, the House of Representatives has approved legislation that will prohibit the Tennessee Valley Authority from moving its administrative offices from Knoxvill and Chattanooga to Muscle Shoals. The great majority of these offices are now located in Knoxville.

The TVA directors had already completed plans to transfer the offices when the House Appropriations Committee decided to tack a rider on to an appropriations bill to prevent the transfer. The House failed to pass an amendment offered by Rep. Andrews of Alabama to strike this rider, and the bill was sent to the Senate last week.

I protested the committee's rider and supported Rep. Andrews' amendment because I was convinced it would be in the best interest of federal government economy and would promote more efficiency in the operation of the TVA to transfer its administrative offices to Muscle Shoals. I reached this conclusion after carefully studying the testimony given before the Appropriations Committee in favor of the transfer.

The original TVA Act of 1933 provides that its administrative offices be located in the Muscle Shoals area. This Act also gives the TVA Board of Directors authority to administer TVA affairs, and this would appear to include the power to transfer its headquarters. It has been the opinion of the members of the TVA Board for nearly 14 years that their chief offices should be located at Muscle Shoals. The moving of these headquarters has been postponed repeatedly, however, because of national emergencies.

Lease Agreement Entered—

In the statement I made to the House on June 17th, I called the members attention to the fact that the TVA Board of Directors had set in motion this year the machinery necessary to bring about the long-contemplated transfer of administrative offices to Muscle Shoals. In March the Board entered into a lease agreement to make a move possible. The agreement provided that a building of the necessary specifications would be constructed by the lessor. The TVA would lease the building for 20 years at an average rental of $264,178 per year. It is my understanding that this figure includes all costs except maintenance. After 20 years, the building would become the property of the U. S. Government without further payment. In addition, the government could buy the building at any time at the base price, less the amount of cost amortized through rent on a four per cent amortization basis.

At the present time the TVA is paying an annual rent of approximately $242,000 for several buildings in Knoxville and one in Chattanooga. These are the offices which the TVA Board is anxious to move to the Muscle Shoals area. Should this move be made, a building valued at more than 2½ million dollars would be owned by the TVA at the end of the 20-year period. If these offices are retained in Knoxville and Chattanooga, the TVA will continue to pay an annual rental only slightly less than the rent provided for under the Muscle Shoals lease agreement. Yet, at the end of a 20-year period, there will be nothing to show for this annual outlay of $242,000.

Besides the money saved, there are other important reasons for recommending transfer of the administrative offices to Muscle Shoals The transfer would bring together under one roof staffs now dispersed in Knoxville and Chattanooga. Communication between staffs would be better and the coordination of work made easier. The Shoals area is well located from the standpoint of TVA's work. There the TVA would be nearer to the capitols of the four states where TVA's principal activities are concentrated—Nashville, Tenn.; Montgomery, Ala.; and Jackson, Miss. By any mode of transportation, Muscle Shoals is closer to Nashville, the capitol of Tennessee, than is Knoxville itself. Muscle Shoals is located at a central point on the Tennessee River. It is 34 air miles closer to the geographical center of the State of Tennessee than Knoxville, and it is 125 air miles closer to the center of the TVA power service area.

With these facts in mind, it is hard to believe that an economy-minded Congress would block this transfer. Yet, it was defeated and the Republican side of the House voted almost to a man against the amendment which would have allowed the move. The fact that Knoxville is at present in a Republican District is generally thought to have been the determining factor in this rather unusual Republican vote. It this were the case, it is regrettable that this question was decided on the basis of political expediency and not on its merits.

Around OUR HOUSE

by Kathryn Tucker Windham

Little boys, especially little four-year-old boys, can ask the most amazing questions. The other day the four-year-old came running into the kitchen to ask,

"Mother, can God talk?"

It wasn't an easy question to answer, but I tried to explain to him that God doesn't talk the same way people do but that if he were very still and quiet he would sometimes hear God talking to his conscience.

He pondered that answer for a little while, and then he said sadly,

"Well, I never will get to hear God talk then because my big sister talks all the time!"

A minor tradegy has befallen the six-year-old: her two front teeth are loose right in the middle of the corn-on-the-cob season, and she can't chomp down on her very favorite food.

Speaking of corn-on-the-cob, the ears will stay fresh and juicy until you're ready to cook them if you slice a small piece off the stalk end of each ear and stand the ears in a pan of shallow water. Leave the husks on, too.

When cooking time arrives, add about half a cup of milk and a little sugar to the water you boil the corn in, and you'll have areally tender, delicious treat.

Iced tea is a favorite beverage around our house these hot June days (the children drink it heavily diluted with lemonade), but every now and then it turns out to be as cloudy as a Summer sky before a thunderstorm instead of being clear and sparkling the way it is supposed to be.

I was puzzling over the possible reasons for this action the other morning when the next door neighbor came in and caught me in the act of putting a pitcher of freshly made tea into the refrigerator to cool.

"Don't do that," she warned, "Don't ever pour hot tea over ice or put it into the refrigerator unless you want it to turn cloudy. Always let tea cool at room temperature."

I should have known she could explain it to me.

The smart mother down the street, the one with the big family, makes the sheets for her baby beds like pillow cases. She says this method makes the sheets stay smooth and straight on the beds, and, best of all, when a quick change is needed all she has to do is flip the mattress over.

She can usually salvage enough material from worn double bed sheets to make her pillow-case sheets.

Sweeping isn't often necessary around our house now that the baby has turned into a human dust mop!

If you like avacados and if you want to try a new salad, here's a suggestion from our good cook neighbor: scoop out the centers of firm fresh tomatoes. Mix the pulp with Avacado which has been mashed and whipped with mayonnaise. Season to taste and use to stuff the crimson tomato cups. Serve on fresh garden lettuce.

Either Hot Or Cold

Keep picnic foods either thoroughly chilled or very hot—never in between. Soft protein foods that are especially subject to rapid, dangerous spoilage give no warning signs in appearance, taste, or odor. Among such foods are stuffed eggs or egg salads, all cooked meats, poultry and fish, soft custards, cream filled pastries or cakes, and cooked salad dressing.

DALE CARNEGIE

MILTON M. DONAHUE, 219 West Walnut Street, Tipp City, Ohio, at an early age was taught by his parents to kneel at the side of his bed at night and pray.

As a youngster about five years old, he began to make visits to an aunt and uncle's home in Springfield, Ohio. While visiting there, he slept with their youngest son Mike who was older than he. At night when saying his prayers Mike would ridicule him—poke fun at him. Many times during their lives, even after reaching manhood, this was still a great joke with Mike.

CARNEGIE

But Mike went into the army. In 1945 just after the Battle of the Bulge his aunt received a letter from him which Milton read. One paragraph ran as follows: "Mom, the other night a strange thing happened. As you know during the major campaigns I have been in I have been scared almost to death. This particular night we were attacked and shelled unmercifully. One large shell hit very close to our shell crater dug-out. The next thing I knew I was on top of the ground, on my knees praying to God. Prayers that I did not think were in me. Mom, I was not praying to be saved from dying or from injury but to be forgiven for the many wrongs I have done. Be sure to tell Irish (meaning Milton) about this and he will know what I mean."

Mike, lacking sentiment, always signed previous letters just "Bye Mom." This letter was signed, "Bye Mom, God bless you and pray for me."

This experience of Mike's makes us all realize that to conquer worry or to accomplish almost anything in life we have to have faith; faith in ourselves, and most of all, faith in a Merciful God.

Valuable Water Supplies Being Lost On Farms

Auburn, Ala. — Alabama farmers get enough water each year to produce crops, but it is often wasted because of poor land management.

Water supplies valuable during dry periods continue to run off sloping, eroded areas, according to Sam Doughty, API Extension soil conservationist. "Drouths cannot be prevented," he says, "but good land and proper management can greatly reduce their crop damage."

He lists these conservation aids to insure crops against drouth injury: (1) Plant each acre of land to crops best suited for it. Do not try to grow row crops on land suited only for sod crops. (2) Increase organic matter in the soil so it will absorb and hold more water. (3) Use crop rotations that include more sod crops to trap rainfall and store it in the soil for future use. (4) Control run-off water that is not absorbed by spreading it onto meadows and pastures or storing it in farm ponds.

To Protect Your Porch Floor Paint With White Lead

Auburn, Ala. — Painting new wooden porch floors after they have already been laid will not keep them from rotting.

For proper preservation, W. T. Cox, API Extension farm buildings specialist, says white lead paste must be painted on the flooring's tongue and groove edges, where decay first begins. If funds are limited, he adds, it is cheaper in the long run to spend money for white lead than to paint only the top of the floors.

"Put the paste on flooring while it is still in the original bundle," advises Cox. "Then during instalation remove the excess with a putty knift and a brush wet with turpentine. If the builder prefers, he can apply white lead on the tongue and groove of each piece of flooring as it is laid."

The specialist points out that yellow pine is far superior to sap pine for floors. However, if sap pine is the only available grade, it should be treated with hot linseed oil and turpentine and allowed to dry before the white lead in applied.

Thick house paints should not be used to finish porch floors, cautions Cox. They are softer and less resistant to abrasion than thin floor enamels which dry to a hard, durable finish.

In repainting old wooden floors, fill the cracks between each strip with white lead paste. Then finish the floors with enamel.

Keep Your Land Working Advises API Soil Specialist

Auburn, Ala. — Land on which winter legume seed and small grains have been harvested should be put into another crop as soon as possible.

This also applies to land which was in winter grazing and has been used for pasture up to now, says D. R. Harbor, API Extension agronomist.

Some of the crops that can be planted at this time to keep the land busy are grain sorghum, sudan grass, cattail millet, and soybeans.

Plant according to farm needs, adds Harbor. If grain is needed, plant grain sorghum. If summer grazing is scarce, plant either sudan grass or cattail millet. Soybeans can be grown for summer grazing or for hay or seed production.

Oak Leaf Blister

Sprays to control oak leaf blister on shade trees must be applied in the winter when trees are dormant. To kill disease spores, use a lime-sulphur spray in the fall before the leaves have fallen or in early spring before the trees bud.

Please Don't Let "Bloody June" Happen Again

Montgomery, Ala. — Alabama's top safety leaders voiced slight encouragement at the traffic picture drawn by Alabamians so far this month in comparison with "Bloody June" of 1952.

Earl McGowin, chairman of the Alabama Safety Commission, said that early June accident statistics show the state running "considerably under—perhaps one-half" the traffic toll recorded during June, 1952.

But Hugh Comer, President of the Alabama Safety Council, while acknowledging the improvement, said, "it is little consolation to the survivors of the dead that we are doing better this June than we did last time." One death is a needless death, he said, and urged even more caution and courtesy by drivers and pedestrains.

McGowin noted preliminary figures supplied by Public Safety Director L. B. Sullivan reportiing a rural death rate of 1.4 daily during the first nine days of June. For the same period last year, the daily rate was 4.0.

Urban traffic scores won't be known possibly for months, McGowin said. But he noted that three persons died in cities during the first nine days of June, 1952, and newspaper reports show at least that many killed thus far this month.

McGowin's commission of state officials and Comer's council of citizens are conducting jointly a statewide safe driving appeal under the slogan: "Remember 'bloody June' —don't let it happen again."

"Bloody June" was June of last year when 90 persons died in Alabama traffic, setting a record for any single month's toll in recent state traffic history. Comer and McGowin attributed this slaughter to "an unusual volume of the usual abandonment which comes with June vacations, travel and warm weather."

Both safety leaders have warned that a "normal" death toll for this June would be between 80 and 85, but that "sane driving and walking can prevent this heathen waste of human life."

Comer said speeding and disregard of traffic signs and signals were the principal violations reported by highway patrolmen who investigated the first eight fatal accidents during June.

Exceeding lawful and safe speeds figured in four of the wrecks, and disregarding the traffic controls, in three. One accident report showed three separate violations by a driver, Comer said.

Highway patrol are under "special alert" instructions this month from Patrol Chief Tom Carlisle to enforce all traffic laws rigidly. McGowin has urged local enforcement agencies to "carry the objective in the cities and towns."

To remove stains on an aluminum pot or pan, cook an acid food, such as tomatoes, in the utensil. Or boil a solution of two tablespoons of vinegar or cream of tartar to one quart of water in the pan.

She traced it to him through an inscription inside the ring which gave his name and the name of his Masonic Lodge.

A Sign Your Life is in DANGER

You're driving on a dark-surfaced highway. The sky becomes overcast. It begins to rain. Traffic bunches up. You strain to see. "Slippery" warnings keep you tense. Then—suddenly you pass onto light-colored concrete. What a relief! Traffic moves out. No "slippery" signs. You know you're on a safer pavement.

Yes, the difference between a sickening swerve and a safe, quick stop often is the pavement. Concrete grips tires—helps you avoid accidents. Wet or dry, its gritty texture provides uniformly high skid resistance.

Remember, no driver expects trouble but if it comes your chances are much better on concrete pavement.

Treat Rescue Grass Seed To Protect The Next Crop

Head smut appeared in rescue grass again this year, and growers and seedsmen are advised to treat their seed before selling them.

"Head smut is transmitted through seed back into the soil," explains Ralph Jones, API Extension seed specialist. "If not treated, diseased seed may endanger the coming crop of rescue grass."

He advises farmers to consult their county agents for recommended control materials.

LOST RING; AD FREE

Des Moines, Iowa — Betty Bingaman, 21, lost her diamond ring, worth $100, on her first day in a new job in a potato-chip factory. She lost it as she was pouring chips onto a conveyer, which led to the packaging unit. Hearing of her misfortune, the Des Moines Tribune ran a Page 1 article about it, reminding any potato-chip buyer who found a diamond ring in the bag that it was not a prize, but belonged to Betty.

CONGRESSIONAL Quiz

Q—Why doesn't the House have filibusters like the Senate?

A—In the Senate, debate is unlimited, unless the cloture rule to halt debate is invoked. House rules on the other hand in most cases provide automatically for some limit on debate. On practically all major bills, the House Rules Committee sets a time limit, and standing rules limit discussion of amendments to five minutes for, five against. Delays in the House can be caused by demands for quorum calls, but these and other tactics are far less effective than possibilities for prolonging debate in the Senate.

Q—Congress seems to have had quite a few deaths recently. How many Members died?

A—The death of Rep. Garrett L. Withers (D Ky.) April 30 was the fourth among House Members since election of the 83rd Congress last November. No Senators died during the Nov. 4-April 30 period. The three other House Members who died were Reps. Eugene E. Cox (D Ga.), Adolph J. Sabath (D Ill.) and Joseph R. Bryson (D S. C.).

Q—Is it true that the President must veto an entire money bill in order to disapprove just one item in it?

A—Yes, but Congress is considering legislation to give the President "item veto" power so the whole bill would not have to be rejected. A House Judiciary Subcommittee is studying five bills to let him veto individual items.

Q—Is atomic energy completely under government control?

A—The government now has a complete monopoly on atomic energy. The Atomic Energy Act forbids private ownership of fissionable material and reactors. All inventions and discoveries in this field must be turned over to the government. If there is to be any development of atomic power by private industry, as has been suggested by some Members of Congress and the Atomic Energy Commission, the Act would have to be modified.

"I BELIEVE," the hit song currently represented on the nation's best-seller lists by Frankie Laine's dynamic Columbia waxing, has won for its authors the Christopher Award for work "representative of the opportunity for those in the creative arts to provide both inspiration and entertainment for the millions" The Christopher Awards, in the words of Father James Keller Director of the Christophers, are made annually for "creative work that reflect the power for good that can be exerted."

The award-winning composers are Ervin Drake, Jimmy Shirl Al Stillman and Irvin Graham. A letter from the mother of a soldier in Korea to Jane Froman of CBS-TV's "USA Canteen" program inspired the writing of "I Believe," the first song introduced on television to become a popular hit.

Red Buttons, CBS-TV's "comedy find" of the year by critics' and viewer acclaim alike, is turning out to be a recording star, too judging by phenomenal sales—400,000 in three weeks—of his Columbia pairing of "Strange Things Are Happening" and "The Ho-Hum Song" . . . Both songs are featured on his TV show, now seen weekly over 90 stations . . . Interesting sidelight to the Buttons hit is that members of his video studio audience were invited to Columbia's recording studio to witness the waxing . . . Their enthusiastic reaction can be heard on the record.

Platinum, found originally in a region of South America was valued at less than silver by the Spanish colonists. They could not profitably separate it from gold nor could they melt or destroy it by fire. Today the price of platinum is about one hundred times that of silver.

The unit of weight of metals is usually determined by their value and availability. The rarer and the more valuable the metal, the smaller the unit of weight. For example, the weight of platinum and gold is generally expressed in ounces, nickel and copper in pounds, and iron and steel in tons.

Ruthenium, one of the precious platinum group metals, must be heated to a temperature of approximately 4530 degrees Fahrenheit before it will melt. This is over seven times the temperature required to melt lead.

KEEP COOL

By Bess Leeke

WE—Lefty, the boss, me, and Gus—was drivin' South for our health, you might say, (Chicago ain't so healthy no more) when we pass this little town down in Kentucky. I just about missed it but Lefty sure didn't. His eyes latched onto that bank building like flies on honey.

"You see that," he yelled, "A bank in this town."

"What about it?" I asked him. To us, banks can't mean nothing but trouble.

"Look at the people goin' in there. The dang place is full of 'em."

"Where'd they get the money to put in banks?" I asked.

"Probably got oil back in the hills." Gus put in.

"Oil in Kentucky?" Lefty sneered, "I ain't never heard of it."

"They got oil ever'where else," Gus said. "What's wrong with Kentucky? Last week I read a book—"

"Okay," Lefty grunted, "Don't get started on them books again."

That just shows you how ideas get started. I had the idea we oughta keep goin'. Lefty had the idea that a bank way out in the middle of nowhere was a push over. Gus don't have ideas.

Lefty's idea was, we go in soon's the guy gets there to open up next morning, get the dough and beat it before anybody knows what happened. We're already in trouble, so I ain't for the idea a bit but like I said Lefty's boss. To make it worse, it's hotter'n blue-blazes. It's so hot it makes you think maybe you ought to start livin' better.

Well, we stick it out—sweatin' all night not to mention gettin' scared to death when some old hound dog takes off after a possum. I ain't never seen of possum. Still don't know what it is, but it's bound to be somethin' terrible the way the dog was takin' on, howlin' and barkin' like he was strugglin' with the devil.

Some old guy with a gun big as he was stopped where we parked the car to sleep but instead was sitting bug-eyed listenin' to that dog.

"You fellers from the city?" he asked.

We nodded.

"Thought so. Ain't nothin' to git skeered of. That's just old Sim after a possum. Sim's my dawg."

"Yeh?" Lefty said. "Ain't you afraid that possum's gonna hurt him?"

"Shucks no. Sim ain't even got him yit."

"You mean he sounds like that when he ain't dying?"

The old man sneered at us "Ain't you never heard a hound dawg before? City folks—huh!"

That blamed dog took on all night so we wa'n't fit for nothin' the next mornin'. But Lefty had to go through with it and boy, it was hotter'n the day before.

'Bout eight-thirty we was waitin' for the bank to open. It looked easy enough. Wa'n't a soul in sight when the guy opened up. Gus stayed in the car and me and Lefty went inside.

It wa'n't much of a bank but the minute I put my foot in the door I thought I'd died and gone straight to heaven. The danged place was air-conditioned. This was one time I was going to enjoy working.

Lefty growled, "Okay, bud, this is a stick-up. Push the dough over the counter and no funny business or you'll get it right between the eyes."

We ain't never shot nobody but that helps 'em hurry it up. That guy's eyes got big as balloons and he started stacking money on the counter. Right then, the door opened and them dern people started pourin' in. Now just think, suppose you was right in the middle of a stick up and suddenly you had more witnesses than you could handle. Yeh, that's what we did, too. We took for the door.

"They robbed the bank!"

Well, brother, that was the end. Five minutes later, the sheriff was draggin' us off to the clink.

"You ought to know better'n try to stick up that bank," the sheriff told us. "It's the only place for fifteen miles that's got air-conditioning.

SUNDAY'S SERMON

Paul's Joy in Christ.
Lesson for June 28: Philippians 1: 2-27e.
Golden Text: Philippians 4: 7.

Paul, writing to the Philippians, declares that the sufferings he had endured had worked out for the progress of the gospel. At the time he wrote, the gospel had made great progress in the Roman world. And as Paul thought of all the trials through which he had come, he recognized that those trials had rather advanced his work than they had hindered it.

So let us not give way to discouragement when obstacles seem to block our service today. Let them stir us to greater effort in doing good. Paul deplores strife among Christians. It may be a serious difficulty, but it can be met and overcome by Christian love.

In his own life, Paul was in a strait between two desires. He would like to depart and be with Christ—to receive the crown of righteousness which the Lord had laid up for him. But, on the other hand, he desired to be of further service to his Lord on earth. And he was willing and ready to remain to speed the further progress and joy of the gospel.

So may we find joy in serving Christ as a blessed privilege, and give ourselves freely to the spread of the truth

Scanning the News

AS THIS is being written the world capitals are reporting that a truce in Korea is but a matter of hours. The world is anxious that this bloody contest that has already cost 2,300,000 casualties and billions of dollars be terminated.

This truce, if it becomes a reality, is going to cause an explosion in Washington. A number of congressmen are already taking another look at legislation, especially tax legislation, and are likely to push for immediate reductions although such a move is opposed by the Treasury Department and, possibly, the President.

Four Republicans on the influential Ways and Means Committee of the House are already insisting that a saving of five billion dollars could be passed on to the people if Korean hostilities end.

One member of the committee said: "In view of the excellent prospects for a truce in Korea I see no sense whatever in continuing these hearings. We ought to drop them and end all talk of extending the excess-profits tax."

This is just a foretaste of what a truce in Korea may bring in the congress of the United States.

Another problem that is facing congress and holds a number of pitfalls and possible danger for the Republican party is what to do with the huge crop surpluses owned by the government.

At the present time the government holds 29 commodities in its inventory. These are valued at $1,705,526,000. Three-quarters of the amount is in corn and wheat stored in elevators and warehouses in various parts of the country.

As these surpluses continue to accumulate the need of a solution to the problem becomes more pressing. Whatever road the Republican administration decides to follow—and decide it must—holds many dangers, especially in the election of next year.

These seem to be the only choices available to the Eisenhower administration and congress at the moment:

1. Support prices while limiting production by federal edit.

2. Support prices without limiting production, which might mean more and more government owned stocks.

3. Let prices fall and farm commodities seek their natural price level under supply and demand.

4. Come up with [illegible] program with [illegible] these certainly are [illegible] selections.

MODERN HEALTH

BY DR. MARSHAL L. WARE
Chiropractor

High Blood Pressure

The blood pressure of the human body is dependent on two conditions—the strength of the heart beat and the resistance offered by the arteries to the flow of blood. The pressure has a normal variation; a higher pressure always following exercise, emotion, and the taking of stimulants and food. This rise in pressure is brought about by contractions of tiny muscle fibers in the walls of the arteries. The action of these muscle fibers gives elasticity to the artery wall, and when they are contracted the resistance to the flow of blood is increased and blood pressure is higher.

The increased pressure due to the four conditions mentioned is temporary and occurs in all healthy bodies. Permanent high blood pressure is unhealthy, and if not corrected, will lead to trouble.

When the resistance to the flow of blood is great the heart must work harder to maintain circulation. If this resistance is permanent the heart muscle is overworked. Nearly all cases are due to failure of the kidneys to eliminate waste materials from the blood stream. These waste materials produce harmful effects upon the artery walls in three ways: (1) Minute particles are deposited on the vessel walls making them hard and inelastic. (2) The vessel walls are injured by the foreign materials which causes a growth of the harder tissues in the walls and also renders them hard and inelastic. (3) The delicate nerve endings in the artery wall are irritated and produce a contraction in the muscle fibers so that the walls become tense and contracted. In all three of these conditions the cause lies in failure of the kidneys to eliminate the waste materials from the blood stream.

The kidneys are supplied with nerve force through nerves arising from the spinal cord, and it is because these nerves are impinged and cannot convey the nerve force properly that the kidneys fail to do their work.

High blood pressure can be readily brought down by Chiropractor adjustments, and the lowered pressure relieves the heart of its overburden, and so prolongs life.

To Get Most From Meats Cook With A Moderate Heat

Moderate heat cooks meat evenly, makes it tender, and keeps cooking losses at a minimum, according to Mary Hulsey, API Extension nutritionist.

"In this way," says the specialist, "there is more meat left to serve for each pound you buy. Although browning brings out rich flavor, it may also increase cooking losses."

To get the most food value and flavor, don't overcook meat, she adds. Cook stuffed roasts and braised or stewed cuts until they are tender when speared with a fork. Be sure to cook pork well done.

Thorough cooking will destroy the trichina worm if it is present in the meat.

Steel gas transmission main will be placed as follows: In general, in cuts, place gas main approximately five (5) feet from center line of ditch, toward center line of highway. On fills place gas main beyond toe of fills. If during construction, conditions develop which make it impractical to adhere to the above referred to lateral distances, adjustments may be made with the County Engineer's approval.

3. Gas main shall be installed so as to have a minimum of thirty (30) inch cover when constructed on the shoulders of the highway and a minimum of twenty-four (24) inch cover when placed beyond the shoulders of cuts and toes of fills. In crossing under paved highways the pipe shall be a minimum of thirty-six (36) inches below the finished pavement of the center line of the highway, and shall be installed by boring, driving or jacking. Cutting of the pavement to install the gas pipes shall not be permitted, except where local conditions preclude the possibility of boring, driving or jacking.

4. The pipe lines are to be placed in the trenches and backfilled as soon as possible. Where pipe lines are laid on the shoulders the trenches shall be back filled in four (4) in. layers and thoroughly tamped until the backfill in the trench is firm and fully capable of sustaining traffic. Under no circumstances shall the contractor cut, blade off or otherwise remove highway shoulder material for use in backfilling pipe trenches or for any other purposes. Where driveways, side drain pipe, widened pavement or intersections are encountered the trench shall be backfilled as set out above and all surfacing and base course material that is disturbed shall be restored in a manner satisfactory to the Chilton County Highway Department. Gas mains constructed beyond the cut limits of cuts and toe of fills may be backfilled by placing the trench excavation in the trench with a bulldozer or motor-grader to the original ground level. This backfill material shall be immediatey, thoroughy, rolled with the back wheels of a motor grader or a loaded truck. The remainder of trench excavation is to be then placed in the trench and rolled as above set out. Such trenches shall be left with the backfill material slightly and neatly crowned. During the placing of gas lines along or across the highway the existing drainage facilities must be kept open at all times. In the event it becomes necessary to cut the pavement, due to local conditions, to install gas lines, only one-half of the road shall be cut at a time and pipe laid and backfilled to the center line of pavement. When this has been completed the other half of the pavement may be cut and pipe installed and backfilled. Backfilling shall be in accordance with requirements for tamping backfill in lines built on shoulders. After such lines have been properly backfilled the base course and pavement shall be replaced in forty-eight (48) hours.

5. During the construction covered by this permit the contractor shall not store any material or equipment on the shoulder or the pavement of the highway. The pavement shall be kept clean of mud or excavation wasted from trucks or other equipment. Upon completion of the work all excess material shall be removed and the right-of-way restored as nearly as possible to its original condition.

6. The Contractor shall provide and maintain adequate and suitable signs, flags, flagmen and barricades as are necessary to properly warn and protect the traveling public, and shall hold harmless Chilton County and its Highway Department from any claims of whatsoever nature arising from his operations.
